Senate Unit Boosts D. C. Supply Bill $1,405,624

Keeps Expenditures Within Revenue To Avert Rise In Real Estate Tax

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The Senate subcommittee on District appropriations yesterday added $1,405,624 to the House version of the District supply bill to bring the total to $49,697,341, but kept authorized 1941 expenditures within anticipated revenue in order to avert a threatened rise in the real estate tax.

Chairman John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, pointed out that despite the increase in appropriations the total of the bill is close to the budget bureau estimates.

Both he and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan estimated that the Commissioners will not need to raise the real estate tax above the present $1.75 although the appropriations anticipate the October collections of the local income tax.

$100,000 More for Relief

The Senate subcommittee was particularly generous in adding to welfare and health funds, making provision for the operation of the food stamp plan, the distribution of relief milk, and adding $100,000 to the unemployment relief appropriation.

Major changes made in the House bill by the Senate subcommittee are:

Twenty-five policemen added.

Appropriation for education of handicapped children raised from $15,000 to $22,400 and transferred from welfare department to schools.

Abbott vocational school site changed from Thirteenth and Upshur streets to Brentwood Park.

Jurisdiction of the city's recreational facilities was returned to the Commissioners and the Board of Education.

Ban on further free instruction of nonresident pupils eliminated.

$308,350 for Schools

$308,350 added for purchase of three sites and drafting of plans for three consolidated elementary schools to replace nine obsolete buildings.

Budget estimate of $250,000 for water main and $20,000 for water supply survey, disallowed by the House, included.

Old age and needy blind pension appropriations increased.

Budget estimate of $75,000 for purchase of site for Northwest incinerator adopted.

Two foster homes for children eliminated, and construction of new Children's Receiving Home authorized.

The subcommittee's recommendations will be submitted to the full Senate Appropriations Committee at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and Sena-

Bandit Hides In Rooming House, Robs Collector

A bandit yesterday secreted himself in a rooming house at 1914 Pennsylvania avenue northwest to rob a rent collector of $107.

The collector, J. Ernest Burleson, 26, of Arlington, Va., employed by the H. G. Smithy Co., went to the house about 3:15 p. m. and after receiving $100 from the tenant, Mrs. Mildred Lacey, was called to the third floor, apparently by a roomer, to help move a box.

Burleson said he went to a passageway leading to the roof to help, at which time the man threatened him with a revolver and warned him to make no outcry.

Washington's Taxi Drivers May Have to Pay to Talk

"IT'S A LOT OF BALONEY," said Cab Driver Mendell Kelley about the threatened gag law

Washington's cab drivers—famed for their readiness to talk on any subject at the turn of a wheel—are threatened with a gag law.

The idea of a nontalking cab driver may seem fantastic, like a nonsaluting, nonheiling Nazi, but nevertheless it is being seriously entertained.

In fact, the matter is about to be brought up in court, it was revealed last night by Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas. The issue will be this:

Must a cab driver have a "guide's license" in order to point out and discourse on the glories of Washington?

If the "test case" goes against the cab drivers, an old law will be revoked. Effective May 25 the hackers will be forced to have $10 guide licenses, as well as regular character licenses, if they want to describe the sights of the National Capital and, as is their practice, toss in a few observations on national political prospects and international affairs.

The Post conducted an informal poll among the hackers last night, and found a unanimous—and emphatic—sentiment against what they regarded as unwonted regimentation.

One of them quoted the Bill of Rights, with its free speech clause.

"What they're trying to do isn't Constitutional, is it?" he asked. "What do you think Jefferson would say if some brass hat told me I couldn't pass the time of day with a good tipper?"

"Besides," he added, "it ain't fair," and he went on to tell how a cab driver already has to pay $25 for his license plate, $3 for his three-year driver's license, and $5 for his character license.

Mendell Kelly, Yellow Cab driver, of 4632 Fourth street northwest, expressed the hope that the guide licenses would be required only for hackers who do only sight-seeing business.

"But if it goes for the regular cabs, too," he said, "I think it's a lot of baloney."

Miss Boardman Wins Homage Of Red Cross

Retiring National Head Of Volunteer Service Lauded by Speakers

The most largely attended convention in the history of the American Red Cross ended yesterday in a deluge of tributes to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, retiring national director of volunteer special services.

Tears dimmed the eyes of many of the 400 women who packed the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel to see and hear Miss Boardman preside for the last time over a national volunteer service meeting.

"She is the outstanding symbol of the American Red Cross," Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Miss Boardman's successor as director of more than a quarter million volunteers throughout the country, said of the stately woman who has served the Red Cross 40 years.

"Effective, unselfish and an inspiration and encouragement to Red Cross workers" was the tribute applied to Miss Boardman's volunteer service in a resolution unanimously adopted earlier in the day at the convention's closing general session.

"There isn't anyone who can take her place," Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, told the assembly in Memorial Continental Hall as he accepted from Miss Boardman his State's honor roll flag.

"Even her 40 years of service is insignificant in comparison with the boundless affection in which she is held by the people of this country. If the worst should come, we will

CAA Shift Voted Down By House

Tally Is 232 to 153; Senate Committee Hearings Today

(House Roll Call, Page 7.)

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Fate of President Roosevelt's plan to transfer the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department lay in the hands of the Senate last night following House disapproval of the proposal by a vote of 232 to 153.

Action of the House in rebuffing the President was taken by a group of 77 Democrats who joined 153 Republicans and two Progressives. In favor of the reorganization plan were 151 Democrats, 1 Farmer-Laborite, 1 American Laborite. Not a single Republican voted for the proposal.

Soon after the House made its decision, the Senate committee on reorganization voted to open two-day hearings this morning and to reach a conclusion not later than 4 p. m. tomorrow afternoon. To invalidate the President's order, the Senate as well as the House must pass a disapproving resolution.

However, Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, sponsor of the antireorganization resolution in the Senate, indicated late yesterday that he did not intend to wait for completion of the hearings, but would move to discharge the committee today.

If McCarran succeeds in this stratagem—and he said he had "plenty of votes to spare"—the reorganization question would be

One man was shot to death and the shack of another was burned yesterday in a feud over "property rights" along "squatters' row," a strip of land owned by the Federal Government and lying between the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, and the Potomac River above Key Bridge.

James Joseph Walsh, 50, unemployed steamfitter, was killed with a load of buckshot at 1:45 p. m. yesterday when, as a delegate from one of the feuding factions, he went to the shack of a squatter to enforce an ultimatum to get off the land.

The squatter, Edward E. Greene, 55, whose shack is opposite the 4500 block of Canal road northwest, admitted firing the fatal shot, police said, with a battered and rusty 20-gauge double-barreled shotgun.

Greene and two witnesses to the slaying, Arthur William Daly, 34, of 1411 Thirty-sixth street northwest, a plumber, and Charles Kinlaw, 41, of 817 Fifth street northwest, a carpenter, were held without charge at the Seventh Precinct Station.

Greene, who surrendered passively to Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Creech, told police that Walsh had called on him last Friday and served him with an ultimatum to get off the land within a week "or else."

When Walsh called yesterday a shack 200 yards up river was burning and Greene told police he thought Walsh meant to set fire to his.

"I told Walsh," Greene explained to the police, "not to put a foot on my property. Walsh came down the bank from the railroad tracks and he reached into his pocket. I thought he had a gun so I ran into the house and got mine."

Roosevelt Draft Seen By Wheeler

Montana Senator Says Nomination Is Sure; Predicts Rejection, However

By Robert C. Albright,
Post Staff Writer

A forecast that President Roosevelt "undoubtedly will be drafted" for a third term nomination yesterday came from one of the principal Democratic Presidential contenders—Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana.

Wheeler predicted the President would reject the nomination. The Montana Democratic liberal, a candidate only if the President does not run, has been invited to the White House Monday to discuss legislation.

Other Democratic Senators and party leaders expressed belief that the President's sweeping primary successes have virtually laid his nomination on the White House line, and he must decline very firmly to avoid the draft.

Garner Reported Agreed

Vice President Garner, who opposed him in three State primaries, was reported to share this view.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the President will be drafted, unless he definitely refuses to run," said Wheeler. "He may wait until he is actually nominated to decline but I never have believed he would run.

"He already has been accorded a high place in history, and I do not see how the next four years could make it more secure. They are going to be tough years for any President."

Officially, Wheeler has been called to the White House to discuss the communications problem, and if other subjects figure he said they would be incidental. The Montana Senator reiterated his belief that the President could turn thumbs down on any proposed nominee not of his choosing, and, within a wide range, name the next nominee.

Party Leaders Call

On the heels of Tuesday's sweeping primary victories, the draft movement was literally carried to the door of the White House as Georgia and North Carolina party leaders called to pledge their State delegation support. An Iowa delegation urged the President to back a Wallace "favorite son" delegation from that State.

Disregarding the Roosevelt "draft" strides, 14 Republican State chairmen meanwhile gathered here for a round of organization conferences with Republican National Committee Chairman John Hamilton. To a man they expressed confidence of a Republican victory in the fall.

While the G.O.P. leaders banned candidates, platform, and party policy from their formal conference, Edwin F. Jaeckle, Republican State

Observe Safety Rules, ICC Orders Private Truckers

Federal regulation was extended yesterday to privately owned trucks in an Interstate Commerce Commission order requiring compliance with safety rules now applicable only motor carriers operating for hire. The order will go into effect August 1.

It affects only trucks moving across State lines or engaging in hauls which form part of an interstate movement. Several thousand trucks moving between the District and Maryland and Virginia will be required to comply.

Drivers cannot work more than 10 hours in 24 without 8 hours rest, nor more than 60 hours per week. the order removes them from the hour provisions of the Wage-Hour Act whereby they receive time and a half for overtime in excess of 42 hours per week. Certain exemptions are provided for farm truck operators and salesmen drivers.

Paulette's Father Sues for Support

Los Angeles, May 8 (AP).—Joseph R. Levee brought suit today to compel his daughter, Film Actress Paulette Goddard, to pay him $150 a week lest "she and Charles Chaplin depart for the South Sea Islands without providing for my support."

Levee, who lives in Rochester, N. Y., said his daughter, "Marion Goddard Levee," already is paying him $75 a week.

Hold Shaken, Chamberlain Hears Cry for New Cabinet; U. S. Denies Offer to Mediate

White House Calls Story of Peace Effort Through Duce 'Erroneous'

The White House last night flatly denied a story originating in Rome to the effect that President Roosevelt had submitted to Premier Mussolini a mediation or peace plan, and that Mussolini had rejected it.

The story, copyrighted by the New York Times, said the President's proposal was submitted in a letter which United States Ambassador William Phillips delivered to the Italian leader on May 1. The communication was said to have expressed the President's desire to do everything in his power to end the war, which he was said to feel was gradually spreading and might, if unchecked, become general.

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have told Mussolini in the letter that his views would have the support of the Pope, and to have asked whether the premier would be willing to exchange views on a basis for negotiations. Mussolini was reported to have replied to Phillips that, while he appreciated the President's step, he could see no basis for negotiation at that time.

Visits Recalled

Upon being apprised of the story here, the President authorized issuance by the White House of the following statement:

"The report is completely erroneous. It has no basis in fact."

Unofficial Washington's interpretation of the Rome story was that it probably was put out in an effort to discount in advance or lessen the effect of the address which President Roosevelt is planning to make tomorrow night to representatives of all the American nations here for the Eighth American Scientific Congress.

The address has been looked forward to with great interest in view of this country's intense concern over warlike developments in the Mediterranean.

Mr. Roosevelt canceled his regular Tuesday press conference to work on the speech, and he has been in frequent conference with Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Welles and Assistant Secretary Berle. In all diplomatic and official circles the expectation was general that the address would prove to be of major importance.

Denial Prompt

The Rome story was hung on the fact that Ambassador Phillips did visit Premier Mussolini, by prearrangement, on May 1, and on the following day had a talk with Italian Foreign Minister Ciano. Prince Ascanio Colonna, Italian Ambassador here, at the same time asked for and was granted an interview with the President, at which he was said

Allies Seek to Buy Yachts Corsair And Mayflower

New York, May 8 (INS).—Two of the most famous yachts in the United States—J. P. Morgan's Corsair and the former Presidential yacht Mayflower—were prepared tonight to join the large fleet of American pleasure craft recently sold to British and Canadian owners in a wartime spurt of such sales.

At Morgan's office here, it was confirmed that application had been made to the U. S. Maritime Commission for permission to sell his 343-foot $2,000,000 luxury yacht to Camper & Nicholsons, Ltd., British shipowners, but a spokesman declared it was not being sold for use as a war vessel.

Meanwhile, in Wilmington, Del., William Broadfoot, coowner of the 320-foot Mayflower now tied up there, announced that he will soon ask the Maritime Commission for permission to accept the best of several purchase offers he has received from Canada. The Mayflower served as a Presidential yacht from 1902 to 1929 when she was given up by President Hoover as a needless luxury.

Yugoslav Military Mission Reported Sent to Moscow

South Slavs Said to Be Turning To Russia for Protection; Allied Offer Of Troops and Planes Is Denied

By Robert B. Parker,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest (Thursday), May 9.—It was reported authoritatively early today that a Yugoslav military mission headed by Gen. Vojin Maximovic, inspector of the national defense, will leave Belgrade shortly for Moscow to hold military talks with Soviet Russian officials.

Authoritative sources in Belgrade made the disclosure shortly after it was reported in diplomatic quarters that Britain and France were offering Yugoslavs the assistance of troops, air forces and naval forces and a guarantee of Yugoslav independence and territorial integrity to seal a Balkan alliance against German or Italian aggression in southeastern Europe.

An offer of military aid reportedly has been made also to Hungary and Bulgaria by the Allies.

However, these two countries are said to have been reluctant to accept promises which might compromise their neutrality in German or Italian eyes.

In recent weeks both Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, Slavic nations, have been showing an inclination to lean toward the big Slav nation, Russia, for support, rather than to the western powers.

The belief was expressed in quarters close to the Yugoslav government that a Yugoslav-Soviet military alliance might result from the military mission's journey to Moscow.

Only yesterday it was reported that economic negotiations between Yugoslavia and Soviet Russia in Moscow were turning to "political" questions.

[The New York Times reported from Belgrade that a "political mission with military advisers" is expected to go to Moscow. The Times said, however, that "Berlin reports" of an Allied guarantee offer to Yugoslavia had been officially denied. Nevertheless, it

Dutch View Army Moves As Defense Test

Foreign Countries Should Not Guess At Aims, Paper Says

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam, May 8.—Influential Netherlands commentators advanced the suggestion tonight that the elaborate precautionary steps taken by the army and navy within the last 24 hours was a move by the high command to test the nation's defenses.

These were coupled with the declaration of the newspaper Telegraaf that although the international situation was dangerous the sensation caused by the government's measures was "not justified."

The Dutch army at present, the newspaper pointed out, is more fully mobilized than at any time in history and it is only logical that the authorities should make a test of their readiness.

"There is no reason for disquiet," Telegraaf continued. "Foreign countries should stop guessing against whom our measures are intended.

"We ourselves want the certainty that our military apparatus corresponds to the demand of the military authorities."

There were no further measures announced since last night when a partial "blackout" of communications was enforced after all leaves were cancelled.

Outgoing telephone calls were suspended again tonight as they were last night, from 10 o'clock to 8 a. m.

Germans Call Up Reserves, Some Past 50

Labor Shortage Felt; Ready for Allied Blow Anywhere, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 8.—Official German quarters, in the face of general European anxiety, tonight assured all inquirers that Germany is prepared to strike decisively wherever and whenever her enemies aim a blow.

"We reveal no secret," authorized sources said, "when we repeat that Germany is prepared on all fronts."

Asked whether this meant the Netherlands frontier also, they replied: "Obviously."

"Chamberlain twice recently has intimated England is determined to widen the area of combat," these sources added. "But he has not said where except that he broadly hinted at the Mediterranean

"That may be a blind, however, for operations elesewhere. Spain, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland—all have been mentioned by the world's press. We won't be caught unawares anywhere."

Hand in hand with these verbal assurances went wholesale summonses to the colors.

All ages seem involved. Cases of reservists over 50 years of age have been noticed in recent days. All walks of life appear to be included so that there is a general lack of manpower except in war industry, with its many ramifications.

In the actual fighting, the high command reported that German airmen had successfully raided marching columns of Allied troops near Narvik, far-north Norwegian ore port where the Allies are besieging a German force. One English pursuit plane was reported shot down.

Air Raid Precaution

Nazis Captured U. S. Planes, Norwegian Aviator Reports

By the Associated Press

Ostersund, Sweden, May 8.—German fliers systematically "hunted Norwegian planes like rabbits" and captured 24 new undamaged United States-built Curtiss pursuit ships at one field during the conquest of Norway, a 23-year-old Norwegian flying lieutenant asserted today.

"The Nazis drove British fighting planes out of Norway in a week," he said, "destroying 20 grounded planes in a single attack."

"I was stationed at our military air field just outside Oslo when the war started," he said. "We had just received 24 Curtiss Hawks and 75 pursuit planes from the United States, and eight of them were ready for flight, eight others were nearly ready, and the remaining eight were partly assembled.

"All the Curtiss planes were standing on the field when we received news of the German attack. Before one could be taken aloft, the German fliers appeared, bombing the field and factory but carefully avoiding hitting the Curtiss ships until their ground forces managed to capture all the planes undamaged."

The young lieutenant said he escaped from the field and joined a small Norwegian fighting squadron of 18 planes in the mountains north of Oslo, operating from frozen lakes about 3,000 to 4,000 feet above sea level.

"But the Germans systematically combed the mountains for our hiding places, then brought bombers to attack," he related.

"The British landed 20 of their fighters on a frozen lake west of Dombas, in the mountains, but the Germans almost immediately found their hiding place, bombed it and destroyed the planes."

Nation 'in Jeopardy'

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 8. — Neville Chamberlain's government, by the narrow margin of 81 votes, tonight beat off for the moment the thunder of criticism which in two days of debate had threatened his ministry for its surrender in central and southern Norway.

The government survived by a 281 to 200 vote of confidence at conclusion of First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill's calm, firm, almost deprecatory speech.

The Conservative position was clouded, however, by the 130 absentees and 4 abstaining, who, with those voting in opposition, make a bajority of the 615 members.

Moreover, 40 former government supporters voted with the opposition.

Some observers believed the 71-year-old prime minister, chastened by the unexpectedly large opposition vote, might follow the example of the former premier of France, Edouard Daladier, and resign.

Shouts of "Go! Resign!"

The opposition took the vote as a victory rather than as a defeat. Jubilantly they sang, "Rule Britannia," and shouted "Go! Resign!" as Chamberlain left the House.

Should the man who led Britain to Munich and then to war to destroy "Hitlerism," actually resign, his most likely successor would be Churchill or Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax, possibly at the head of a government of all parties.

But the political situation was in a great state of uncertainty.

One possibility, however, was that Chamberlain would now attempt to form a National government, inviting Labor and Liberals to take portfolios.

The Labor Party convention Monday may decide to reverse its decision not to participate in the government.

It was evident the opposition expects Chamberlain at least to reconstruct his cabinet to satisfy their scornful condemnations of "muddling."

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister, Oliver Stanley, secretary for war, and Leslie Burgin, supply minister, were members mentioned as likely to go.

The Thursday morning press was unanimous in predicting changes in the government, and the Daily Mail, Daily Herald and News-Chronicle demanded a new ministry.

The Daily Mail recommended David Lloyd George, 79, World War prime minister, to succeed Chamberlain, with Churchill in control of strategy.

Even the conservative Times of London, said "There can be no question of the strength of the demand for a ministry differently constituted."

A day of drama and excitement was capped when Churchill, a Tory "rebel" who fired many a barb at Chamberlain in the days of appeasement, rose to make the closing speech for the government.

YOUNG LOVE AND THE 37 MM. GUN

A young officer of the AEF who happened to be an expert on the 37 mm. airplane gun fell hard for a French girl. It was definitely a mistake, because she wasn't as nice as she might have been. He became rather unfit for duty.

Harlan Miller

What's more, the American Air Corps in France needed the young officer and the 37 mm. gun worse than he needed this particular romance. So the lieutenant's superior officer grimly ordered him court-martialed.

* * * *

More lenient officers prevailed, however, and he was merely confined to his quarters a week, which was good for him . . . Wherever he is today—that was 22 years ago—he must wonder why there aren't 37 mm. guns—young cannons—like the one he had ready in May, 1918, on American planes now.

* * * *

That's putting it mildly. He must be seeing red, and wanting to kick some of the blankety-blank lead out of the blankety-blank pants of the blankety-blank lotus-eaters who arm our pilots with machine guns that are to a 37 mm. gun as a $6 caliber .22 rifle is to an Army Springfield.

"—the hybrid lace & chromium corps"

He recovered from that romance, and he was a tough, virile guy, as I remember him . . . Many like him are belly-aching about other branches of the American Army far more backward than our rather alert air corps. Is the Army ready to fish or cut bait? Senator Lodge and Chandler, who have a great deal to do with military appropriations and military affairs (but who are not my sources for this information) are genuinely concerned about the condition of our Army.

* * * *

For example, it has taken three years to organize and equip one streamlined mechanized division, while Hitler has perhaps a dozen. This division is now strangled in an illicit mesalliance with three non-streamlined divisions in the Fifth Army Corps, like Superman shackled in an old soldiers' home.

* * * *

The streamlined division has only 11,000 men to the others' 22,000, and cost $15,000,000 or so, but it can throw two or three times as much metal per hour into a given (and unlucky) hotspot.

* * * *

But it travels 50 miles or upward per day, depending on how hard-boiled the general and how good the mechanics, compared with 7 to 10 miles a day for the other three divisions of the Corps.

So after one day's march it would take the rest of the corps a whole week to catch up.

* * * *

It isn't easy to sneak an armed force into an American port as the Germans did at Narvik . . . (Though it might be done at Bahia or La Plata.) But such a streamlined division can move from Washington to Pittsburgh while its unweildier brothers are slogging the 30 miles from Washington to Annapolis.

"—the groceries didn't arrive"

There's a wierd story going the rounds that at last summer's maneuvers near Fort Knox, bodies of troops went without food for 24 hours within 30 miles of Louisville. If the nasty story is true, some of the staff officers got all balled up moving the chow from here to there, when any good grocer in Louisville could have had the hamburger out in time for supper.

* * * *

There's gossip that Maj. Gen. Hugh Drum's full report on last summer's maneuvers is being kept in a secret asbestos drawer at the War Department, too hot to handle. There's also talk that Maj. Gen. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, hasn't concealed his indignation around the War Department, and has written at least one warm letter.

* * * *

Some of the firebrands think the Army needs to yank its dozen or so most talented field officers and younger generals up to the top, the way Blackjack Pershing was yanked up from a captaincy . . . Maybe I'm going off half-cocked on this—I'm no army expert, and I was told to wait three months. But it's safer for me to go off half-cocked than for the Army to go off half-cocked.

3d-Term Vote Fails to Quiet Calif. Factions

Gov. Olson Calls on 'Minorities to Be Silent' After Large Margin

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, May 8.—The large margin of victory for Roosevelt third-term forces in the California Presidential primary failed today to silence opposition factions among the State's Democrats.

Nearly complete unofficial returns maintained a ratio of almost 3 to 1 for a Roosevelt-pledged "harmony" slate over the combined totals of the other three Democratic tickets. Labor's Non-Partisan League termed the outcome "a problem in confusion."

In 12,961 out of the 13,511 precincts the Roosevelt delegation received 711,969 votes; the slate pledged to Vice President Garner, 110,570; the uninstructed "Ham and Eggs" slate, 87,330, and the unpledged ticket headed by Lieut. Gov. Ellis Patterson, 47,663.

Without a contest, Republicans rolled up 526,814 votes in 12,866 precincts for their unopposed, unpledged delegation with 44 votes.

On the basis of the result, Gov. Culbert L. Olson, head of the Roosevelt ticket, called upon "anti-New Deal and antiliberal minorities" to be "silent" but Patterson, as well as Labor's Nonpartisan League, which supported him, spoke critically of the outcome.

Patterson said he would continue to advocate an anti-war plank and a more clearcut New Deal program in the Democratic platform.

The league said that "liberals who voted for Roosevelt did so on the basis of his past New Deal record, and without realization of his recent prowar and antilabor trend."

Despite the lopsided totals, it appeared that nominally at least the California delegation to the Democratic convention would start out with 43 Roosevelt votes and 1 for Garner.

Senator Andrews Ahead

Jacksonville, Fla., May 8 (AP).—United States Senator Charles O. Andrews, a supporter of President Roosevelt, took more than a 2-to-1 lead tonight in Florida's Democratic primary yesterday but lacked the necessary majority for outright renomination.

Returns indicated Andrews would be forced into a runoff contest May 28 with either Bernarr Macfadden, New Deal critic and magazine publisher, or Jerry W. Carter, Townsend champion.

Unofficial figures, based on 1,163 of 1,429 precincts, gave Andrews 137,112; Carter, 60,125; MacFadden, 58,992; Gov. Fred P. Cone, 48,848; Charles Francis Coe, 28,762 and Dr. O. B. Hazen, 3,648.

Florida's only Congressman opposed for renomination, R. A. (Lex) Green, of Starke, held such a wide margin over two opponents it appeared he would be nominated in the first primary.

In the Third Congressional District, where Representative Millard Caldwell did not seek reelection, with 219 of 314 precincts reported, the vote stood: Robert Sikes, 8,967; Parkhill Mays, 7,688; G. Pierce Wood, 6,289; D. Stuart Gillis, 3,595.

One Alabama Runoff Seen

Birmingham, Ala., May 8 (AP).—Results of Alabama's Democratic primary were described as a "magnificent victory for the New Deal" today by Senator Hill as mounting returns assured reelection for eight of the State's nine Congressmen and indicated a runoff for the other.

A runoff June 4 between Representative Pete Jarman and W. D. Partlow, jr., Tuscaloosa, was indicated by virtually complete returns from the Sixth District. Representative Steagall and Starnes, after close races on early returns, finally pulled away. Patrick and Boykin rolled up large majorities.

Keynote Speaker Claude A. Watson appealed for a coalition of the "Christian and patriotic forces"

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 8.—Keynote Speaker Claude A. Watson, of Los Angeles, opened the Prohibition Party's National Convention today with an appeal for a coalition of the "Christian and patriotic forces" of the Nation.

"The Prohibition Party," he said, "makes an appeal for a realignment of the voters in a political party committed to Christian ethics and morality in government to maintain this Nation as a Christian nation."

Watson, temporary chairman of the three-day convention, said the major parties offered no hope of solving present day problems.

"Most thinking people are coming to the conclusion that neither the Republican nor Democratic parties can get the United States out of the present mess," he declared.

A similar view was expressed in a pre-convention statement by Roger W. Babson, Massachusetts statistician, who said "I shall probably accept the Presidential nomination of the new Prohibition Party."

Nominees will be selected Friday, with tomorrow devoted to adoption of a platform.

Edward E. Blake, of Chicago, national committee chairman, said representatives of 32 States were present.

Keynoter Watson termed the "liquor institution" the "supreme tangible foe of the state," and said that the "call of the temperance and prohibition reform is the challenge of highest patriotism." World-wide prohibition remained the ultimate goal, he declared.

"The liquor traffic has to die," Watson said. "It runs contrary to the deep and abiding things which make for human progress."

U. S. Considers Subsidizing Its Corn Exports

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department is considering inaugurating an export subsidy program for corn similar to that which has helped sell surplus cotton and wheat abroad in the last two years.

Little American corn has been moving into export markets because prices, supported by the Government's grower loan program, have been considerably above competitive grain in those markets.

The department reported yesterday that sales of cotton and cotton products under its export subsidy program totaled 6,278,000 bales between last July 27, when the program was inaugurated, and May 1.

Of the total, 5,642,011 bales were actually exported, as compared with 2,998,163 bales in the same period in the previous season, before the program started.

The department has paid out or earmarked slightly in excess of $35,000,000 in subsidies on the cotton sold under this program, officials said. The subsidy originally was 1.5 cents a pound, but later was reduced and finally withdrawn when available funds were obligated.

Dies Trying To Bring War, Quill Charges

Transit Union Chief Is Taken Forcibly To House Guardroom

By Hedley Donovan.
Post Staff Writer

The Dies Committee and Michael Joseph Quill agreed to an armistice yesterday after a turbulent session climaxed by the C. I. O. leader's forcible removal from the witness stand.

Capitol police led Quill out of the caucus room of the House Office Building after he charged the committee with efforts to force the United States into war.

The witness, who is head of the Transport Workers Union, remained in police custody 20 minutes while the committee considered instituting contempt proceedings against him.

When the committee resumed open hearings Quill promised, through his attorney, to give "courteous and responsive" answers to any further questions. He is expected to take the stand again today. The committee meanwhile declined to seek the contempt citation urged by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey.

Veteran of I. R. A.

Representatives Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Voorhis (Democrat), of California, it was learned, refused to second the motion for legal action against Quill. Dies, the other committee member present, can vote only to break a tie.

Quill, a veteran of the Irish Republican Army and seven years' service as a New York subway ticket taker, appeared before the committee in a dark blue, pin-stripe suit, a highly polished walking stick at his side.

His testimony was punctuated by the hammering of Chairman Dies' gavel.

Quill's dramatic exit followed a question by Thomas, who asked if the witness would fight for the United States in case of war with Soviet Russia.

Willing to Defend Flag

"I am an American citizen," shouted Quill, "and as such I would be willing to defend our flag."

Thomas demanded to know whether this meant Quill would serve with American troops if they had to go to Russia.

The witness jumped to his feet, roaring opposition to any move to send American soldiers overseas and adding:

"That's what this committee is trying to do. You're trying to bring on a war.

"You can put me in jail," he cried. "You'll not frighten me."

Taken to Guardroom

Dies, pounding his gavel, cut off Quill's demand that he be allowed to present evidence in answer to charges the transport union is Communist-dominated.

"No witness can come here and deliberately try to insult this committee," the chairman shouted. Police escorted Quill from the hearing chamber to a basement guardroom, releasing him after instructions were phoned from the committee's executive session.

Quill came before the committee at his own request to reply to testimony given last month by Thomas H. O'Shea, former president of the Transport Workers Union.

The witness said O'Shea had been expelled from the union for "playing ball with the bosses and double-crossing the union." He dismissed charges of Communist control over the union with a description of O'Shea as a committee "stool pigeon."

Issues Challenge

"I challenge any agency of the Federal Government to show that any officer of the union is a member of the Communist party," he said. "I want that on the record."

O'Shea had testified that union members were being trained by Communists in the use of firearms "for the same purpose as the Christian Front."

Quill said some transit workers use the New York Board of Education target ranges "for sport." He called any other implication "a lot of bunk."

U.S. Extends Safety Regulations To Privately Owned Trucks

Federal safety regulations for motor carriers were extended by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to privately owned trucks which operate in interstate commerce.

As a result of the commission's order, which will go into effect August 1, drivers of such trucks will not be permitted to work, except in certain cases, more than 60 hours per week, or ten continuous hours in any 24 without eight hours of rest.

The drivers, moreover, must be 21 years of age. They must qualify by passing a physical examination, and must have two eyes, arms and feet. They will have to keep a "log" of their movements which will be available to ICC inspectors. The trucks must meet certain standards with respect to brakes and lights.

At the same time, the drivers will be exempt from the hours provisions of the wage-hour act. This means, it was explained, that they will not have to be paid time and a half for any overtime over the wage-hour maximum of 42 hours per week.

A large number of privately operated trucks in and near the District would be affected by the order, since trucks moving between the District and Maryland and Virginia would have to comply. About 14,000 trucks are registered in the District.

The hours and other safety rules are the same as those which for more than a year have applied to trucks and buses operating for hire in interstate commerce.

Farm trucks moving across State lines, as well as trucks operated by salesmen drivers, such as the milkman, would be granted certain exemptions. Nevertheless, such drivers could not actually operate trucks more than 10 hours a day or 50 hours a week.

This applies only to the time actually spent driving the truck. There is no requirement that farmer truck operators or salesmen drivers will have to confine their working hours to 60 per week.

The farm truck operator will not have to pass a physical test or keep a "log" of his movements. Light farm trucks not weighing more than 10,000 pounds loaded can be operated by youths between 18 and 21 years of age.

Salesmen drivers will have to pass the physical examination, and will have to be 21 years of age.

In computing time which they spend driving, stops of less than 10 minutes will be classed as driving time. But if they do not drive more than 10 miles in any one community, all the stops in this community may be lumped together as one stop from the standpoint of time consumed.

So far as the hour requirements are concerned, they will apply to all operators of privately owned trucks crossing the District line. But safety requirements with respect to the equipment itself would not apply unless the truck moves beyond a commercial zone which the I. C. C. has worked out for Washington, and which embraces the surrounding metropolitan area.

The commission did not include any requirement that accidents by trucks affected by the order would have to be reported. It lacks money to handle such reports, but intends to ask Congress for a larger appropriation to undertake such work. If the money is forthcoming, it is indicated, reports of accidents would be required.

The I. C. C. estimated that its order would effect 600,000, or about 20 per cent, of the 3,000,000 privately owned trucks in the country. Truck association officials, however, thought this estimate was much too high.

The order was issued by the division of the commission handling motor carrier regulation. Members of this division are: Joseph D. Eastman, commission chairman; William E. Lee, John L. Rogers and J. Haden Alldredge.

Alldredge, prime mover in the fight for lower Southern freight rates, dissented.

He said that, in his mind, no constructive purpose was to be served by entering the field of safety regulation for privately owned trucks unless the commission was in a position to improve the situation.

"I do not believe we are in such a position at the present time," he declared.

Fleets of trucks operated by packing and oil companies and other large concerns will be particularly affected by the order.

Expectation is that competition by privately owend trucks with railroads will be lessened to some extent. These trucks constitute about 85 per cent of all those in the country, it is said, and in some parts of the country have given the railroads strong competition.

Better Solution Of Problems Of Youth Urged

Character Education, Adjustment for Jobs Stressed By Ballou

What the District public schools should do toward a better solution of the problems of youth—in relation to citizenship, jobs and culture was stressed by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, at a teachers' institute yesterday afternoon. Nearly 2,000 teachers attended the meeting in the McKinley High School Auditorium.

Among points Superintendent Ballou named for greater emphasis in the future were:

A more systematically organized and prominent program of character education.

A more comprehensive program of health and physical education, "including a physical examination of every pupil periodically" with provision for remedial work "to improve general physical welfare."

Larger place for occupational adjustment, "training for a livelihood," with increased recognition of counseling of students and of their placement "in a permanent gainful occupation."

The clinical or individual method of study of the problems of each individual child.

Urges Records After Graduation

The address will be repeated at a colored teachers' institute Monday afternoon in Armstrong High School Auditorium.

Dr. Ballou stressed the need for the collection of information on the record of successes and failures of every pupil who leaves the public schools of the District, in order to help gauge the effectiveness of the system.

As one aspect of the youth problem, Dr. Ballou pointed out that "juvenile crime has increased to an alarming extent. Destruction of school property and disrespect for public and private property in general in our city are concrete examples of this matter."

Part of his address dealt with what Washington schools are already doing. In his account of the five vocational schools offering 21 different programs of instruction for skilled or semiskilled trades, he pointed out the probable field for broadening this program, since the 1930 census showed 94 classifications of skilled and semiskilled occupations here.

"The vocational school of the future will not be the dumping ground for misfit pupils in elementary, junior high and senior high schools," he said, adding that greater care will be exercised in the selection of pupils to receive this type of training.

"Mental Deviates" a Problem

"Placement will be an important function of the vocational school of the future. The school should not feel that its service to the pupil terminates when he gets his first job," Dr. Ballou said.

If the placement of commercial graduates of high schools in employment is not being as adequately handled as the college bureau placement, "then prompt efforts should be made to improve that service," Dr. Ballou said.

"In my opinion, one of the most pressing needs in the public high schools of the District today," he said, "is for an adequate educational program for senior high school pupils who are 'mental deviates,' who are not pursuing successfully either a college preparatory course or a commercial course or an industrial arts course requiring high skill."

Among possible developments in the college field, Dr. Ballou pointed out that the District has expressed interest in "a junior college to be organized and administered side by side with the teachers college."

Dr. Ballou said "the most significant specialization in our elementary schools is that being done for physically and mentally handicapped children. Special programs of education and remedial instruction are now provided for crippled children, speech defectives, the partially seeing, the deaf and the blind." He said there is now an enrollment of 1,509 handicapped children for whom the schools are offering a modified curriculum.

A film showing activities of senior high and vocational school pupils in Pittsburgh completed the program.

Science Invoked in Mystery Of Pure Food Expert's Killing

Ballistics Experts And Pathologists Called by Police

Westfield, Mass., May 8 (AP)—Science-skilled investigators sought an opening lead tonight in the baffling slaying of 66-year-old Prof. Lewis B. Allyn, pure food authority, whose life among test tubes and laboratory slides was snuffed out last night by bullets fired at close range.

Puzzled as to the motive for the killing, detectives called in ballistics experts, chemists and pathologists to aid in the hunt for the assailant, who apparently called the quiet gray-haired scientist to the vestibule of his home and then fired four shots at him from a .22 caliber automatic.

Details of his death were strikingly similar to the still unsolved slaying of Dr. Elliott Speer, youthful headmaster of Mount Hermon School for Boys, five years ago, in Northfield, 40 miles from this small city. Speer was reading in his library when a shotgun blast through a window killed him.

Allyn, clad in a lounging robe, similarly was in his library.

Mrs. Allyn told police she heard indistinct voices, then the shots, and reached her husband's side in time to hear him gasp, "call the police."

District Attorney Moriarty reported an autopsy had eliminated the possibility of suicide.

Moriarty said he attached "no significance at all" to unofficial reports that Allyn had been doing research work for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In Boston, the F. B. I. denied reports that Allyn had been so engaged.

Senate Group Approves Bill To Curb Bureaus

After voting to exempt the Civil Service Commission, the Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously reported favorably yesterday the Logan-Walter bill, providing for court reviews of orders and regulations of some 130 Governmental agencies.

The committee acted over protests of Administration supporters and by its vote ignored a plea by Senator Barkley, majority leader, to defer action on the measure, already passed by the House, until the next session.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, though he supported the move to place the bill before the Senate, reserved the right to vote against it from the floor.

Barkley is expected to lead the fight against the measure on the floor. Numerous efforts to amend it are expected.

Church Banqueters Hear Clubwoman

The Christian Church should take the lead in the development of real American citizenship, Miss Earlene White declared last night at the annual mother-daughter banquet of Ninth Street Christian Church.

Speaking in the parish hall at Ninth and D streets northeast, the former national president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs said the attitude of youth toward citizenship rested largely on the precept and example of adults.

She was introduced by Miss Mildred Krump, banquet chairman. Mrs. Clifford H. Jope, wife of the Ninth Street Church pastor, was among the guests.

Belgrade Said To Be Weighing Soviet Alliance

Yugoslav Military Mission Is Reported Going to Moscow

said, diplomats believe that if Yugoslavia is attacked, the Allies will send help through Salonika. Editor's note.]

Allied-Soviet Axis Possible

A military alliance with Russia would be a complete turnabout in the policy of Yugoslavia, who has followed a strongly anti-Communist pilicy since the Bolshevist revolution of 1917.

The two countries have not even maintained diplomatic relations.

But the Croat, Vice Premier Vladimir Macek, said on April 24 that resumption of trade relations, the first such treaty since the World War between the two countries, probably would be followed by resumption of diplomatic relations.

Diplomatic quarters in the Balkans, noting the parallel between the Yugoslav-Russian talks and the reported Allied offers of aid to Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Hungary in an effort to form a Balkan defense alliance to stand together against the Rome-Berlin Axis, said there was a distinct possibility of Allied-Russian Cooperation in southeastern Europe.

The Allied offer to Hungary was reported to be contingent upon that country's resistance to passage of German troops for Balkan objectives.

The proffer was reported conveyed to Count Teleky, Hungarian premier, by the British Minister, Owen St. Clair O'Malley, when the envoy asked Count Teleky what he would do if Germany attempted to march through Hungary.

The diplomatic sources said Count Teleky refused a direct answer, saying the government's attitude would depend on the circumstances when and if Germany got ready to move.

O'Malley's call on the premier followed publication of reports that Germany has requested permission of Hungary to go through.

British Overtures

The offer appeared in line with British overtures in Balkan capitals, especially at Sofia, Bulgaria. The British Ambassador to Turkey, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, left Sofia today after conferences with King Boris and his ministers.

Sir Hughe was said to have made Bulgaria a high offer for her adherence to a defensive system in the Balkans but diplomats understood the government was adamant against passage of any foreign troops through Bulgaria to Rumania or Yugoslavia.

It was said Bulgaria would oppose such a move with force.

Marines Arrive, Fair Well in Hand

Marines from Quantico and enlisted men from the Naval Training Station at Norfolk have arrived at the New York World's Fair and have the situation well in hand.

This was assured yesterday when the Fair disclosed that Lieut. Col. Daniel E. Campbell arrived at Camp George Washington on the Fair ground with 11 officers and 211 men from Quantico, who were joined yesterday by 218 men from Norfolk under Lieut. Col. William V. O'Regan.

to have repeated the things Mussolini had told Phillips in Rome.

The only White House comment on the talks here and in Rome were given by Mr. Roosevelt at a press conference last week when he said this country was striving, as it constantly had before, to prevent the further spread of Europe's warfare.

Phillips' conference with Il Duce was said in the Rome dispatch that brought forth official denial here, to have been cordial. The Italian statesman was reported to have read the President's letter "slowly and thoughtfully" but then to have rejected the purported proposal.

He was represented as having declared to Phillips that Italy was doing all in her power to prevent the spread of conflict, and as having claimed it was due to Italy that the Balkans had not been involved.

The Rome story declared "it is learned that there will be no new contacts between Washington and Rome on the question, at least for the present, because Mussolini's answer is understood to have precluded any further attempts of the kind in the near future."

Mr. Roosevelt's declaration that "the report is completely erroneous" and "has no basis in fact" was issued at about 10 p. m., shortly after officials learned that the story had been carried to this country.

Taber's Miracle: Voice Restores Hearing to Schuetz

The stentorian voice of Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, last night had accomplished for Representative Schuetz (Democrat), of Illinois, what medical science had failed to perform—it restored hearing in an ear that had been deaf from birth.

Schuetz revealed that a sudden extra loud blast of Taber's foghorn voice in House debate on the wage and hour amendments last week restored hearing to his left ear. The effect, he said, made him dizzy.

"I've spent thousands of dollars on that ear," Schuetz said, "without getting any results. Since Mr. Taber spoke that day it has been all right."

Taber said he felt that Schuetz should arrange to get him a degree as doctor of medicine.

Deserted by 40 of Party in Test, Chamberlain May Quit

blow which Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes yesterday said would have left Adolf Hitler holding losing cards in Norway—Churchill said Britain had 12,000 troops facing 120,000 Germans and had the choice of getting them out or "leaving them to be destroyed."

Britain's surface navy would have invited losses amounting to "disaster" from the German air fleet, he said, had an attempt been made to cut German communications to Norway in the Skagerrak.

Moreover, he warned, British inferiority in the number of war planes "will condemn us for some time to come to a great deal of difficulty and suffering and danger which we must endure with firmness until more favorable conditions can be established—as they assuredly will be."

At no time in the last war, he declared ominously, was Britain in as great peril as today.

Reassuringly, he said the British now had the Narvik airport, and that "we now fight for Narvik."

Nevertheless, the tone of his speech was of a man who has lost some of his old buoyant optimism.

Earlier the tense drama had seen the sudden decision of the Labor Party to follow the debate with a motion amounting to a question of confidence which would force Chamberlain to resign if he lost.

Stung by the bitter words of Laborite Herbert Morrison, Chamberlain crumpled his notes in his pocket and sprang from his seat to cry, "I accept the challenge, I welcome it, indeed! At least we shall see who is with us and who is against us. I call on my friends to support us in the lobby tonight!"

After it was over, the opposition M. P.'s said the defection of 40 or more government supporters to the other camp, and the large number of absentees seriously weakened the prime minister's control of his own party.

Opposition Surprised

The opposition was surprised by its own strength, and said it portended the early fall of the government.

Churchill's speech, by its very mildness and frankness, disarmed the opposition, which had expected thundering blows. He made no attempt to minimize the British defeat.

David Lloyd George had brought his unequaled prestige in Parliament and nation to bear upon Chamberlain by declaring the greatest contribution Chamberlain could make to the war effort of Great Britain would be to "sacrifice his seals of office."

Warning that the nation stands in "greater jeopardy" than in the last war, the white-maned premier of that other conflict cried:

"The prime minister has met this formidable foe—Hitler—in peace and in war. He has always been worsted!

"I hope Mr. Churchill will not allow himself to be converted into an air-raid shelter to keep the splinters from hitting his colleagues!" he snapped.

Morrison, 52-year-old head of London's municipal government and the son of a London bobby, attacked the government for hiding behind Churchill, "putting him in a shop window" whenever it was in trouble, letting him speak last tonight so there could be no counter-attack on it, "like a chief witness who refuses to go into the witness box."

Singling out Chamberlain, Sir Samuel Hoare and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon for his especial attack, Morrison said that if this inner circle of ministers stays in office "we run a grave risk of losing the war."

There were thunderous opposition cheers.

Shortly before the debate ended the opposition gained the open support of Alfred Duff Cooper, former first lord of the admiralty, for some time a Conservative rebel. He said he would vote against the government because this was no time for "any man to wash his hands, like Pontius Pilate, and take neither one side nor the other."

Strange Company

He made strange company for Lloyd George, who once called him "a petulant little pipsqueak."

Sir Samuel Hoare, the government's No. 2 speaker today, sought to find a bright lining in the Norwegian storm clouds, but there was no evidence that his array of figures salved the opposition.

He said German air losses in the last month of operations were "three times those of Britain."

He disclosed a British fighter base on a frozen Norse lake had been bombed without quarter with no protection from antiaircraft guns, and in the House of Lords, Lord Hankey, minister without portfolio, revealed that one of the greatest British losses in the campaign was the sinking, in convoy, of a ship loaded with antiaircraft guns and other valuable stores—by a submarine.

This and the lack of British fighter bases gave the Germans their air mastery and contributed to the Allied withdrawal from central Norway.

British ships had scored "a ghastly success," Churchill said "7,000 or 8,000 Germans have been drowned."

"We are asked why we did not go into Trondheim, Bergen and other ports," he said. "My view has always been fixed on Narvik."

When the German "outrage" occurred, Churchill continued, "we were bound to go to the aid of the Norwegians" and Trondheim was chosen for the attack.

Navy Was Ready

Churchill said the navy was "perfectly ready to carry troops" into Trondheim but the plan was abandoned "because on the seventeenth the two diversionary landings (at Namsos and Andalsnes) had made good progress and it seemed easier to capture Trondheim by this method than to incur the heavy cost of a direct attack."

"The withdrawal from Norway saved us from a most disastrous entanglement," he said, adding "I take the fullest responsibility myself together with the prime minister and other ministers concerned for having accepted the advice of our experts."

Churchill said he thought the experts were right at the time and he saw no reason to alter his views "on what I have learned since."

The German advance was so rapid, he said, that the Norwegians were unable to destroy roads and railways.

Hitler lost ten men for every one Britain lost in Norway, Churchill said.

"There is no word of truth," Churchill said, in reports he had urged more violent action on Chamberlain or the war cabinet which they had refused to take.

Churchill said that despite Hitler's overrunning of a vast region of Norway, 'the test rests substantially with us."

Britain's defense chief said two battleships had been slightly damaged and neither was withdrawn for a day from service, and that one aircraft carrier was slightly damaged by a near hit and is still in service.

Only one antiaircraft cruiser was slightly damaged. We have unhappily lost 11 trawlers."

Laborite Arthur Greenwood asked if the war cabinet delayed making its decision about Trondheim.

"Not for a moment," said Churchill, "to dismiss these delusions."

Then he said had an attack been delivered, Admiral Keyes would have had the privilege of leading it.

European War Causing U. S. Drug Shortage

Cod Liver Oil Supply Hard Hit, Pharmacists Told

By the United Press

Richmond, Va., May 8.—The war in Europe has affected seriously the supply of drugs to the United States, and an acute shortage may be felt in some lines this fall, R. W. Rodman, of New York, today told a meeting here of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

With "spread of World War No. 2 to Norway early last month," Rodman said, "the source of supply of 70 per cent of the cod liver oil used in the United States was immediately cut off and this Nation faces a real shortage in this important medicinal product."

The hostilities came at a bad time for the cod liver oil industry, he said, as spring is the big cod fishing season and stocks of oil in this country are at their low point of the year following heavy winter sales when vitamin products are in the greatest demand.

Canada and France, he said, have placed their exports of cod liver oil under license, "which means that no oil produced in Newfoundland, Labrador, Miquelon or St. Pierre will be available to American manufacturers." Only remaining sources of supply are Iceland and Japan, which have been supplying 30 per cent of United States imports in recent years.

Will Spur Research

Rodman, declaring it would be too late now if hostilities should cease immediately to reestablish fishing and refining activities to prevent an "acute shortage," said the shortage would speed up research in the production of substitute fish liver oils and in the manufacture of synthetic vitamins A and D.

Some oil is being extracted from livers of such fish as shark, salmon, tuna, halibut and swordfish, but "this will not meet the demand."

Supplies of botanical drugs, which come chiefly from Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Poland and Russia, also have been cut off.

This was caused not only by reduced shipping, but because the men who produced the drugs were mobilized and unable to tend to their crops, he said.

"The future supply of these drugs," he said, "is tied in closely with what Italy may do if it becomes necessary for her to cast her lot either with Germany or the Allies. If she joins Germany, it will be virtually impossible to obtain any botanical drugs from Europe." Most of them, he pointed out, pass through the Italian ports on the Adriatic Sea.

Among the botanical drugs most affected by the European war are ergot, lavender flowers, orange peel, cascara, camomile, malva flowers, cantharides, buchu, henna, peppermint, gentian, arnica flowers, senega, anise, juniper berries, poppy, fennel and arabic, asafetida, myrrh and benzoin gums.

Japan Causes Anxiety

Rodman revealed that the drug trade was caused anxiety by Japan's suggestion of her interest in the Dutch East Indies last month. Which brought a prompt warning from Secretary of State Hull. The Indies are the chief source of cinchona bark from which quinine is obtained, and "is about the only place it can be grown satisfactorily."

"If Japan should seize the Dutch East Indies," Rodman said, "she would set up her own machinery to control the cinchona monopoly she would acquire. She would be in possession of a commodity which every country requires and would be in a position to dictate her terms of barter, a situation which might have a far-reaching effect upon world trade in other commodities as well."

Rodman said the chemical situation in the United States was much better than it was in 1914 when Germany cut off the supply of dyes, but the last 25 years "has made us largely independent of foreign sources of supply." He pointed out, however, that many botanical drugs cannot be produced domestically.

By James B. Reston.
Copyright by New York Times

London, May 8.—The lack of coordination between the war office and the censors produced a new outburst of criticism when the announcement of the arrival of British troops from Norway was released to some newspapers and withheld from others.

Representatives of the British, French and United States press were invited last week-end to meet troops returning from Norway Sunday and yesterday. For reasons of security the press was asked to treat the arrival as confidential. It was stressed on several occasions that under no circumstances would anything be released for publication until the ships had cleared from port and all troops were safe ashore. The date of publication therefore was set for today, and all correspondents, as usual, observed the regulations to the letter.

The correspondent of one London newspaper, however, sent a story to his paper describing the arrival of the troops, and it was submitted to the censors.

Consequently the national welcome to the troops was marred and the old Fleet Street charge that retired majors and admirals make poor censors is being echoed all over town tonight.

There has been similar trouble before. When King George went to France to visit the expeditionary force the correspondents there were told they could not print a word about it until he was safely back in Buckingham Palace. At the end of his first day in France, however, the news was broadcast by the British Broadcasting Co.

Another mixup occurred when the first division of the Canadian expeditionary force arrived in Scotland. On that occasion the correspondents were again told to hold their copy, but in the confusion Winston Churchill himself broke release two days early.

As a protest against the operation of the censorship, London newspapers have withdrawn their correspondents from the headquarters of the Royal Air Force in France. Until recently these correspondents, who were under military supervision, were allowed to talk to pilots when British planes returned from Germany. Recently the correspondents were ordered not to talk to pilots and print only information given them by press liaison officers.

The newspapers pointed out that this would reduce their reporters to the position of messengers and immediately withdrew them.

The Times of London, commenting on the censorship, said today:

"In short, the service for control of news has led to one gaff after another and will lead to worse. Its vagaries are a nightmare to all concerned with the distribution of news and something of a peril to the public interest. If there is to be any security for the future the system must be changed and the issue of news put finally in charge of civilian authority, working in consultation with the services, which is acquainted with the elements of newspaper practice and with what the public requires in the way of a full, fair, safe presentation of events."

'Travel-on-Credit' Plan Drafted By 66 Railroads

New York, May 8 (AP).—Sixty-six American railroads announced today that they would sponsor, beginning May 20, a "travel-on-credit" plan enabling passengers to take a trip and pay for it later—in installments.

Under the plan the prospective traveler making a trip costing $50 or more could apply for credit to either a travel agent or a railway ticket office.

The application would be passed on within 24 hours after a routine credit check, and no collateral or down payment would be required. A "nominal service charge" would be added for the credit accommodation.

"Credit is not necessarily confined to the cost of transportation alone," said a statement by the participating railroads released by C. L. Hunter, chairman of the Trunk Line Association. It may be used for Pullman accomodations, all-expense tours, which include hotels and meals, specified side trips, steamship travel and any other service that is sold through the railroad ticket office except money orders and travelers' checks."

French Bureau Stifles News At Its Source

Paris Citizens Get Only Confusing Rehash Of Foreign Dispatches

By G. H. Archambault
(Wireless—Copyright 1940 by the New York Times)

Paris, May 8.—Echoes are reaching Paris that America is receiving very little news from France, a fact which contributes to general uneasiness.

It seems that American radio commentators express surprise that the French censorship should be so strict. For once the censor is not to blame; he has no need to use his blue pencil for the simple reason that virtually no news is obtainable in France—and less than ever since the creation of the Ministry of Information some six weeks ago.

Take any of this morning's Paris newspapers: Apart from editorial or semieditorial articles, a few stray items of local news are buried under a mass of dispatches from foreign sources. More paradoxical still, it happens occasionally that reports of events in France reach this country from abroad.

Warns Citizens

In six weeks the Ministry of Information has not issued a tittle of news. It has warned citizens against indiscriminate talk and against giving information in their correspondence. Minister Louis-Oscar Frossard himself has broadcast to the nation twice—once to paraphrase Prime Minister Chamberlain's announcement to the House of Commons of the evacuation of troops from Norway, the second time—last night—to open a series of talks on "The Treason of Communist Leaders." The inevitable conclusion is that news must be stifled at the source.

In all fairness it should be said that there are "conferences" at the Ministry of Information but they are nothing more than lectures. At the last one attended by this correspondent a courteous and obliging staff officer spoke interestingly and marshaled his points with clarity and intelligence. But he had no news.

His lecture was interspersed with remarks such as "as you will have read in the papers" or "the papers have told us." At one point he gave statistics on the trade of neutrals with Germany. Some colleagues took copious notes. Then the lecturer remarked casually:

"I have taken these figures from a recent issue of the New York Times."

Rehash of Dispatches

And so it is with the French radio—a rehash of the foreign dispatches in the newspapers. So much so that many listeners now turn to another station as soon as a "news bulletin" is announced. L'Oeuvre remarks that the only way to get news is to buy a London paper—on condition that you can read English.

On the other hand, there are commentaries aplenty, both written and spoken. But since they are not based on news but for the most part wishful thinking they serve only to bewilder the listener who after glowing announcements of "Germany's sorry plight in Norway" is taken aback to learn of Allied evacuation.

The danger of all this—and it is very real—is that it makes for apathy at a time when the chief requirement should be enthusiasm.

Officer Tells How Men Fled German Trap

Last of Allied Troops From Central Norway Safe in England

By Harold Denny
Copyright by New York Times

At a Northern Port in England May 8.—The last units of the British and French expeditionary force which tried vainly to expel the Germans from southern and central Norway were safely disembarked on British soil today, ending the unhappy history of the first big episode of the war.

That it was considered by military authorities to be an episode, not a final disaster, and that the expedition would be sent back to fight again in Norway was strongly indicated by the French commander, Gen. Mittelhauser, addressing his troops immediately after they had come off the ships, and counseling them to polish up their tactics while they rested in Britain.

They had been tried as troops are seldom tried.

How the green and untried troops behaved when confronted with the worst problem which can befall soldiers—to be surrounded in an unknown country by an enemy of superior numbers and arms—was told by a captain of a territorial regiment.

Company Surrounded

By April 20 he and his company of 200 youngsters had pushed their way south of Vist with orders to effect contact with a company on their left. They were under heavy enemy fire from front and rear and both flanks.

"We were surrounded," said the captain, "but the enemy didn't know we were there. It looked pretty serious. I sent a runner back to the battalion advance headquarters 1¼ miles in the rear with my estimate of the situation and asking for instructions.

"The runner got there all right and started back with orders for me to retire and indicating the safest route. But meanwhile the Germans moved up to a ridge overlooking a valley half a mile wide which we had to cross. It was of unbroken snow. He got within 200 yards of us when the Germans spotted him and opened fire with machine guns. He crawled the rest of the way and got safely into the woods and then wriggled up to me.

"We started to retire just at dusk. We expected to meet machine gunfire and tried to disguise ourselves. We threw away out tin hats and started out bareheaded in double file, the men walking very close together. I ordered them not to fire. They carried their rifles at trail so they would not be seen. I had two men in front with bayonets and I had my revolver and dagger ready."

He showed the dagger—a Finnish knife he had picked up in Norway.

"We certainly didn't look like soldiers at a distance," he went on, "we might have been mistaken for a convoy of trucks or prisoners or almost anything but troops. Or perhaps the Germans didn't see us at all. At any rate we got away and after marching 34½ hours out of 47 and covering 45 miles through snow 2 feet deep in a trackless country we reached the rest of our battalion."

Strange Contrast

They contrasted strangely, the British and French troops who landed today. Most of the British were new men with few experienced officers and noncoms. Many were stunted but wiry youths from northern collieries. But they had quickly assumed British military smartness in their brand-new battle dress, washed and shaved with their hair slicked back under overseas caps worn at a perilously jaunty angle. Their "buttons buttoned and their 'ooks 'ooked"—"all spit and polish" as British regulars say.

The seasoned French Alpine Chasseurs on the other hand carried out the best French military tradition—to look like hell and fight the same way. They had not bothered to polish up. They ambled off a gray transport bowed down under equipment hanging from them like Christmas tree ornaments in their grimy wrinkled uniforms and muddy boots.

Some wore helmets, some wore sloppy berets. Some wore leggins, some golf stockings. Some had bayonets fixed, others not. They wore a uniform only in that all had several days' growth of beard. A little military band greeted them with rollicking tunes familiar in Paris. Their own buglers tooted some flourishes for their general as they lined up tolerantly before him. him.

Webb Miller, War Reporter Who Knew No Peace, Is Killed

Fall Off Train Ends Career That Bullets Couldn't Bother

By the Associated Press

WEBB MILLER

London, May 8.—Webb Miller, 48, war correspondent for the United Press, was found dead on a railway track in southwest London early today, the victim of an accident in the war-time blackout.

Authorities believe he fell from a moving train while attempting to leave his compartment at Clapham Junction. They said he apparently did not realize, in the blackout, that the train already had left the station.

The accident occurred last night as Miller was returning home after covering the House of Commons debate on the Norwegian campaign.

Miller, European news manager for the United Press Association, had a colorful career as war reporter, from Mexico in 1916 until the present conflict.

His experiences were recounted in his autobiographical book, "I Found No Peace," published in 1936.

A native of Dowagiac, Mich., Miller was a rural school teacher before he took "a grandstand seat at the most momentous show in history."

He went to Chicago as a police reporter in 1912, then in rapid succession covered the American punitive expedition to Mexico in 1916, reported in Washington and New York, and began his career in Europe in 1917.

Besides the World War, which he saw from the British and American fronts in France, he covered the Riff uprising in Morocco in 1925, the Ethiopian invasion, the Spanish civil war, the Russian-Finnish war, and a host of other historic events such as the Munich conference and the German march into Czecho-Slovakia.

Roosevelt Expresses Regret

(Gen. Pershing, who knew Miller in Mexico and France, said he was "profoundly grieved" at the death of "an able and reliable correspondent and an outstanding American in every respect.")

He is survived by his widow, Marie, and a son, Kenneth, 18, both of whom are in the United States.

Here Last June

Miller was in Washington last June, coming here with King George VI and Queen Elizabeth after a 7,000-mile tour of Canada.

Other reporters who covered the royal tour recalled how the author of "I Found No Peace," was unable to find it even at Banff, the Rocky Mountain resort, where the King and Queen rested for two days.

Miller, wearing a pair of borrowed trunks, was about to take a swim in the Banff hot springs pool when the King and Queen, attired in sports clothes, appeared. The newspaperman, alone and uncomfortable in his oversized trunks, blushed. For a moment he didn't know what to do.

Then he had an inspiration. He dived into the middle of the pool and stayed there until the royal couple had left.

Sweden Mines Baltic Coast, Calls Up Men

100-Mile Field Laid To Guard Stockholm; '39 Class Summoned

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 8.—Moving to defend her neutrality against all comers, Sweden today laid a mine belt 100 miles long to protect all entrances to Stockholm and adjacent ports and at the same time announced that the class of 1939, whose call to the colors had been postponed, is now being enlisted.

The mine belt, announced as designed to "increase the effectiveness of the neutrality guard," has been laid within Swedish territorial waters from Norrtalje, north of Stockholm, to Nykoeping, south of Stockholm, and ships are warned they can enter these waters only with special pilots.

British Warning Recalled

Swedish ports on the Kattegat and Skagerrak have been protected by a mine belt for some time but the laying of the mines before Stockholm created special interest inasmuch as it followed the warning by Sir Archibald Sinclair in the British House of Commons yesterday that "a German ultimatum to Sweden in a week or two would not be a surprise."

It is recalled here that Norway's failure to lay mines in her fjords, especially in the Oslo Fjord, was among the chief factors that facilitated the success of the German lightning attack on her.

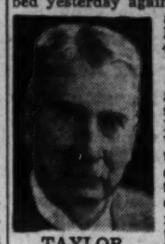
The enrollment of the class of 1939, announced today by Defense Minister Skoeld, was originally scheduled for April 15 but was postponed because of the demand for farm labor. Skoeld pointed out that men who may have to fight must be trained and declared that "the country's readiness to defend herself must come first."

The Swedish press emphasized today that despite the spectacular German success in Norway, it was only a partial success in a subordinate theater of war, and that Sweden did not count on outside help but would defend her neutrality with all her resources.

Meanwhile, the battle for Narvik continued in spite of snowstorms, with the Allies reporting slow but steady progress.

Adm. Taylor Hits Construction Corps Abolition

Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, grand old man of American shipbuilding, protested from his sickbed yesterday against the proposed abolition of the Naval Construction Corps.



TAYLOR

The 76-year-old retired officer, chief constructor of the Navy in the World War, termed a bill to do away with the Construction Corps and transfer its members to the line a "great mistake" and a threat to the future of the Navy. The measure, indorsed by the Navy high command, was approved by the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday.

At the same time, Admiral Taylor spoke his mind on the war and current naval problems raised by the conflict. He is in the Naval Hospital for treatment of a slight paralysis suffered several years ago, but expects to go to his home at Waldrop, Va., next month.

Agrees With Admiral Keyes

The officer, regarded as one of the great shipbuilders of all times, doesn't think much of the proposal to build "turtle-backed" warships to meet the threat of air power.

"It's not practicable," he said. "But our people are working on the problem of bombs exploding on the top-sides and they'll solve it."

He agreed with Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, whom he knew in 1918, that the British should have tried to force Trondheim Fjord in the Norway campaign.

"However," he continued, "I rather agree with Chamberlain that Norway is a sideline. He planned his campaign the first day of the war and is sticking to it—starve out Germany. The British worked it on Napoleon and again in the World War."

Built First Test Basin

Are we going to get in?

"I hope not, and I don't see why we should," Admiral Taylor replied.

Admiral Taylor built the first basin for testing warship models in the world here at the navy yard in the '90's. The naval ship model basin at Carderock, Md., now nearing completion, is named for him.

He considers our warships "pretty good" craft which have had the "flattery of imitation paid to them." But the proposed abolition of the Construction Corps might change this, he feels.

Dutch Funds Here May Be Frozen If Invasion Comes

The Government will extend its protection to more than $1,000,000,000 of Dutch investments in this country if Germany should invade The Netherlands, it was indicated yesterday.

President Roosevelt in all probability would issue an amendment to his recent executive order adding Holland to the nations whose money and property can be withdrawn from the United States only by Treasury permission.

If the Germans could get their hands on Dutch wealth located in this country, they would have a prize many times more valuable, according to Commerce Department figures. Norwegian and Danish investments and bank balances in the United States scarcely exceed $100,000,000.

Investments of the Netherlands in this country at the end of 1939 was about $817,000,000 according to Government estimates. In addition, there was about $210,000,000 in bank balances, a total of $1,027,000,000.

This does not include gold which Holland has under earmark in this country. As a result of the war jitters which now has held Europe in its grip for years, nationals of many countries, as well as the central banks of the countries, have sent money here and gold to be held under earmark. The Commerce Department estimates that gold under earmark totaled about $1,300,000,000 at the end of March.

Since January 1, Holland has shipped about $50,000,000 of gold to this country.

Tokyo Expected Fleet Move

By Wilfrid Fleisher
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo, Thursday May 9.—The Japanese navy had advance information of the holding of the American fleet at Hawaii and feels no great concern over the move but regards it as "another demonstration of anti-Japanese feeling in America," Rear Admiral Masao Kanazawa, spokesman of the navy department, declared this morning.

The situation between the United States and Japan has become very delicate and complicated, Admiral Kanazawa said.

Asked whether he considered the move linked with Foreign Minister Arita's recent statement of concern over the Dutch East Indies in the event of Holland becoming involved in the European war, Kanazawa declared that the Japanese navy "unqualifiedly supports Foreign Minister Arita's statement and thinks exactly as he does."

He added he could not believe, however, that American national policy would be affected by rumors that Japan had designs on the Dutch East Indies.

"Unwise," Say's Consul

Honolulu, May 8 (AP).—Kiichi Gunji, Japanese Consul General, said today if extension of the United States fleet's stay in Hawaiian waters was intended to discourage Japan's program in the Far East, or to force Japan into an unfavorable trade treaty with America, then the Navy's move was "unwise."

"The Japanese people possess the unique characteristic of having a strong reaction," he continued. "If we are treated and looked upon kindly, we will reciprocate. But if not, then we tend to look upon them unfavorably.

"So it is with the decision of the Navy to remain in Hawaiian waters."

Woodrum Asks Slash of Third In Relief Fund

Billion-Dollar WPA Bill for All 1941 Proposed in House

A billion-dollar WPA bill for the full year 1941 was urged on Congress yesterday by economy-minded Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, while reports circulated in House corridors that his relief subcommittee had indorsed the President's proposal of $975,000,000 for the first eight months.

Asserting that Congress already has voted appropriations carrying the National debt $150,000,000 beyond the legal limit, Woodrum chided his colleagues for heading toward "a record of fiscal irresponsibility that has never been equaled since the founding of our Government."

The subcommittee handling relief completed its work on the 1941 appropriation yesterday. It was reported, though not officially confirmed, that the group decided to accept President Roosevelt's recommendation of a grant of $975,000,000 for WPA for a minimum of eight months. If the entire sum is spent during that period, the rate of expenditure would be approximately the same as for the current year.

Third Under 1940 Grant

Although the subcommittee as a whole is understood to have indorsed the eight-month bill, it was clear yesterday that even some of its Democratic members did not feel bound to support such a measure. The bill must still be approved by the full Appropriations Committee Wednesday, and is expected to reach the floor of the House early the following week.

In advocating a $1,000,000,000 relief measure for 1941, which would be one-third less than for 1940, Woodrum also asked for defeat of the unbudgeted $2,200,000 for farm parity payments that the Senate added to the Agriculture appropriation bill.

The long awaited vote on farm parity is scheduled to be taken in the House this afternoon, with proponents reasonably confident of success. Other major items in the Agriculture conference report that may be considered by the House today are $85,000,000 for the food stamp plan, and $90,000,000 in RFC loans for farm tenancy and rural electrification.

The House made slow progress on the conference report yesterday, but its approval of the Senate's addition of $203,000 for cooperative agricultural extension work was taken by party supporters as an omen of success.

Amendment Slated Today

In an attempt to insure approval of parity by wheat, corn and tobacco groups, an amendment will be offered today providing that payments be made if the crop price is at all below parity—instead of below 75 per cent of parity, as the present law provides.

Since the current price of wheat is above 75 per cent of parity, and corn and tobacco give every indication of going above, Representatives from wheat, corn and tobacco areas have tended to demur at voting for a form of agricultural relief which would not benefit their farmers.

If the basis of 100 per cent of parity is adopted, wheat, corn and tobacco farmers would get a slice of the $212,000,000—and the proportion of cotton growers would be correspondingly lessened.

In his economy speech yesterday, Representative Woodrum told the House that if Congress had lived up to the budget estimates instead of exceeding them on three major appropriation bills, the national debt limit would still not have been exceeded.

But, he said, even with an unexpected increase of $200,000,000 in national revenue, "we stand now $150,000,000 above the debt limit." He declared "it is our duty here and now before we adjourn to provide funds for the next fiscal year."

House Opposes CAA Transfer

brought out to the floor; but if he fails, there is strong likelihood that the committee would attempt to kill the disapproving resolution by tabling it.

In turning thumbs down on President Roosevelt's proposal yesterday, the House voiced disagreement with a reorganization order for the first time since a year ago when Congress gave the President limited power to make broad changes in the executive arm of the Government.

Although the order contains other shifts of agencies, the only point in controversy is the proposal to place the hitherto independent CAA under the Department of Commerce, and to abolish the Air Safety Board.

Meanwhile, on the Senate floor Senator McCarran blocked immediate consideration of the nomination of Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The President has said he would name CAA Chairman Robert Hinckley to Johnson's post.

113 Out of 114 Registered Vote In Berwyn Heights

A hot fight between ten candidates for the five places on the Berwyn Heights board of commissioners brought out 113 of the town's 114 registered voters.

Of four candidates seeking reelection, three were successful. They were Charles M. Attick, 86 votes; Charles H. Stein, 61, and E. J. Taylor, 59. Edward J. Waters, the other incumbent in the race, polled 58 votes to lose by one tally.

Others elected were Gerard C. Buscher and John W. Hall, 63 votes each.

Defeated candidate were Mrs. R. Benson, first woman ever to run for town commissioner, 57 votes; R. F. Burnette, 51; George A. Elfman, 43, and Eugene Aleshire, 22.

'Little Congress' To Visit New York

More than 500 Congressmen's secretaries plan to leave Washington by special train tomorrow noon for a week-end in New York. The group will spend Saturday at the World's Fair, the day having been designated as "Little Congress" day.

Friday night the Washingtonians will be guests of the National Broadcasting Co. and later will be entertained at various New York night clubs. Sunday they will go sightseeing, and take a boat excursion.

George McKean, secretary to Representative Secrest of Ohio, is general chairman of arrangements.

Precautionary Move

The new precautionary defense measures which the government of the Netherlands has taken reflect that nation's fears that it may be next on Hitler's list.

Once again, as in mid-November and mid-January, the apparent threat of German invasion of the low countries may prove to be without substance. But the hard-headed Dutch do not want to take any chances. In view of what has happened to Denmark and Norway, none of Europe's small neutrals can feel safe. The possibility of the war's further spread is one which they cannot reasonably ignore.

Nor is this a possibility which the United States can ignore. For if the war does spread, the repercussions of that development will not be confined to the European continent. There is every reason to believe that the effect will be world-wide.

The Government has shown good judgment, therefore, in ordering the United States battle fleet to stay on in Hawaiian waters instead of returning at this time to the California coast as was originally planned. The involvement of the Netherlands in the European conflict, the extension of that struggle to the Mediterranean, which would greatly increase the burden imposed on Allied sea power, might encourage Japan to undertake a rash adventure in southeastern Asia.

Under the circumstances the presence in the mid-Pacific of the American battle fleet may have a sobering effect on the rasher spirits in the Island Empire. Recently Secretary Hull called attention to the fact that this Nation favors the continued maintenance of the status quo in the Netherlands East Indies. The order countermanding the return of the battle fleet to its California base will help underline this attitude.

Time To Withdraw It

The House vote to overturn President Roosevelt's fourth reorganization order is the more impressive because of the little opposition which had been raised again previous shifts in the executive department. Obviously a majority of the House membership believes that an important principle is at stake at this time.

Outstanding in the debate was an attack upon the personnel of the Air Safety Board which will be abolished if the President's order is permitted to go into effect. That fact suggests the weakness of the case for the President's order. The question of personnel has little bearing upon the proposed reorganization which the House has voted against. To abolish an agency because of a dispute among its members is equivalent to burning a house to get rid of fighting cats.

The question before the House was whether the independent Civil Aeronautics Authority should be transferred to the Department of Commerce and the functions of the Air Safety Board to the CAA. That is a basic problem in governmental organization. There is much to be said for the separation of administrative duties from quasi-judicial functions. But the shift of the CAA does not appear to follow any general principle on this point. Moreover it ignores two practical considerations.

First of these is the fact that the air transport lines had a disgraceful accident record under the old Bureau of Air Commerce. Under the independent CAA a truly remarkable improvement has been made. Certainly that fact, which is of tremendous importance to the traveling public as well as to the aviation industry, should not have been ignored in attempting to shift this regulatory agency back into the Department of Commerce.

The second consideration is that one agency cannot properly fix the rules and regulations for air transport service and at the same time investigate accidents occurring under those rules. That one defect in the set-up proposed by the President justifies its defeat.

No doubt the reorganization order will also encounter strong opposition in the Senate. The President might save his Administration from a good deal of embarrassment by withdrawing this plan and issuing a new order leaving the CAA intact.

Waking To Realities

More significant than the outcome of the two-day debate, on British war policy in the House of Commons, was its exceedingly grim character. For the first time political leaders of all complexions publicly expressed uncertainty as to the outcome of the war and freely admitted the tremendous strength which lies behind "the German menace."

It would have been better for all concerned if the power of the Nazi machine, which in the ninth month of war has yet to show its first sign of structural weakness, had been recognized long ago. From the ill-fated attempt to save Poland to the utter fiasco in Norway the Allies have grossly underestimated both the intelligence and the hitting power behind the German strategy. As all who underrate a formidable opponent, they are paying dear for that mistake.

Although the blunder is not at present costing us anything it is well to realize that the same misconception of German strength has been very prevalent in this country. The ability of the Nazi leaders, the fidelity of the German people to that leadership, the economic and political power of the regime—all these have been consistently misjudged. In consequence it is the more of a shock to Americans to awake to realization of the debauch of wishful thinking in which so many have indulged.

From the long-range viewpoint the disillusionment in England, as illustrated by the realistic debate in the House of Commons, will probably be all to the good. Temporarily it emphasizes the cleavages and internal dissensions in public opinion. But the ranks should close more quickly, and the nation settle down more doggedly to the task ahead, because of the growing appreciation that the outcome of this war is no foregone conclusion.

A greater measure of realism should develop not merely in the making of war but also in the planning of the eventual peace. It has been the British custom so far blithely to discuss what sort of peace terms Germany shall be asked to accept, whether that country shall be pulverized or merely required to overthrow its present leadership and restore some form of status quo.

The prospect that a strongly consolidated Germany, with or without Hitler, may itself have some opinions to contribute to the post-war settlement is not without definite value. There is much to be said for the viewpoint of those who think that a knockout victory for either side would result in a punitive and, therefore, essentially unstable settlement. A sense of jeopardy on the part of both belligerents is a useful prerequisite not merely for more intensive war effort but also for hard-headed thinking with respect to peace.

In that field, as the present struggle runs its course, the American contribution should become progressively more vital, the more so because the people of this country are becoming increasingly aware that indifference to the outcome in Europe is wholly impossible.

The moment for constructive intervention may be long delayed, and when it comes may well be difficult to seize. But the responsibility of America in the issue is not the less real for that. It is real, if for no other reason, because failure on our part to work for a really reliable peace can only lead to ever greater risk of our entanglement in a spreading war.

On The Band Wagon

California's primary election returns are interesting chiefly because they confirm a general trend. Once more delegates favoring a third term for President Roosevelt have won a sweeping victory over the supporters of Vice President Garner. California has simply added emphasis to the now obvious fact that Mr. Roosevelt can easily win a third nomination if he chooses to run.

Alabama has elected 22 delegates pledged to cast their votes at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago for Speaker William B. Bankhead of the House of Representatives. But the Speaker is a "favorite son" candidate and not an obstacle to the third-term movement. Promises from both Georgia and North Carolina yesterday augmented the strength of the Roosevelt delegates. The President has won such extensive support that it would be futile for any Democratic candidate to stand out against him.

Of course, this does not mean that the President is certain to become a third-term candidate. It simply permits him to make his choice without fighting for the nomination. The prospect confronting any third-term aspirant who has partly lost control of Congress in his second term may well induce the President to step aside. But the decision now rests entirely with him.

If Mr. Roosevelt wishes to retire, the strength he has acquired in numerous State primaries may enable him to choose his successor. It is not to be supposed that he could foist an unpopular candidate upon the Chicago convention. One man's strength in politics can seldom be transferred successfully to another. But, as between the candidates who will have some standing at Chicago in their own right, the President may be able to make a choice with little prospect of having it rejected.

So there seems to be no question as to the dominant influence which the President will wield upon the 1940 campaign of the Democratic Party. Whether or not that influence will be wielded in his own behalf is still as much a mystery as ever.

Webb Miller

Since the outbreak of the World War in 1914 the foreign correspondence published by American newspapers has steadily grown in volume and expertness. As a result, it can be said without fear of contradiction that the people of the United States are day in and day out kept better and more fully informed as to what is going on in the outside world than are the people of any other nation.

Before the World War, American foreign correspondence was dominated by the romantic Richard Harding Davis tradition whose last exponent was the late Floyd Gibbons. Webb Miller, who met an untimely death on Tuesday, belonged to a different school of reporting. His approach was objective rather than subjective. His aim was always to get the facts and he did so consistently regardless of the difficulties of his assignment.

Since 1916 the list of Webb Miller's principal assignments has been a list of major happenings in international affairs. During the last few years, for instance, he saw service in Ethiopia, Spain, the Western Front, Finland and Norway. His last dispatch was a report of Tuesday's dramatic debate in the House of Commons.

For a man who had seen so much action in the field, who again and again had exposed himself to danger, the nature of his death was grimly ironic. He was apparently a victim of the blackout which prevented him from seeing that the train upon which he was traveling from London to his home in the suburbs had not arrived at his station but was still moving. Yet, in a real sense, his death must be marked down as a casualty of the war.

An extremely able practitioner of an exacting, exciting and increasingly hazardous calling, Webb Miller will be remembered by a host of friends and admirers in many lands and by a public which had come to regard his by-line as a guarantee of accuracy and objectivity.

A Real Contribution

Mrs. Roosevelt's unique service to the District of Columbia has consisted largely of frank and effective criticism. Her deeper interests have gone far beyond the city's ornamental buildings and monuments to its civic institutions. Finding these woefully deficient, she has reported the facts candidly and fairly.

In a self-governing city such a contribution might be of little value. For criticism is almost daily directed at any officials or groups who are negligent in rendering municipal service. But our city council, consisting of 96 Senators and 435 Representatives, is chiefly interested in the national aspects of Washington. Its members seldom find time to investigate the inadequate service rendered by such local institutions as the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the Children's Receiving Home, the National Training School for Girls and many others. And protests of local citizens against the neglect of public health and welfare do not attract the attention they should.

In examining Washington's institutions concerned with problems of human welfare, Mrs. Roosevelt says, "you don't touch anything which isn't the result of long neglect." Washington residents have long been aware of this situation and have frequently cried out against it. The significance of Mrs. Roosevelt's criticism is that it comes from one who is known to be unbiased and thoroughly objective.

Nor does the First Lady fail to trace this sorry lack of balance between national and local interests in the National Capital to its source. She sees that it is the absence of home rule which leads to the neglect of local institutions. Congress is naturally more interested in the national aspects of the Capital than in the welfare of the people who live here. For that very reason, however, it should recognize the imperative need for a larger measure of local control over community functions and services.

The Will And The Whey

If life would remain as simple as in the nursery rhymes, there would be fewer problems for scientists like B. H. Webb and C. F. Hufnagel, of the Bureau of Dairy Industry.

Little Miss Muffet, if memory serves, sat on a tuffet, eating her curds and whey. It was not according to the original scheme of things that the combination should be sundered. Man upset the balance of nature by taking the most palatable part of the milk to make cheese, and throwing the whey away.

But the discarded portion is said to contain about half the food solids of the original milk. And it is this fact, in spite of the outmoded policy of scarcity, which has challenged the inventive genius of the Department of Agriculture. So Mr. Webb and Mr. Hufnagel have devised a way to convert whey into candy. Modern Miss Muffets will sit in overstuffed chairs and take their whey in chocolate-coated form.

German "Protection"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Exactly 99 years ago, Frederich List, the German economist, wrote:

"It is by their customs-union that the German nations now enjoy one of the most important attributes of nationality. That institution, however, must not be treated as perfect, so long as it does not extend to the whole seacoast, from the mouth of the Rhine to the frontiers of Poland, including Holland and Denmark. A natural consequence of that union is the admission of these countries into the German confederation, and of course, into the German nationality, which would thus obtain all its wants at present; that is, fisheries, naval power, with maritime and colonial commerce."

"Belgium needs to be associated with a more powerful neighbor as a remedy for the inconveniences of her small territory and population."

Is Germany, at long last, going to impose upon Holland and Belgium this much-needed "protection?" PHILIP GARELICK.

How Strong The Victor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lippmann's argument, in his column of May 2, that if Hitler wins the war he will not be prevented by exhaustion from attempting further conquests, deserves serious attention from those who are accustomed to lull themselves to sleep with a contrary belief. How strong in a military sense a victor can be at the end of the most exhausting conflict is shown clearly in our own history.

No one can deny that the Civil War was an exceedingly exhausting conflict for the United States. Yet, at its end, the United States was far stronger in a military sense in relation to the European powers than at any other time in the nineteenth century. Napoleon III, the principal dictator of that date, had so few illusions on this subject that he quickly abandoned the regime he had installed in Mexico.

Man and Animals

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest against the anti-humanitarian action of your correspondent, J. S. Bierly, in holding out a cancer cure. He cites "the cure for rabies, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, cancer, etc.," as notable examples of man's triumph over disease.

I also protest the indictment of his sex which this writer, who is "wholeheartedly in favor of excessive cruelty" to animals when "necessary," makes in assuming all humane letter writers to be female. There are millions of humane men in the world.

Says Mr. Bierly, "Animals do not have souls." Does he mean he thinks he has something inside him that is going to flit out of him when he dies and go to heaven and play a harp? M. G.

The Russell Case

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hordes of words have been printed regarding the Bertrand Russell case in both news and editorials. After having read and attempted to digest many thousands of them, it seems to me that your editorial in The Post of May 2 is the most apt and cogent contribution I have seen.

It is particularly difficult at times to discuss, fairly, the logical limitations of academic freedom, taking into consideration the various factors and implications involved in a given situation. You came closer to doing it than has any other comment I have noted.

RAY H. EVERETT.

Washington, May 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fact that you have devoted a full column of your editorial page of May 2 to a discussion of "L'Affaire Bertrand Russell" is clearly indicative of the fact that it is a delicate problem confronting, as it does, the very essence of our democratic principles.

However, I believe your conclusions are not clearly drawn if we are to keep always in mind the true principles on which democracy rests. The belief in democracy presupposes a tolerance for ideas freely expressed even though they are contrary to established mores and customs. You yourself state that Prof. Russell is one of the foremost mathematicians and he was hired by the City College of New York to teach that subject. His views on sex, birth control or pacifism surely could not change or detract from his ability to teach a purely impersonal subject such as mathematics. There is no lechery in logarithms and the quantum theory cannot be so changed or interpreted as to pervert young city collegians' established codes of morals.

That the family as a social institution has been greatly weakened is true. The main reason is economic, not philosophical. Of course, Sigmund Freud did a great deal to show that the family is not the sweet, noble, innocent grouping together that we had been taught it was, but that each member, both parents and children, are beset with complexes, hates, jealousies and desires in their apparent innocent daily relations with each other. Prof. Russell's banishment smacks of Mrs. Grundy and Anthony Comstock and is a discordant note in our song of democracy and intellectual freedom. MORTON J. JACOBS.

That They May See

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On a recent trip to Washington a taxicab driver told me that many of the thousands of people who come to Washington on Sunday excursions go away bitterly complaining that the important and interesting public buildings and Government exhibits in Washington are closed to tourists on Sundays.

He told me that among these excursionists are many poor people who have but one opportunity of seeing the National Capital, and some of them have planned a trip there for years only to leave disappointed because the various exhibits of interest are closed to them.

He further told me that the Government has watchmen continuously on duty at most of these buildings, and that the cost of keeping the most interesting of these exhibits open for week-end excursionists would, in his judgment, be very little.

I suggested to my taxicab friend that he call on the papers in Washington and present his views that the public exhibits there should be open on Sundays. But because he may not have done this, I am taking the liberty of writing this letter. JAMES M. THOMPSON.

Unemployment Benefit Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in reply to Mr. Katz's criticism of the new McGehee Bill (H. R. 9619) which appeared on this page yesterday.

Although Mr. Katz is correct in his statement that the present law enables a worker to draw benefits for a period as long as 26 weeks—after September, 1940—nevertheless, a worker can receive benefits for this length of time only if he has not been totally unemployed at any time within the preceding five years. As the present law works out, a worker cannot receive benefits for more than 12 1-3 weeks in each and every year. Mr. McGhee's bill provides that a worker may receive benefits up to 18 weeks in each year. Moreover, the bill entitles a worker to draw these 18 weeks of benefits for a shorter period of employment than the present law requires for only 12 1-3 weeks of benefit payments. This is a great liberalization of benefits.

Of equal importance to the unemployed worker is the amount of benefits he is entitled to each week. The weekly benefit amount, under the present law, is 40 per cent of the computed average weekly wage for a worker without dependents. The law also provides allowances for dependents up to a total of 65 per cent of the average weekly wage.

Under the present law a minority of workers earning $20 a week can receive a weekly benefit of $13 (65 per cent of $20). Those without dependents can receive a maximum of only $8 (40 per cent of $20).

Under the McGehee proposal the same worker can receive a benefit amount of $11, whether he is married or single. In spite of incomplete data there are good indications that the average weekly benefit amount under the present law does not exceed 50 per cent of the average weekly wage.

The McGahee bill would provide a benefit of $15 to a worker whose average earnings were $36.92, and a benefit of $16 to a worker whose average weekly earnings were $28.85 or more, regardless of dependents. This is a liberalization of the average, although in a minority of cases the maximum weekly benefit is less.

Under the present law, a worker earning an average of $20 a week would be eligible to receive benefits for 26.6 weeks at the rate of $13 a week, if he had a wife and three children, or a total of $345.80. The same worker, if single, would receive benefits of $8 a week, or a total of $212.80. However, these amounts could be payable to a worker only once in every five years. During each year this same worker could, under the present law, draw only 12 1-3 weeks of benefits, at the rate of $13 a week if he had a wife and three or more dependent children, or at the rate of $8 a week if he were single, making total benefits received $160.33 and $98.67, respectively. The McGehee bill would provide this same worker with annual benefits of $198 at the rate of $11 a week for 18 weeks. This is also a liberalization.

Thus this bill, even in these provisions, is far more to the advantage of unemployed workers in the District of Columbia than the present law. Mr. Katz has failed to mention two other liberalizing features of the McGehee bill—namely, the new minimum benefit amount of $6 a week and the new proposals for partial benefits. There is no minimum in the present law, and the existing provisions for partial benefits are obviously less liberal to the worker than the proposals of the McGehee bill.

Mr. Katz's objections are intended to stop the McGehee bill. If he succeeds, his constituents will lose the liberalizations noted above, and the employers will lose the opportunity of having the tax provisions of the District law brought into conformity with those of the Federal Act. JAMES E. COLLIFLOWER.

The Post Impressionist

Fall Of The Capital

The night of August 23, 1814, was a restless one for Dolly Madison. Terrible portents were in the air and the President was not there to comfort her.

She arose early as was her custom and long before the breakfast hour made her plans for the day. Usually there were the menus to lay out for the servants, but that was hurriedly disposed of on this hot, sultry morning.

She fingered the note from Mrs. Jones, the wife of the Secretary of the Navy: "In the present state of alarm and bustle and preparation for the worst that may happen, I imagine it will be more convenient to dispense with the enjoyment of your hospitality today . . ." And only yesterday she had prepared for the gay dinner party. It must be canceled now, of course.

Cockburn's fleet was off the Virginia coast. Cockburn, who had sent that arrogant message that he would make his bow in her drawing room very soon. And with Cockburn's huge fleet of 21 vessels was Gen. Ross with 4,000 men.

The President had gone off with the Secretary of State to inspect the defenses. Vaguely Dolly Madison realized, as all official Washington did, that for all practical purposes there were no defenses. Commodore Burney's poor fleet was no match for the British; men and ships were hopelessly outnumbered.

Dolly hurried from the breakfast table, finished packing the last of the state papers into the big trunks as the President had directed, and saw that the servants carried them to the waiting wagons. Then she took a spyglass and stationed herself at an upstairs window.

She could see little. Washington, it was apparent to all, was in terror. The little city of 8,000 had been in a state of suspended fear for almost a year and now the worst had come.

Shortly before noon Dolly began a long and oft-interrupted letter to her sister, Anna, in Boston, something to occupy her mind, to take up the dreaded hours.

"Since sunrise . . . I have been watching with unwearied anxiety, hoping to discover the approach of my dear husband and his friends, but, alas! I can descry only groups of military, wandering in all directions, as if there was a lack of arms, or of spirit to fight for their own firesides."

There was no lack of spirit in Dolly. "I have always been an advocate for fighting when assailed," she had written Edward Coles, the President's secretary, "though a Quaker. I therefore keep the old Tunisian saber within reach."

But today Dolly knew the "20 tents," the ill-drilled forces of Commodore Burney, the frightened civilians, even her Tunisian saber were poor weapons. Washington was doomed if the superior British forces chose to take it.

They did.

Shortly before 3 o'clock the news came that Burney had been captured by the British at Bladensburg. Outnumbered, he had ordered his ragged army to leave the ships and retreat on land. At Bladensburg he had halted the retreat and faced the enemy. Now, his scattered forces were fleeing into Washington.

They retreated past the city, to Georgetown, and then beyond to Tennallytown. The terrified civilians grabbed their most cherished possessions and fled for their lives. The wooden bridge across the Potomac creaked with the perilous weight of their exodus.

Still Dolly Madison waited in the White House, deaf to the pleas of her friends and counselors to leave. Finally word came that the President would not return, that he was waiting in safety for Dolly, and that she must leave at once.

Dolly Madison was a practical woman. She saw the precious cargo of state papers, including the Declaration of Independence safely on their way to a secure place, then she had her own belongings packed into a carriage.

A last look round the Executive Mansion. Dolly's eyes fell on the Stuart portrait of Washington. That must be saved. Much valuable time was spent in trying to unfasten it while the friends who had come to rush Mrs. Madison to safety chafed at the dangerous delay. Finally, Dolly ordered the outside edges of the frame broken with an ax and then, the picture unharmed under her arm, she fled the city.

French John, the porter who had tried to persuade Dolly to spike the cannon at the gate and lay a train of powder which would blow up the British if they tried to enter the house, sadly locked the Executive Mansion. Then, carrying Dolly's pet macaw, he made his way to the Russian Ambassador's house where he left the key.

By nightfall all Washington was in the hands of Gen. Ross and his men. They fired the Capitol and marched up Pennsylvania avenue, vain, crude and vicious in the ways of military victors.

Meanwhile, Dolly was in hiding at a small house 2 miles beyond Georgetown, and across the river in Virginia the President and Secretary of State Monroe sadly watched the red flares of the burning Capitol.

Before dawn the next morning Dolly was on her way to the prearranged rendezvous with the President—at a tavern 16 miles from Washington. The bewildered, frightened refugees were hostile when they learned her identity and even the President had difficulty gaining admittance. They blamed him for their awful predicament. They believed the end of America had come.

But deliverance was at hand from a strange quarter. Gen. Ross heard rumors of strong American reinforcements moving on the captured city. While a tempestuous rain fell he withdrew his troops and marched back to his ships, leaving the charred ruins of the White House and the Capitol as a memento of his empty triumph. In a few days Dolly and the President were re-established in a new "White House"—the old Octagon house.

The Capital was itself again.

BILL GOODE.

Fair Enough

Identified Foes

BY WHAT REASONING, I would like to know, can anyone arrive at a calm, confident belief that if the Allies lose this war the enemies of the American nation and of the American civilization or way of life will refrain from pressing their conquest against rich but ill-armed, meddlesome but nonmilitary people who regard themselves as the guardians of this hemisphere, but walk their beat with a peashooter? Contrary to superstition, the American people are not soldiers by training, habit or instinct, and their weakness in arms, military equipment and organization and in numbers of men familiar with the military life is a dangerous temptation to the enemies.

Who are the enemies, then?

They have identified themselves.

Russia is an enemy, and has violated the written terms by which diplomatic relations were resumed after a long period of hesitancy. Russia organizes and conducts traitorous activities in the United States under the general direction of the Communist Party. Russia's very reason for living is to destroy the American kind of civilization.

JAPAN is an enemy, and the enmity of Italy has been underestimated or ignored, because colonies of Italians or half-Americanized Italians live apart from the life of other Americans in little close-packed colonies. These colonies are controlled by anti-American agents of Mussolini who co-operate with the Italian consuls, who, in turn, act under orders from Rome or from the Italian embassy.

Traitors holding American citizenship conduct a system of blackmail among the Italian colonists in American cities whereby these people are compelled to patronize merchants approved by the Fascists, collections are taken out of the poverty of the people, and the relief money paid from American taxes, the proceeds being sent to a hostile and treacherous nation abroad which is in league with Hitler, who is in league with the other enemies, Japan and Russia.

These are the enemies.

Germany's enmity is written in all the conduct of the German nation under Hitler, for Brown or Nazi Bolshevism is not less anti-American than the Red. These enemies proclaim their enmity not by direct declarations against the American nation as such but by a plain challenge to the American kind of civilization. They are in revolution against democracy and freedom everywhere, and if the time comes when the British and French are conquered there will be nothing intervening between them and the United States.

BUT PERHAPS someone has information which would tend to show that when this revolution has won in Europe it will not go farther. If so, such information has never been disclosed. The evidence and all experience to date indicate that the revolution is implacable, and the riches of this hemisphere and the opportunities for the type of political operations which the Germans, Russians and Italians employ are at the same time a temptation to them and a warning to the United States.

The belief that these enemies would not invade this hemisphere is only a wish, and Denmark and Norway were nations which used wishes instead of weapons and refused to believe that they could be invaded, because that would be bad.

It is difficult now to imagine the disappearance of the British navy, but it was unthinkable a year ago that Hitler would crush Czecho-Slovakia after proclaiming that he had no more territorial ambitions and wanted no Czechs. Today the Czechs are sub-human, the robot servants of Hitler's chosen people, slaves in their own land. And in Poland, on which Hitler has yet to declare war, as Cardinal Hlond reports to the Vatican, a Catholic priest was tied to a stake, shot and buried in a Jewish cemetery by Jews who first were compelled to kiss the feet of the corpse.

To those who have regarded as cruel the chivalrous Allied temporary occupation of German territory after the first World War the German conduct in Austria, where only God knows how many were massacred; in Czecho-Slovakia, where high school students were executed for uttering patriotic cries, and in Poland, where boys were shot in batches for sniping the invader in an undeclared war, may be cited as reminders that nothing is unthinkable. These are not temporary occupations of territory; these are conquests, and the soil of this hemisphere is not sacred.

Today And Tomorrow

British Issue Goes Deeper Than Cabinet

By Walter Lippmann

ALTHOUGH THE CABINET crisis in Great Britain has been precipitated by the Allied defeat in the Trondheim region, it is a phase, perhaps not yet quite the culminating phase, of a history that started seven years ago with the advent of Hitler. During those seven years the organization of Germany and the mentality of the German people have been dedicated to war. Before the outbreak of large hostilities in September, Hitler had already been at war for more than three years. He had made war in Spain, he had conquered Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and Memel, and by these conquests during a wholly nominal and fictitious peace, he had won the necessary strategic positions for the conquest of Poland.

During those same years Mr. Chamberlain and his predecessor Lord Baldwin made no serious effort to prepare Great Britain for war. They allowed the British people to believe that war could be avoided. Then, when the British people believed them, they pointed to the pacifism of the British people as the reason why they could not prepare for war. Because they themselves did not believe that there would be war, because they allowed their people to believe there would be no war, because they did not construct an air force or raise an army, they convinced Hitler that he could proceed with impunity; and thus by their pacifism, their isolationism, their unpreparedness they made it impossible to prevent the war, they made it certain that the war would begin with a series of Allied disasters and that it could not be concluded until they and their allies and their friends had paid an awful price. This is the issue in Great Britain today. The issue is not the Norwegian campaign but whether men who did not grasp the truth about the world they were living in or speak the truth candidly when it dawned upon them dimly, or prepare their country adequately when the warning signs were clear and there was still time—whether men with this record can command the confidence and can recruit the talent and can enlist the full energy of the peoples who are fighting for their lives.

THE ISSUE which is coming to a head in Great Britain is, however, wider and deeper than the record of Lord Baldwin and Mr. Chamberlain. It is the issue of political democracy itself, not of liberty and the rights of men, but of government conducted by political parties appealing for the votes of the majority. In these seven years during which the free peoples have been drifting into the disaster from which they can now rescue themselves only at hideous cost, certain forgotten or neglected truths have been demonstrated which, were it possible for men to learn anything from the experience of others, might in the end save mankind from a great catastrophe.

IT HAS BEEN demonstrated, first of all, that great democracies cannot live in the same world with great dictatorships. For dictatorship is by its very nature a military government which solves its problems by military means: it is, therefore, always preparing for war, and because it is not answerable to public opinion at home, it can make its decisions secretly and strike when it chooses and without warning.

Democracy, on the other hand, is a system of government in which leaders attain power by pleasing a majority of the voters. Always and everywhere in time of peace there is a majority composed of groups and of separate individuals who, left to their own inclinations, will think of their own grievances, will seek benefits and favors, resenting any leader who dares to call their attention to anything which may call for sacrifice and risk.

Therefore, democracies like Britain and France were incapable of taking measures to prevent aggressive war, and they were incapable of preparing effectively for war until they were actually at war. The consequence is that by the very nature of their democracy they invited aggression, by its very nature they did not understand the mentality and the methods of aggression, by its very nature they were never ready to meet aggression. For democracies become capable of waging effective war only when the fires of war have burned away their sentimental materialism and have re-forged and re-tempered their spirits.

BUT THE FREE peoples of the world—the Scandinavians and the Dutch and the Swiss and our neighbors in this hemisphere and ourselves—will not have learned the lesson of this tragedy if they fix their attention upon Mr. Chamberlain and relieve their anxieties by irritated and self-righteous complaints about British muddling. The British muddling is in fact the muddling of all the democracies, and it is neither useful nor is it honorable for any one outside the British people themselves to forget that there is more to the Norwegian disaster than a British muddle.

Thus it is a matter for the British to decide whether Admiral Keyes is right in saying that the navy could and should have forced its way into Trondheim fjord. But what must not be forgotten by anyone interested in the preservation of democracy is that this question would never have been presented to the British government if the Norwegian democracy had not let itself be surprised and betrayed into surrendering the forts. A handful of Germans held those forts and closed the fjord to the British navy: the Norwegians had the forts and they might, it would seem, have closed the fjord to the German navy, at least until Britain had time to come to their help. It is very easy to sneer at the British for not saving the small nations. But when small nations will not and cannot do something to save themselves, at least there should be no complaining and no sneering about the consequences.

STANLEY BALDWIN
The present British muddle goes back to his regime as prime minister but the issue is even deeper, Walter Lippmann finds.

THERE IS ONLY one ground on which the neutral democracies of Europe and of this hemisphere can decently criticize the record of the Baldwin-Chamberlain conduct of peace and war. That is if they recognize that all this lack of what Mr. Renaud has called "lucidity and courage," this muddle, this unreadiness, this slowness, this shortsightedness, this wishfulness and self-complacency, this hugging of illusions—is not something peculiarly British but is, rather, something universal in the modern democratic world. Then one can criticize the British with a decent humility and without moral blindness.

The muddle of the democracies comes from something deeper than their form of government: it comes from the gradually accelerated destruction of all convictions about the nature of man and his destiny: convictions which attach human beings to something greater than themselves and cause them to care for something more lasting than the moment in which they live. For how can this planet be governed by people who have ceased to believe that there is good and that there is evil; that there are obligations which cannot be denied, who insist, often with a show of learning, that what is most convenient is right and what is most pleasing to hear is true, or at least as true as anything can or needs to be.

Democracy cannot be made to work by people who think it enlightened to be cynical, grasping, concerned with the expediency of the moment, and contemptuous of all standards which transcend it. There is not enough intelligence or character in this way of life to govern a nation successfully. For democracy was founded by men who had the conviction that there is truth and that there is good and evil; it was never meant for men who reject this view of life, and in so far, and it is now very far, as the democracies have fallen into disbelief and unfaith, they are in a desperately dangerous muddle about everything that matters most to themselves and their children.

The Kettering Quiz

(Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors, has offered to American college students a list of questions to which he says he would like to know the answers.)

Question 1.—How can common colds be cured?

A.—I think it would help, Mr. Kettering, if those windows in cars just went up and down and not crosswise.

Question 2.—How do plants fix the sun's energy?

A.—I don't get this. I knew there was a lot of fixing going on all over the country all the time, but I had no idea plants were in the fixing business, too. I will take this up with my geranium. If it acts like it was a fixer I will go into the matter further.

Question 3.—What is friction?

A.—Aw, Mr. Kettering, you know the answer to that one; you have been before Government boards, ain't you?

Question 4.—What makes glass transparent and metals opaque?

A.—You worry too much, Mr. Kettering. You've just got to accept a thing like that.

Question 5.—How do fuels burn in an engine cylinder?

A.—Now, I know you are kidding me, Charlie. If General Motors and the Standard Oil Co. don't know between 'em, there is no use asking college students.

Question 6.—What is magnetism?

A.—Magnetism is what makes one salesman sell a $2,500 open car to a man who wanted an $1,800 closed model.

Question 7.—What is electricity?

A.—This is a fine time for you to come out and admit you don't know anything about that, Charlie.

Question 8.—What is the fatigue of metals?

A.—Fatigue of metals means that a metal gets tired. I have a couple of bumpers that have been through so much they should have cried quits long ago. And I can't get my brakes to work right. Do you think they are so fatigued they are unconscious?

Question 9.—What are proteins, carbohydrates and fats?

A.—They are things my car is full of when my wife and her mother are in the back seat.

Question 10.—What is energy?

A.—Energy is what makes it possible for a fellow who knows nothing about hard work to get into public office and tell energetic people who have worked hard all their lives how to run things.

Question 11.—What can be done with chemiluminescence?

Question 12.—What is a lubricant and how does it work?

A.—Only last week when I bought a new car the salesman gave me a book of instructions on how to grease it and now you, the head of the company, want me to tell you what it is and how it works!

Question 13.—What does a molecule look like?

A.—Not bad; not good. It is a little better looking than an atom, but not so good looking as a calorie.

Question 14.—What are enzymes?

A.—Are they the things just under the carburetor, Charlie?

Memory.

I remember once, so long ago,
A sweet springtime in the rain—
When a boy took me out riding
Whom I never met again.
We drove into the country,
Where the fields with grass were green,
And saw a weathered apple tree—
The first one we'd ever seen.
Its boughs were bridal robed in white,
There in the rain it stood.
The boy stopped near and wondered.
If a few stolen blossoms would Destroy its grace and beauty—
If it still would be the same.
I can smell the rain-washed petals,
But I cannot recall his name!

Green Mountain Boys

ABOUT ALL MOST American schoolboys learn of Ethan Allen is that three weeks after the Battle of Lexington he walked into the British Fort at Ticonderoga, at the head of a gang of Green Mountain boys, and when a British officer emerged, sleepy and pantsless, demanded that His Majesty's forces surrender "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress." That, Stewart Holbrook, a Vermonter himself, has long felt is not enough. So, to restore to American tradition a riotous, blasphemous, alcoholic and likable and effective human being, he wrote "Ethan Allen" (MacMillan, $2.50).

Whether Ethan Allen used the famous words attributed to him at Ticonderoga may be doubted. But he coined them. They first appeared in print, four years after the event, when Ethan Allen wrote his own account of his adventures. No one, in his presence or in his day, dared to doubt them, and the mouth-filling shout was in his style. He was a heretic about revealed religion, but he used the name of his Lord frequently and not always in vain. There was something in the vigor with which the 6-foot-6 frontiersman shouted his curses which led the godly to yield to his persuasions.

After capturing Ticonderoga Ethan Allen moved north with a few woodsmen, intending to take Montreal. It was not, as Mr. Holbrook tells the story, quite as foolhardy a venture as has sometimes been suggested. When Ethan was captured outside the Canadian city he was not in command of the expedition; he was merely a scout leading a casual gathering of a couple of hundred farmers and woodsmen; but it so happened that on the fateful night, when the waters of the St. Lawrence were rough, Ethan got his men across and the regular soldiers never caught up with him. The British did, and he spent his next two years in captivity.

"I have seldom met a man possessing, in my opinion, a stronger mind or whose mode of expression was more vehement and oratorical," a fellow prisoner later wrote of him. "His style was a singular compound of local barbarisms, scriptural phrases and Oriental wildness, and, though unclassic and sometimes ungrammatical, it was highly animated and forcible." John Jay, a cultivated New Yorker, read one of Allen's pamphlets, and said: "There is quaintness, impudence and art in it." George Washington talked with him, and reported: "There is an original something in him that commands attention."

The New York Attorney General had suggested that the Green Mountain Boys make a dicker and accept New York overlordship. "We have might on our side," he said according to Mr. Holbrook, "and you know that might often prevails against right."

"Sir," replied Ethan Allen, "the gods of the hills are not the gods of the valleys." He went back to his hills, rounded up a few friends, painted their faces to look like Indians and chased some New York surveyors and sheriffs out of Vermont. His boys burned the houses of recalcitrant New York settlers. Thereupon Gov. Tryon of New York offered 20 pounds for Ethan's arrest. Ethan posted one copy of the reward poster in his favorite taproom, in the Catamount Tavern, in Bennington, and then, on a bet, rode over to Albany and personally posted another copy in the Benedict Tavern, in Albany, under Gov. Tryon's nose.

THE STORIES of Ethan Allen's drinking are many, overpowering and authentic. Once the New Yorkers captured him; he delivered himself by outdrinking the posse. Some said that his interest in Ticonderoga was chiefly in the 90 gallons of rum there on deposit. In what Mr. Holbrook calls "a great state paper" he solemnly asked the Committee of War at Hartford to authorize use of the ruins for "the refreshment of the fatigued soldiery." Mr. Holbrook doubts that he awaited authorization to begin refreshment . . . Ethan's favorite libation was known as a "stone wall"—rum diluted with hard cider.

Upon Ethan Allen's return from captivity he devoted himself to harassing Vermont Tories as he had previously harassed New Yorkers. He held that Vermont would not need to impose taxes as long as it could confiscate Tory estates, and he did his best to balance the Vermont budget in this Hitlerian fashion. There were times when local courts tended to disapprove of such direct action; in Westminster a judge consulted Blackstone and released three prisoners. Ethan heard of it, stalking into court, confronted the State's Attorney: "I would have the young gentleman know," he said, "that with my logic and reasoning from the eternal fitness of things I can upset his Blackstone, his whitestones, his gravestones and his brimstones." The court did not make the mistake of releasing any more of Ethan Allen's prisoners.

Ethan did his best to induce the Continental Congress to recognize Vermont as an independent sovereignty, but when the Congress shilly-shallied he and his Green Mountain Boys negotiated a separate peace with the British. Mr. Holbrook holds that this was not treason; it was merely spunk. Ethan Allen was no Benedict Arnold; he did not sell out; he was a loyal Vermonter who, in his own words, intended to remain "Independent of Independency" as well as of the King.

He was independent even of Vermont. When, in 1778, he was asked, before taking his seat in the new Assembly, to subscribe to an oath avowing belief in God, future punishment, the Divine inspiration of the Gospels and the Protestant religion, he refused. He said he believed in a First Great Cause, but he denied all "ministerial damnation-salvation and the merchandise thereof" and "the Ghostly tyranny" of the preachers—and he took his seat without the oath. In 1785 he published a stout and lively book entitled "Reason the Only Oracle of Man, or a Compendous System of Natural Religion," which became widely known as "Ethan Allen's Bible."

Stewart Holbrook's book is written at a tempo and in a lively vernacular which Ethan Allen might himself have appreciated. The historians may say that it adds nothing to their information; they may hold that Mr. Holbrook settles all the moot points in favor of Ethan Allen; they will not deny its essential authenticity as a portrait.

Allies' Handicap

By Mark Sullivan

They're Not Ruthless

WHAT THIS COLUMN today attempts is merely a summary of judgments about the European war, held by exceptionally well-informed persons in Washington. They do not all agree. Few of them have fixed opinions. What is here set down is the net of several judgments.

The phrase "lose the war," has a wide range of definition. Ultimate "losing the war" would be complete surrender by the loser, complete ability of the winner to do what he wills with the vanquished. Quite possibly the war's end may take some form short of this ultimate completeness.

Hardly any well-informed person believes the Allies will lose the war in the ultimate sense of, for example, British saying to Germany, "We surrender, do what you will." Hardly anyone envisages a condition in which a German force invades and conquers England. As between two theoretical ultimate outcomes—a German force invading England and an Allied force invading Germany—the latter is the more possible, (though the actual outcome may take neither of these forms).

Complete surrender by the Allies would include one of two fates for the British navy. Either the navy would have been already sunk or made impotent or else the navy would be turned over to Germany as an incident of surrender. Such a fate for the British navy is not now foreseen by any thoughtful person. And so long as the British navy remains intact, Britain does not need to surrender in the complete sense. The navy has not been materially impaired by the war so far. The superiority of Britain's navy over the German is greater today than at the beginning of the war, for the German navy has suffered material loss. Also, as respects mercantile ships, Britain has greater tonnage today than when the war began, due in part to her present possession of some ships formerly belonging to Norway and Denmark. England is still able, comfortably, to import the food and other essential materials she needs.

THE NAVY is not only Britain's supreme defense. It is also her principal weapon of offense, in the sense that the navy makes possible the blockade of Germany. About the ultimate effect of the blockade, there is difference of opinion. Necessarily so, because efficacy of the blockade is dependent upon other developments, including the action of the Balkan states, Italy and Russia. Some good judgment, though not all, says the blockade will win. This judgment includes and is based upon an assumption that the relation between Germany and Russia will not turn out in such a way as to permit Germany to have unlimited access to supplies from Russia. Russia's attitude is an important "if".

This brings us to air power. It is mainly by air power that Germany hopes to overpower the British navy, or otherwise compel Britain to surrender. In air power, when the war began, Germany was greatly superior. She is still superior. But time works for the Allies—time, and another factor—the Allies have practically unlimited access to planes made in America in addition to what they make themselves. In time, the supply of planes from America will be greater than Germany can match. The date when the Allies can have superiority in the air may be longer deferred than is now supposed. It takes time for American factories to develop quantity production, time to ship the planes to Britain and France, time to train pilots. But, given time, Allied superiority in the air seems probable.

The largest handicap of the Allies is their unwillingness to be ruthless, while the Nazis scruple at nothing that will serve their purpose. An illustration is Norway. Three months ago, when Finland was still fighting, the Allies were willing to help her. But to help Finland it was necessary for the Allies to cross Norway. This the Allies would not do without Norway's consent. Norway was so insistent upon her neutrality that she would not let an Allied soldier set foot on her soil, even to pass across to Finland.

GERMANY, on the other hand, asked no consent. Germany descended upon Norway suddenly, violently. At that point Norway cried out to the Allies for help. Fearing Germany, but not willing to be protected in advance, Norway was only willing to be rescued after it was too late.

The situation of Norway is duplicated all over Europe. Along the Western Front and in the Balkans small neutrals lie between the nations at war. All fear that Germany will seize them in order to attack the Allies. But none seriously fear the Allies will invade them in order to attack Germany.

This attitude of the neutrals makes it difficult for the Allies to take the offensive, except on the short Western Front, where German and Allied territory actually meet. On the other hand, Germany can take the offensive by invading Holland or Belgium or Switzerland, or any of several Balkan countries.

This advantage of offensive is great. This war involves intricate cooperation of many factors. It involves speed, "blitzkrieg". This can be accomplished by the side taking the offensive, choosing any of several spots for it, and planning it for months in advance. It is less possible to the side which must take the defensive and cannot mobilize its defense until after the blow of offense has fallen.

South Dakota Refunding Offer

New York, May 8 (AP).—A Wall Street underwriting group headed by Lehman Brothers announced today an exchange offer to holders of $6,239,000 State of South Dakota refunding bonds to complete a $20,425,000 debt refunding program.

The exchange offer provides that $6,239,000 of outstanding rural credit bonds due between 1940 and 1950 may be exchanged for a new refunding bond maturing between 1950 and 1959, at interest ranging from 2¾ to 6 per cent.

Railway Completes Interest Cut Plan

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—The Chicago & Illinois Midland Railway Co., a subsidiary of Commonwealth Edison Co., today announced completion of arrangements to simplify its capitalization and reduce interest charges through refunding of its entire $6,950,000 funded debt with serial notes. Interest savings will be applied to hasten retirement of the new refunding debt so that capitalization will consist entirely of common stock by June 1, 1956.

still have her help."

While relinquishing her volunteer service directorship, Miss Boardman continues as secretary of the American Red Cross, a post she has held since 1919, and member of its central committee.

That the national organization is preparing for "the worst" was indicated by action taken at the final meetings yesterdy.

A resolution was adopted pledging support to a Red Cross appeal for a European war relief fund, if and when necessary.

Continuation of international Red Cross cooperation through the International Committee and the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva also was voted. Attention was called to the fact that more than $3,000,000 in relief had been sent to Finland through the league by 38 national Red Cross societies.

Mrs. August Belmont, member of the central committee, who spoke at the volunteer workers' lunch, pointed out that the Red Cross nursing organization will not be caught unprepared again as it was in 1917.

Record Registration

Registration this year passed all previous attendance records, with 2,896 senior and 852 junior delegates.

Attention was called to the expenditure of $1,437,717 by the American Red Cross for relief in European belligerent nations and to the receipt of $800,000 from the American public voluntary contributions.

"The delegates here assembled express their appreciation and commendation of this record of accomplishment which has been achieved without a national appeal for special funds," a resolution said.

"We recognize, however, that the time is approaching when the discharge of the responsibilities imposed on the Nation's official relief agency by the great disaster of war cannot be continued without greater resources than are now available and that it may become necessary to launch a national campaign for contributions for foreign war relief.

"The volume of distress in the affected nations is constantly increasing and will assume much greater proportions as existing resources are exhausted or destroyed.

2 Other Flags Presented

"In such circumstances, the American Red Cross has an obligation to assist wherever possible and to serve as the medium through which the generosity of the American people may be expressed."

Besides Connecticut, Ohio and Nevada received State honor roll flags, donated and presented by Miss Boardman. Representative Robert F. Jones, of Ohio, accepted his State's banner and hte Nevada flag was presented to Senator Key Pittman.

Principal speaker at the final general session was Rabbi Samuel Goldenson, of New York, who emphasized that civilization has "developed every art except the art of living together as human beings."

"Today we live in a state of fear," he declared. "We do not know what tomorrow will bring; where strife, animosity or brutality will strike again. We have not learned to live together. One man has not learned the value of the heart, the soul and the body of another.

"We are supposed to be civilized, yet we are living in the time of a war waged with a deadliness, cruelty and brutality never before known in history."

In a tribute to Miss Boardman, he quoted Emerson: "An institution is the lengthened shadow of a person." Continuing, he said: "But I shall change that to say that an institution is the lengthened spirit of a great soul, inspired by love, devotion and loyalty to human beings."

Red Cross Societies Increase

Chairman Norman H. Davis adjourned the convention with a reminder that at the close of the World War there were only 20 Red Cross societies, compared with 60 national organizations today. He said he expects to go to Geneva in September to preside at the meeting of the board of governors of the League of Red Cross Societies, when all 60 nations will be represented.

Because of the war emergency, the convention voted to leave to its central committee the designation of its 1941 meeting place.

The American Junior Red Cross, concluding its separate meeting, announced the election of nine boys and girls from various sections of the country as members of the newly organized National Delegates Advisory Committee.

The advisory council will represent 8,000,000 boy and girl members of the society. Its newly elected members are Layton Whitehead, Jacksonville, Fla.; Joseph Crasson, Freeport, N. Y.; Terressa Little, Albany, N. Y.; Harold Meek, Shreveport, La.; Robert Jenkins, LaCrosse, Wis.; Robert Rath, Omaha; Earl Smith, Chicago; Richard Wheaton, Redondo Beach, Calif., and John J. Cleary, San Francisco.

Senate Subcommittee Adds $1,405,624 to D. C. Supply Bill but Averts Real Estate Tax Rise

tor Overton may call it up for Senate approval tomorrow afternoon.

While the Senate bill total exceeds budget estimates by approximately $90,000, actual expenditures for which the taxpayers must pay will fall $62,078 under these estimates because of the inclusion of a $150,000 revolving fund in the bill.

This revolving fund, which will be used to start the operation of the food stamp plan, will be taken out of the general revenue fund rather than become a charge against the relief appropriation. The District, however, will be compensated for the advance, once the food stamp plan gets into full swing.

The $100,000 increase in the relief appropriation will be absorbed in Administrative expenses because of an increase from $95,300 to $194,960 for personal services. Of this amount, $49,960 will be used to certify eligibles for relief, and $25,000 will be spent in administering the food stamp plan and distribution of relief milk.

The $150,000 will be expended in purchasing the first lot of food stamps and will be administered by the welfare department.

Pension Fund Increased

The Senate subcommittee raised the old-age pension appropriation from $575,000 to $595,000 and the needy blind pension from $40,000 to $50,000. The monthly blind pension was raised from $30 to $40 a month, but the old-age pension allowance was left unchanged.

The health department was given $30,130 additional for increasing the staff and equipment of the southwest health center, including two dentists and an assistant, and eight more general public health nurses.

Gallinger Hospital fared particularly well, getting back $9,540 disallowed by the House for personal services, plus 10 nurses, 10 attendants, and 4 technicians, with a total of $36,620.

Besides cutting out the proposed foster homes, the subcommittee allowed $3,675 for the preparation of plans for a new Children's Receiving Home with an authorized cost of $175,000, to be built on District-owned land.

The Senate bill also restored budget estimates of $20,000 to complete a walled yard at the jail and $25,000 for construction of a bakery at Lorton.

The salary of the poundmaster, cut several years ago from $3,060 to $2,000, was raised to $2,400, and funds were provided for the purchase of a new dog-pick-up truck equipped with a radio to take calls.

Restoration of the recreational set-up to the status quo came as a surprise in view of the agreement between the Commissioners and the Board of Education on the transfer to the latter as directed in the House bill.

The change was effected, it is understood, because of the demand made by Secretary of Interior Ickes and the National Park Service that jurisdiction be split between the board of education and the parks service.

Besides making provision for the employment of 16 teachers for instruction of handicapped children, as campaigned for by the Post, the subcommittee appropriated money for the hiring of two vocational educational directors, an assistant principal at the Woodrow Wilson High School, and three safe-driving teachers for two high schools and a second vocational school. The Abbott school now has a teacher for this purpose.

Civil Service Investigation Reopens Today

Ellender to Hear Employe's Charges Of Discrimination

By Edward Ryan

After a year of quiet, the Ellender Committee investigating the civil service will meet today to hear again one of its first employe witnesses.

The employe, Miss Mary E. North, of the Navy Department, will appear before the committee at 1 a. m., in room 457, of the Senate Office Building.

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the special committee, said he would investigate reports that Miss North, following her appearance last year, had been demoted to a stenographers' pool.

Her testimony last year told of a mixup with her superiors over efforts to appeal to the Civil Service Commission about her job classification.

The new hearings, first planned to run through tomorrow and Saturday, will be limited to morning meetings today and tomorrow, and continued next week, it was announced.

On the program tomorrow, it was said will be the case of another woman employe who complained to the committee that she was driven to a nervous breakdown by persistent demotions.

Senator Ellender plans to question personnel chiefs next week about present methods for handling employe grievances and about their reactions to a plan for testing in the District an independent board to review employe appeals.

A report of the committee's findings, and recommendations on the Civil Service will be prepared after the newest hearings close, and will probably be ready within the next two weeks, it was announced.

Collect Autographs Of Presidents

Out of its files, the Archives' staff has collected, they believe for the first time, autographs of all the American presidents written while in office.

The signature of William Henry Harrison, President for only a month, was hardest to find. In other displays of Presidential autographs, Archive officials said, the Harrison signature used was dated before he became President.

The collection is part of an exhibit, set up in the Archives Building, for the Eighth American Scientific Congress starting Friday.

The rest of the show is a group of letters and proclamations by famous Latin-American leaders.

A letter from Agustin de Iturbide announcing that he had become Emperor of Mexico, written to President Monroe in 1822.

A letter by General San Martin, famous Argentine liberator, announcing a victory in his Chilean campaign in February, 1817.

Government Jobs Reach New High

Government employment in the District rose to a new high in March, although the payroll was lower than in January, the Civil Service Commission reported yesterday.

The list of Federal employes here increased by 872 during the month to a total of 128,643. The local payroll was $22,727,942 in March, an increase of about $145,000 over February, but under the $2,802,049 January payroll.

Heaviest boost in local employment came in the Commerce Department with hiring of new census workers, while other increases were reported in the War, Navy, Treasury and Interior departments. Federal Works lost 325 employes.

1,500 Cases of Pneumonia Believed Averted

With serum and the drug sulfapyridine as its twin weapons, Pennsylvania claims to have prevented an estimated 1,500 pneumonia deaths in the last six months, the State's secretary of health reported here yesterday.

Addressing the opening session of the State and Provincial Health Authorities' annual conference, Dr. J. J. Shaw presented figures demonstrating how one of the leading causes of death can be forced to yield to a determined crusade.

The State furnished sulfapyridine and serums free to physicians treating persons unable to pay for medical service. There were 8,000 such cases since November 1, 1939, when the plan for mass care was initiated.

Claims 1,200 Lives Were Saved

Among the 6,500 about whom reports have been received, there were only 701 deaths, Dr. Shaw said. "Untreated, this group would have required at least 1,950 tombstones as monuments to the pneumococcus," he declared. "In this small series, therefore, we are safe in assuming that 1,200 lives were saved.

Equally encouraging to the delegates, representing all 48 States, the District and Canada, was the report of Dr. Stanley H. Osborn, Connecticut health commissioner and chairman of the Industrial Hygiene Committee.

Where only $100,000 annually was being spent on industrial hygiene activities five years ago to protect 12,000,000 workers, $1,000,000 will be expended in this field in 1940 and 40,000,000 workers will benefit, he said.

Other speakers yesterday included Dr. Halbert L. Dunn, chief statistician for vital statistics of the Census Bureau, who outlined the bureau's efforts to improve reporting of births; and Willard C. Smith, Social Security Board statistician, who told how death reports are being speeded up under a plan instituted by the board.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Self-Supporting Wife Resents Husband's Financial Handouts to Shiftless Kin; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: To begin, let me say that I want to do the right thing, but I resent being imposed upon. My husband is 42 and I am 26. We have been married two years. I have worked since we were married. I have never scorned any kind of work, either before or since I married, although some jobs have been wearing on my nerves. Since getting married I have bought all my clothes and paid by doctor's bills; and for several months I paid my own room and board, although my husband meets this expense now.

The problem is this: My husband gives money to his relatives every month, for food, clothing and doctors' bills. They think nothing of asking him for $25, $35 or $60 at a time, and they always get it. They never repay him and seem to think it is his duty to give them money when they need it. He is only temporarily employed and has no savings account, and yet he speaks frequently of wanting a child!

I realize jobs are hard to find, but his relatives could find work if they would try. They might not find just what they would like, but then neither have my jobs been exactly what I wanted . . . When I say anything to my husband about his giving money away, he replies that what he does with his money is his own business. But isn't it my business, too?

He carries no insurance for me, which didn't worry me until one month when he paid $25 on his brother's insurance policy. And I happen to know his brother never pays his debts. When his niece was in the hospital he paid her bills, but when I am sick I must pay my own bills. When I am not working, he gives me a $5 monthly allowance. He seems utterly unconcerned about me; but I feel that he must care for me, having married me.

We live with my family and he admits they have always treated him all right; but I cannot say that his family has always been nice to me. Do you think he is justified in putting his folks before me? If and when his job expires, I will have to share my small earnings with him, as he hasn't been prudent enough to put aside even $10 a month against a rainy day. And what about possible children he might have? Please give me your opinions and advice.

NEGLECTED.

Three Plans of Action Open to Complainant

DEAR NEGLECTED: According to Scriptural authority, a man when he marries is expected to "cleave to the one woman," forsaking all others—which surely suggests that his first allegiance is to his wife. However, your husband's disposition to the contrary is something which should have been discovered and evaluated before you married him; since there is little you can do at this late date to change the trend of his nature.

Helping his family without hope of repayment no doubt had become a fixed habit with him long years before you knew him. His ability to meet their chronic need probably gives him an indefinable but reassuring sense of consequence that he cannot conceive of relinquishing—and particularly not to oblige a new wife who waited until after marriage to condemn the whole arrangement and all those who are party to it.

I daresay he married you primarily because you seemed so self sufficient; so well able and cheerfully willing to take care of yourself and lighten his load besides. I can imagine that he is as disappointed as you are disgruntled, at the way your respective secret fond hopes have been betrayed.

Rather than condemn him for his thriftless and prejudiced support of his own kin, it might be more productive of good to assess and correct your own mistakes in judgment and action since marriage. In taking up residence with your family, for instance, you set the stage for a continuance of his bachelor policy with his relatives. He unconsciously reckons that you have your family to fall back on in time of emergency, and so he feels free to confer upon his kin an equivalent measure of security. Yet, had he been obliged to strike out entirely on his own to finance the marriage, he probably would have decided for himself to close his purse against his family's improvident demands.

What to do now? You have a choice of three courses of action. The one course is to make a valiant effort to change the situation, by insisting on a home of your own, however modest, with your husband at the head of it, paying maintenance costs and investing toward future security. Into this picture a baby might be introduced, since he wants children. The coming of a baby might do more than anything else to school him in financial prudence.

The second course of action would be compromise. That is to say, philosophically adjusting yourself to the situation "as is," on the theory that your husband's daily companionship is worth whatever price you have to pay for it; that he is geared to a hand-to-mouth existence; that he is now too old to be reformed; and that whatever income or investment security you are to have as his wife must be personally produced.

The third course of action would be dissolution of the marriage. If the kind of life your husband has to offer robs you of self-respect, peace of mind and hope for the future, you should summon the courage to break with him and create another kind of life, by and for yourself, that is more to your liking. It is unfair to wrangle with him about his behavior, when you are neglecting altogether to do anything constructive—either by action or mental attitude—to improve your position or condition.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Polishing of Silver Necessary for Beauty

Few opportunities to display one's taste and individuality can be compared with that which is offered by the hostess' table. But no matter how beautiful the linens, how lovely the flowers and china, if the silver is not polished the table setting is not the best.

Silverware used daily should be polished as it needs it; but once a week check over the silver to see if any polishing is needed. When polishing with silver polish, rub it carefully with a reliable brand of silver cream and then wash in warm suds. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

Voted Most Popular Spring Coat

Collegians are mad about this coat, and although spring seems already to have come and gone, leaving little time for coat wearing, this is one topper that has been definitely voted in—from now until fall. The perfect campus coat, it is called the "knockabout" and is ideal for vacationers. Young, carefree and jaunty, this exceptionally nice covert cloth comes in slate blue or natural color. The lines undeniably have been filched from Joe College's favorite coat, with its box cut for convenient slipping over sweaters, skirts and such. The yoke and sleeve lining is water-resistant. There are two flap pockets and a third small one for coins

Planked Shad Makes a Decorative and Delicious Dish

POTOMAC shad is now very plentiful. It may cost a few more cents than "foreign" shad, but it is worth the difference considering that it is but a half day from the water when you get it at market.

Izaak Walton was very ardent in his praise of shad, and said, "This dish of meat is too good for any but anglers, or very honest men." This is a statement made in the Fish and Seafood Cook Book, compiled by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown, that has been recently released by the J. B. Lippincott Co. Following are their directions for planking shad.

Planked Shad

Remove head and tail from a 3-pound shad, split it down the back and wipe with damp cloth. Brush a pre-heated hardwood plank with olive oil and fasten shad on it, skin side down. Put in hot oven and baste often with a little melted butter. Bake it chiefly on the flesh side, and lower oven temperature after first 3 to 4 minutes. After fish has cooked 20 minutes, remove and pile hot mashed potatoes around edges of plank, brush potato border with beaten yolk of egg mixed with 2 to 3 tablespoons milk and set plank back in hot oven to cook brown 6 to 8 minutes. Sprinkle fish with salt and pepper, and dot with butter, or spread with a little creamed butter. Put small bunches of cooked asparagus on fish beside potato; decorate center of dish with capers, cress, peppers, and serve with Hollandaise sauce.

Pink's Rage for Decorations

These last few seasons have been pink years decoratively speaking, with all the range of the pinks at the top of the fashion picture.

Learning to Wear Corsets Would Stop Complaints

There's an art to putting on corsets that few women have mastered. Complaints against the buying and wearing of the "flesh pinchers" would cease if women would learn how to wear and how to take care of them.

Here are some tips compiled from a recent issue of "You" magazine on how to wear and care for your corset:

"The wear—Don't climb into your corset with your shoes on; find out where the waistline is, as some aren't clearly marked; be sure your stockings aren't too long, as they may throw your corset out of line. Hoist all-in-one high above the waist and then slide it down and the flesh will go to your hips. Tug a cloth girdle up in front and down in back to place it and roll an elastic one up, the way you would a stocking. Don't lace it too tight, as it makes your garment shorter and you'll have to keep tugging it down. If your bra is too pointed, moisten and mold it over a bust pad and it will take the shape you want. Remember your posture, for a corset won't do everything.

"The care—Have at least two corsets for every-other day wear, as they will last longer and give better service. Wash them carefully once a week and every few days in summer, as they absorb perspiration and odors. Add a few drops of deodorant cleaner to the water when you wash it to keep it fresh. Turn your corset inside out before washing it and be sure the water is lukewarm, too slowly or it may have a tendency to shrink. Press it with a warm iron while still damp, as a too-hot iron is death on elastic." Scrub it with a little brush in sudsy water and never rub it together or use a cake of soap; it may crack or lose its tension.

World of Fashion For 1940 N. Y. Fair Nearly a Sell-Out

New York, May 8.

LAST YEAR the poor showing of our fashion business at the World's Fair was a sin and a shame, owing to pronounced coyness on the part of space renters in the projected building. But what a different picture today! The World of Fashion, for the 1940 edition of our Flushing Fantasy, is almost completely rented, and the story behind this happy result is proof of the result of a forthright innuendo when applied to a vital spot.

Alice Hughes

Style in all its aspects is practically this town's leading industry, like the movies in Hollywood. But the unfortunate bashfulness of most of the ladies and gentlemen involved kept it entirely hidden from eager visitors. This year the hot potato was tossed to go-getting Mary Lewis, who has been vice president of two of Fifth Avenue's leading shops, and is now running her own business for the high-class trade.

To her dismay she found the fashion people still distressingly shy, and after a lot of brooding and hard work she decided on some cooperation. Miss Lewis petitioned headquarters at City Hall, and in no time at all Spike Four-Alarm La Guardia, our little mayor, responded with horse, foot, artillery. A big meeting was called, but it got nowhere with breakneck speed.

And then the voice of a high official was heard to remark that traffic on Fifth Avenue was getting past the impossible point. In fact, it might be a good notion to suspend completely all parking privileges on that colorful highway.

For some reason a new spirit of helpfulness and good will pervaded the chamber, and it wasn't long before the dearest of Miss Lewis's "World of Fashion" prospects began asking for the fountain pen and some preferred space.

Hair Brushing Does Wonders As Beauty Aid

Regular and Careful Combing Also Good For Health of Scalp

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU have beautiful hair to start with, you wouldn't be caught, even on a rainy day, without your hair at its best. But if your hair is just ordinary, there is not so much incentive to spend time and energy on it—and you have your doubts that it would do much good, anyway!

But you are wrong, and the movie stars prove it. Simply because they are forced to take care of their hair, it gets lovelier as time goes on. Of course, their careers depend on the care they give their looks, while with you it's optional. But the way they change plain hair into a shining glory shows it pays to make the best of your locks.

Of first importance is regular brushing—for cleanliness, circulation and exercise. For quite some time after the permanent wave came in, we stopped brushing, probably because never having had naturally wavy hair we didn't dare take chances of brushing it out! But now we find that the more the hair is brushed the deeper and more natural the permanent appears.

Brushing Is an Art

In brushing, a good part of the stroke should actually touch the scalp. Start with the side of the brush, sort of roll it around, gathering up hair as the brush moves along the scalp, and then turn the brush up and out. As you near the end of the stroke, give the hair an extra tug with the brush to pull at the roots. That's exercise!

If you would brush your hair correctly for 3 minutes by the clock, night and morning, 6 minutes a day, your hair would have so much luster and beauty in a couple of weeks that nothing could induce you to neglect it again.

How often the hair should be washed depends on the scalp. If the scalp is oily the hair may require washing once a week. With a dry scalp it may be enough to wash the hair every two or even three weeks, provided it is brushed daily with an absolutely clean brush to remove any dust and dirt. There are beauties who never wash their hair at all—they dry clean it! On the other hand, some of the movie beauties wash their hair every day.

Why Hair Falls Out

If your hair has a tendency to fall out it may be caused by lack of brushing, your diet, or your general health. Nobody can promise that a certain food will give you lovely hair. We know that protein is the element needed for building material throughout the body. It is the chief component of muscles, tissues and organs on the inside, and of skin, hair and nails on the outside. The complete protein foods—milk, eggs, cheese and meat—are the basis of the well balanced diet, and without doubt may be said to contribute to hair beauty. In addition, however, you must have the fruits, vegetables and whole grains needed to balance the menus.

Suburban Wanderlust

She—Did you hear about the Chumleys? They're moving to Geranium Heights!

He—But they just bought their place here.

She—I know, but they really needed a bigger place, and after the Ramms got such an adorable house in Geranium Heights they thought they'd go over there and look, and so——

He—A real estate agent got hold of 'em!

She—No! No! They found this perfectly darling house with two bathrooms with sunken tubs and a black tiled lavatory——

He—And so now they give up a perfectly good new house in a perfectly good neighborhood——

She—I wouldn't say that! Everybody knows Sapling Grove is running down.

He—Why is it running down? Theres not a house here over two years old!

She—Well, everybody's moving out. Yook at the Flashers!

He—Theyre not going, too!

She—I told you a week ago they were building this perfectly marvelous Colonial house in Dandelion Acres, with three bathrooms.

He—But there's only two of 'em!

She—But the Chumleys have three bathrooms over in Geranium Heights. Anyway, the Flashers haven't any downstairs powder room here.

He—So what?

She—Well, it's very embarrassing to entertain without a powder room. That's one of the troubles with this house——

He—Say, now, don't start anything like that! We're going to stay right here!

She—Oh, there go the Jeepers with their dog! She said they were going to walk over to Tulip Terrace this afternoon.

He—Whats' that?

She—Oh, that marvelous new addition everybody's moving to.

He—Everybody?

She—Well, the Trumpits and the Flitters. They have these perfectly adorable modernistic bungalows. I wish you could see the Trumpits' salad bar!

He—I don't want to see it!

She—And the Flitters have a glass-inclosed shower, and the kitchen is all glass bricks with a set-in stove, and there's a cunning little breakfast room with Babylonian murals——

He—How's Jack Flitter going to pay for all of that?

She—Oh, he got some kind of a marvelous trade-in on his house here. They're really making money by moving, she says. Besides, it doesn't pay to live in an old neighborhood——

He—I told you Sapling Grove was only two years old!

She—Yes, but the houses are getting out of date. All the houses in Tulip Terrace have mezzanine entrances and those on Geranium Heights have the cathedral chimes. I'd love for you to see them——

He—I told you we were going to stay right here!

She—I don't know what we'll do when Aunt Nannie comes—it'll be so crowded.

He—In this big house?

She—Big? Why, you can hardly turn around in the kitchen. Now, if I were building again I'd have a big kitchen and at least four bathrooms.

He—Four!

She—The Ramms have four—in fact, nearly everybody in Geranium Heights has. It's a very selective neighborhood.

He—What's the matter with this neighborhood?

She—We-l-l, of course, there are some people here who are not—well—exactly our type. And now, with our friends going——

He—You don't mean you want to move!

She—Oh, no; but I just thought—well, it was such a beautiful day and we ought to take Rajah out for his walk and——

He—Yes?

She—Well, I just thought it would be nice to go over by Geranium Heights and see how the Chumleys house looks.

He—All right. But we're not going in——

She—And then on the way back we might walk around by Tulip Terrace——

He—Oh, well! Come on!

Informality Rules Meem And Stoddard Parties

Former Event Honors the Morgans, Of Tulsa, Who Are Being Widely Feted; Accent at Stoddard's Is on Author's New Book

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SPRINGTIME PARTYING went along at a lively clip yesterday afternoon when a number of Capitalites were out and about at a couple of pleasantly informal cocktail fetes.

Guests who gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem soon found their way to the garden and lingered there most of the time. Originally planned as a very small get-together, the event turned out to be of sizable proportions and pleasantly initiated a series of such parties. The second will take place next week.

Hope Ridings Miller

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Digges Morgan, of Tulsa, Okla., who have a host of friends here and are being widely entertained during their visit. Flocking around them yesterday were many old acquaintances and a number of relatives, several of whom lingered on past the final hour set for the fete.

At the same time, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard were giving an equally pleasant party in their Georgetown home. Although this was an indoor affair, the springtime accent was noted in the masses of apple blossoms and boquets of tulips used as decorations.

Standing with the hostess were her guests of honor, Igor Cassini and his pretty wife, the former Austine McDonnell. Mr. Stoddard was here, there and everywhere, and everybody on hand seemed to be asking him about his forthcoming book on Germany. Friends who have read parts of it in manuscript form attest that the tome is bound to be a best seller.

Among those who dropped in for the party, between 5 and 7 o'clock were Dr. and Mrs. Walter A. Bloedorn, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Acheson, Maj. and Mrs. Melvin Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Fontaine Bradley, Henry Persons, Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Dickens, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf Walling, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roscoe Drummond, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Railley.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in many years, there's a girl in the Keyes clan. Frances Parkinson Keyes' eldest son, Henry Wilder Keyes and his wife are the parents of a daughter born a few days ago in Boston. The mother is the former Betty Main, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Main, of Denver.

Mrs. Keyes, the proud grandmother, was in New York when she heard the good news, and straightway she took herself over to one of Gotham's smartest shops to buy a complete and elegant ensemble for the newest member of the Keyes family. The child has been named Gretchen Margretta.

Meanwhile, her grandmother returned to Washington and has been busy moving from her apartment at the Monmouth to her recently purchased home at 602 Cameron street, Alexandria. Occupied at one time by the Lawrence Washingtons, the house was built in 1815; and unless I miss my guess, when its present owner gets through with it, it will be one of Alexandria's choicest show places. Mrs. Keyes already has restored the gas chandeliers that first cast their glow about 1830.

Mrs. Keyes is planning a series of parties— well, two at least—to take place within the next few weeks. But they will have to be sanwiched in between sieges of work on a novel, which is due to be finished in the summer.

LARGELY LITERARY: If you want to keep up your part of current tea table talk, you'd better get busy and read Michael Strange's book, "Who Tells Me True." You're going to hear a lot about it around Washington because the author is widely known here. Miss Strange in private life is Mrs. Harrison Tweed, the former wife of John Barrymore and the mother of Diana Barrymore—as if you didn't know. Anyway, her spirited account of the people and places that have been woven into the tapestry of her life is well worth reading . . . The distaff side of the Presidential campaign, along with some highly diverting sidelights on what goes on around Washington these days, is described in an article in the current issue of the Independent Woman. Written by Elizabeth May Craig and entitled "Politics Bloom in the Spring," the piece contains some choice anecdotes, including the one about "Cotton Ed" Smith, who, when someone in the Senate cloakroom said that President Roosevelt is his own worst enemy, replied vehemently: "Not while I'm alive he isn't, b'God" . . . The same magazine carried a profile of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, as its Woman of the Month . . . And of course the whole town will be talking about the magazine article on the State Department's Mrs. Ruth Shipley, written by Washington's own Maxine Davis and appearing in this week's Saturday Evening Post.

Sister-Team Sets Debut Date

Hessler Studio.

Two more names have been added to the long list of debutantes for next winter. The Misses Mary Theresa (Peter) and Marion Norris (above) will bow to society during the Christmas holidays. Daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, they are a sister-team, sure to succeed. On their more immediate calendar is some charity work. They are on the Junior Auxiliary committee for the benefit tea dance at the Sulgrave Club on Saturday. Proceeds will go to the work of poor churches in Washington

Brig. Gen. Miles Again Feted By Col. Crane

Second Luncheon Attended by Aides Of Embassies

Brig. Gen. Sherman Miles, who recently returned here from London, where he was Naval Attache at our embassy to become Chief of Army Intellience, was guest of honor at two luncheons given this week at the Mayflower by Col. John A. Crane. Invited to meet Gen. Miles were military and air attaches from the various embassies and legations and their assistants.

Guests at the second luncheon, which took place yesterday, were Col. Pedro Zanni of the Argentine embassy, Lieut. Gen. Friederich von Boetticher and Lieut. Peter Riedel of the German embassy, Maj. Gen Saburo Isoda, Lieut. Col. Arato Yamamota and Maj. Toshikazu Suzuki of the Japanese embassy, Gen. Adolfe Infante and Col. Lucio Gaeta of the Italian embassy, and, from the Soviet embassy, Maj. Paul Barayev and Maj. Constantine Ovchinnikov.

Also Lieut. Col. Rufus S. Bratton, Lieut. Col. W. E. Shipp, Lieut. Col. N. E. Fiske, Lieut. Col. Hamilton Maguire, and Lieut. Col. Truman Smith.

Present at Tuesday's luncheon were Col. Armando R. Pareyon and Lieut. Francisco Castillo Najera jr., of the Mexican embassy, Maj. Felipe Munilla of the Cuban embassy, Col. Emmanuel Lombard and Col. Rene P. Weiser of the French embassy, Col. Teh-Chuan Kuo, military attache of the Chinese embassy, Lieut. Col. Jose Bina Machado of the Brazilian embassy; the Chilean air attache, Group Captain Rafael Saenz, the Chilean military attache, Lieut. Col. Ramon Alvarez, and from the same embassy, the assistant military attache, Maj. Guillermo Marin, and the assistant air attache, Comdr. Ismael Sarasua.

Also Col. R. V. Read of the British embassy, Lieut. Col. Eduardo Leonomez of the Colombian embassy, Col. Mirke Burya of Yugoslavia, Col. Dimitru Petrescu of Rumania, the Finnish military attache, Col. Perzilliacus, Capt. Tauno Veikko Karvonen of the Finnish legation, and the Canadian air attache, Air Commodore W. B. Kenny.

Col. John Magruder and Lieut. Col. Charles Busbee were also present. Col. and Mrs. Magruder will entertain at tea this afternoon in honor of Gen. and Mrs. Miles.

Nancy Goldsmith Becomes Bride Of H. L. Neugass, of New Orleans

Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld Performs Ceremony Before Improvised Altar in Mayflower; Couple to Live in Louisiana

In a setting of white lilacs and ferns, Miss Nancy Goldsmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Washington, was married last evening at 7 o'clock to Herman Leo Neugass, of New Orleans, son of Mrs. Leo Neugass. The Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld officiated.

The ceremony took place in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower before an improvised altar banked with white blossoms and palms. The aisle was lined with tall standards filled with the flowers.

The attractive bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown made with a white lace bodice and a full marquisette skirt which terminated in a circular train. Her long tulle veil fell from a mantilla of white lace caught with a pearl clasp, and she carried an arm bouquet of purple orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Miss Patricia Ann Goldsmith, was maid of honor, and the matrons of honor were Mrs. William B. Thalhimer jr., of Richmond, Va. and Mrs. Robert Goodman. The Misses Shirley Pearlman and Molly Schwartz served as bridesmaids.

The attendants were attired alike in marquisette frocks with lace inserts in various shades of pink, ranging from shell to deep rose. Their frocks were fashioned with full skirts and tight bodices, and they carried large leghorn hats filled with pink flowers.

Moise Dennery Is Best Man

Moise Dennery of New Orleans was best man, and the ushers were Charles F. Goldsmith, brother of the bride, Arthur Newmyer jr., Gerson Nordlinger, William B. Thalhimer jr. and Charles Thalhimer of Richmond, and Edwin Neugass of New York.

A seated dinner in the Mayflower ballroom followed the ceremony. Mrs. Goldsmith had chosen for the occasion a gown of grey lace with a corsage of camelias, and the bridegroom's mother wore dusty rose chiffon and lace.

After the Southern motortrip, the couple will reside in New Orleans. When she left for her honeymoon Mrs. Neugass wore a beige and brown checked coat over a beige wool dress with a matching small hat and brown accessories.

Many Guests From Out of Town

The bride, who is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Washington civic leaders, was graduated from George Washington University. Mr. Neugass is an alumnus of Tulane University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and O. D. K. fraternity and is an internationally known track star.

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William Thalhimer of Richmond, Dr. and Mrs. Newton Stern of Memphis, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Wolf of Pittsburgh, Mrs. S. L. Joseph, Samuel Landauer, Miss Lois Landauer, Mrs. I. A. Neugass and Stephan Kaufman of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gebhart, Mrs. Blanche Wittgenstein, Mrs. Max Emerich, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lansburgh and Mr. and Mrs. Bernet Burgunder of Baltimore.

Miss Redway Is Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Redway, jr., of Glen Arden, Longmeadow, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dora Mason Redway, to Charles Eliot Pierce, of Milton and Ludlow, Mass.

The news is of wide interest here as the prospective bride is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Goodrich Parker, of Washington and the niece of Chauncey Parker, E. Cortlandt Parker, and Mrs. George Howe, of this city.

Miss Redway attended the MacDuffie School in Springfield and St. Timothy's School in Catonsville, Md. She was introduced to society in Boston in 1938 and is a member of the Junior League. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. A. J. Redway, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Ossinning, N. Y., and a great granddaughter of the late Cortlandt Parker and the late Edward H. Might, of Newark, N. J.

Mr. Pierce is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Pierce, of Milton. He was graduated from Milton Academy and from Harvard with the class of 1936 and is a member of the Hasty Pudding and Owl Clubs. He is the grandson of Mrs. Charles Eliot, of Chestnut Hill and of the late Dr. and Mrs. M. V. Pierce, of Milton, and a great grandson of the late Charles W. Eliot, for many years president of Harvard. He is with the Ludlow Associates, of Ludlow.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

FASHIONS IN SIGHTSEEING, like in everything else, would seem to change. A few years ago all the out-of-town constituents wanted their Senators and Representatives to arrange a visit to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to see the money made. Now, says Representative Edith Nurse Rogers, most of her callers say their ambition is to see P. Edgar Hoover's "G-man" exhibits at the Department of Justice.

"WHAT SUPERB HOSTS unattached men in Washington can be," writes Nika Standen in a current magazine on the subject of diplomatic entertaining here. She goes on to point out that five of the major embassies and legations are run by men on their own.

Everybody knows what delightful hosts Count Potocki, Count de Saint Quentin and the other bachelor envoys in Washington make. But one Washington diplomat thinks that every foreign Ambassador and Minister ought to be married, preferably to an American.

"They could cultivate the wives of public figures" he explains. "After all, everybody knows that in this country it's the women who have the influence."

In her article Miss Standen tosses a bouquet at the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian. "Nowadays", she writes, "many people come to the British embassy whose opinions are as influential as their social standing is indifferent."

ACCORDING TO A New York columnist, one reason actors and musicians like Mrs. Roosevelt is because she pays them a week in advance for their services at White House parties. But, though the Roosevelts have broken many precedents, there's one they haven't touched—artists at the White House still donate their services.

ODDS AND ENDS: The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz showed the first Technicolor movies of the Belgian Congo ever made the other night at a party at the Embassy. They were filmed by a Canadian from McGill University . . . Senator Theodore Green is rapidly improving from his recent operations, but for the present his only visitor allowed is his secretary. We hear that his rooms at the hospital are loaded with flowers sent by admirers.

AS THE FIRST from Massachusetts to preside over the Republican National Convention in 20 years, Representative Joseph Martin may be putting the unlucky finger on whoever's nominated.

When Lincoln was named candidate in 1860, a Massachusettsite presided—and everybody knows what happened to Lincoln. Twenty years later a man from Boston headed the convention and Garfield was nominated. After taking office he was murdered in Union Station and a notice of his death tacked onto a tree on the White House lawn.

Not until another two decades did a Massachusetts man preside at the convention and then McKinley, later assassinated, was chosen. The next Massachusetts man presided in 1920, when Harding was nominated. He, of course, died in office.

"But at least we Massachusetts men get 'em elected," says Mr. Martin when he tells this story.

MANY WASHINGTONIANS are already planning to make the short trip to Philadelphia to take in at least one day of the Republican convention. The best time to go is toward the end of the week when the candidate is nominated. That makes for the most excitement.

Mr. Groseclose, Author, Feted

Elgin Groseclose, author of the prize-winning novel, "Ararat," was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon by the Chancellor of American University and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray at their home on the campus. Mr. Groseclose received his doctor's degree from the university in 1928.

At the tea table were Mrs. Edward S. Brashears, Mrs. Edward F. Colladay, Mrs. Frederick M. Davenport, Miss Grace Dunham Guest, Mrs. Walter A. Jones, Mrs. David Lawrence, Mrs. Edgar Morris and Mrs. Robert Rich.

Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Ralph Starr Fowler, Mrs. Eugene Anderson, Mrs. Alton A. Lindsey, Mrs. Stafford Cassell and Mrs. Raymond J. Spaeth.

Dr. and Mrs. Ernest S. Griffith, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Woods and other members of the faculty also assisted.

Egyptian Minister Is Host at Dinner

Guests included Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Minister of Greece and Mme. Diamantopoulos, Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, the Charge d'Affaires of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Lady Chalkley, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Joseph J. Larkin, vice president of the Chase National Bank in New York City, and Mrs. Larkins; Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Goirau, Mrs. William Kirlin, Lady Maureen Noel, the First Secretary of the Egyptian Legation and Mme. Toulba and the Agricultural Attache of the Legation and Mme. Bahgat.

Mrs. Randall Hagner entertained at a dinner party last evening at her residence on R street. Also hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who entertained at Dumbarton Oaks, their home in Georgetown.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Dr. Hu-Shih, Chinese Ambassador, will go to New York today to speak tonight at a dinner of the Economic Club of New York.

Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of Senator Austin, of Vermont, has discontinued her "at homes" for the season.

Senator and Mrs. Josiah Bailey have as their guest Mrs. Walter P. Sprunt, of Wilmington, N. C.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Lyman Cox have cards out for an "at home" on Saturday, May 18, in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, jr.

Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, jr., wife of the Assistant Attorney General, gave a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of her mother, Mrs. J. A. Northrop, and her sister, Mrs. Harold R. Wolfe, of New Haven, who are visiting her for several weeks.

Ramon Beteta, chairman of the Mexican delegation to the eighth American Scientific Conference, and Senora de Beteta, have arrived in Washington and are at the Hay-Adams.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE FIRST WARM DAY in Virginia brought hundreds of people out to the Unison-Bloomfield Horse Show. The countryside here is now at its best, and in the acres of orchard land the pink petals, which should have been out for last week's Apple Blossoms Festival, are all the prettier for being late.

Miss Anne Bullitt, daughter of Ambassador "Bill" Bullitt, was among the horseshow exhibitors from Foxcroft School. She did not ride, owing to her recent accident while hunting, but attended the show.

MISS JUNE HANES, riding instructress at Foxcroft, marshaled her nineteen charges. Among them were the Misses Alice Brisbane, Averill Penn-Smith, Elizabeth Hubbard, Grace Cutting, Louise Dilworth, Nancy Redmond, and Francisco Villa.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Faithful Heart won the model hunter class, and Ernest Redmon took his usual number of blue ribbons home. Hot lunches were served during the recess hour, and after the show Christopher Greer entertained a number of friends at a late afternoon party at his home, Old Welbourne.

SEEN AT THE SHOW or the party—or both: Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh of Berryville and Miss Sue Bolling of Charlottesville, who rode entries from the Greenhalgh stables; Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee of Warrenton, who spent all day at the show, as Mr. Larrabee was judging; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church 2d, Miss Jane Wilbur, Alex Calvert, King Stone jr., and George Timmons of Groton, Mass., who is visiting the Churches.

Rosemary Ward And Mark Tyson Married in Miami

Mrs. Rosemary Ward, of Middleburg, and Mark Tyson, of Philadelphia, were married in Miami, Fla., on Tuesday, and flew from there to Nassau, where they are spending their honeymoon.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Newell Ward, of Middleburg and Southampton, Long Island, and is a sister of Newell Ward who recently married Miss Bettina Belmont. The couple met early this spring in Nassau where the bride was spending a month with her mother.

Mrs. Tyson has recently redone and made over a garage apartment on the estate of her mother, which the couple will use for a hunting box during the fox hunting season in Virginia. Mrs. Tyson was recently divorced from George Blaborn, of New York.

George Cornwell, Of D. C., Will Wed Charles Town Girl

Miss Edith Talbott Strider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Strider, of Charles Town, W. Va., and George Gilbert Cornwell, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Cornwell, of this city, have completed plans for their wedding at 4 o'clock on May 25 at the Presbyterian Church, Charles Town, W. Va.

Miss Elizabeth Cornwell, sister of the bridegroom, will be the maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. Raymer Bennett, of Washington, will be the best man. Ushers will be James Robertson and Olan Wilkinson, both of Washington; Samuel Strider and David Strider, of Charles Town, brothers of the bride.

Self Help Exchange Gains Listed

Board of Directors Receives Annual Report at Meeting In the Stone Home

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Progress in the work of the Self-Help Exchange and a large increase in the number of persons it has served during the year were reported yesterday by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, executive director, at the annual meeting of the board of directors, held at the home of Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, 2340 Wyoming avenue.

Introduction of a Medical Guide System in the organization, a productive season for the Self-Help Exchange Farm, near Kensington, and increase from 287,307, the total number of hours worked in 1938-1939 to 427,556 last year, were highlights in the annual reports. The participants are paid in scrip with which they purchase products and services provided by the exchange.

Mrs. Doyle, comparing the activities of the past year, May 1, 1939-April 30, 1940, with those of the previous year, May 1, 1938-April 30, 1939, pointed out that the average monthly intake of unduplicated individuals was 595 for the year 1939-1940, as against 488 for the year 1938-1939; and the total hours worked was 427,556 for the past year as against 287,307 for the previous year. She also reported that the total number of workers having received employment at the Exchange up to April 30, 1940, was 3,544, an increase of 1,442 workers in the past year.

According to Mrs. Doyle's report, 1,214 cash jobs were secured for participants during the past year as compared with 410 during the previous year. Two new projects, the chemical project and the mattress making project, have been added to the field of operations since the last annual meeting, and new types of work have been undertaken in many of the shops; for example, layettes and maternity apparel are being made in the sewing department this year for the first time.

Claude Owen, chairman of the farm committee, reported that the Self-Help Exchange Farm experienced a highly productive season during 1939. General produce harvested (beans, tomatoes, greens and potatoes), amounted to nearly 2,000 bushels, not including 350 dozen ears of sweet corn, 500 bushels of feed corn, and 2,000 ponds of broom corn for use in the Exchange Broom Shop. The estimated value of farm production for 1939 amounted to $2,400.00. All produce of the farm is sold to the participants for scrip or used in the Exchange cafeterias.

Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly, chairman of the professional relations committee, in his report, explained the Medical Guide System, inaugurated at the Exchange, whereby the volunteer family doctor establishes his traditional confidential relationship with the participants, appraises their individual needs, and then proceeds as in private practice to requisition the facilities deemed necessary for physical rehabilitation.

Each month since the inauguration of the service a volunteer family doctor has served at the exchange and to date over 100 participants have benefited by this arrangement. Dr. Mattingly reported further that through an arrangement with the Dental Society of the District of Columbia, participants may be supplied with dentures when and if recommended by the Medical Guide. Eight participants have been the beneficiaries of this plan.

While these services have been a philanthropy on the part of organized medicine, the self-respect of the participants has been preserved by accepting payment in scrip which has been used by the Health Security Administration for such of its enterprises in which it is negotiable.

Hugh V. Keiser, president, presided at the meeting and other reports on the work accomplished during the past year were submitted by Robert Woods Bliss, chairman of the finance committee; Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, chairman of the salvage committee; Miss Mae Helm, counsel for the exchange, and Mrs. Thomas Parran, chairman of the public relations committee.

The board of directors for the coming year was elected. Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., chairman of the membership committee, announced the nominations of the following who were elected to the board: Jacob Baker, Mr. Bliss, Miss Selma Borchardt, L. T. Breuninger, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, George B. Galloway, Mrs. Goldsmith, Miss Helm, Miss Elizabeth B. Howry, Mrs. Emil Hurja, John Ihlder, Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, Mr. Keiser, Dr. Mattingly, Mrs. Morgenthau, Mr. Owen, Miss Belle Sherwin, Frederick P. H. Siddons, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. Stone, Michael W. Straight and Sidney F. Taliaferro.

Mrs. Emory Scott Land Is Chairman; Book Drive to Be Opened May 20; Auction to Raise Funds to Aid Seamen

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor was hostess yesterday at tea at the Washington Club for members of the Washington committee of the American Merchant Marine Library Association, of which Mrs. Emory Scott Land is chairman.

Plans were made for a book drive the week of May 20, during which Washingtonians will be asked to contribute books to be distributed to seamen of the merchant marine and to Coast Guard and lighthouse stations. There will also be an auction of rare books, original editions and those signed by the authors found among those contributed in previous drives, on Monday, May 20, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss at 4:30. The proceeds will be used for the purchase of technical books which some of the seamen need for special courses. Invitations will be issued for the auction and tea.

Members of the committee present yesterday included Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Walter Heiberg, Mrs. Daniel Knowlton, Miss Alma Ruggles, Mrs. David Sellers, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, the retiring chairman; Mrs. Edward Wilber, Miss Eleanor Van Valey, Mrs. William B. Poland.

P. E. O. Elects Miss Reynolds As President

New Leader, Other Officers Are Installed By Mrs. Wilfred Jones

Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds, of Chapter D, was elected president of the District Chapter of the P. E. O. Sisterhood yesterday afternoon at the closing meeting of the two-day convention. She succeeds Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, of Chapter H, who has served for two years.

Other officers are: Mrs. T. A. Hutton, Chapter A, first vice president; Miss Hazel B. Nielson, Chapter O, second vice president; Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, Chapter K, organizer; Mrs. F. C. Weick, Chapter E, recording secretary; Mrs. Ward Buckles, Chapter N, corresponding secretary; Miss Jane Mackay Anderson, Chapter J, treasurer.

They were installed by Mrs. Wilfrid Jones, of Portland, Oreg., supreme president. Mrs. Jones also presented the retiring president a certificate giving her a seat in the supreme chapter.

Chapters K and L extended the invitation for the convention next year.

The District chapter voted to establish a welfare fund to aid members in case of need and Chapter E gave $25 as a beginning for the fund.

A welcome was extended to the three members of Chapter B who have belonged for 50 years. They are Mrs. Mabelle Sterns, Mrs. Lou P. Woodruff and Mrs. Effie A. Williams.

Chapter A, which this year celebrated its fortieth anniversary, conducted the model meeting yesterday morning. Mrs. Roy C. Potts is president.

Mrs. Edward Burke to Present Girlhood Friend, Mabel Jensen, in Violin Recital

AN EVENT TO which Mrs. Edward R. Burke has been looking forward for a long time will take place tomorrow when she presents a girlhood friend, Mrs. Mabel Woodward Jensen, in a violin recital at the Congressional Club, of which she is president. Today Mrs. Jensen will be guest of honor at a luncheon Mrs. Burke is giving at the club.

Years ago, when Mrs. Burke, then Nettie Flinn, went from her home in Dekalb, Ill., to Chicago to study music, she lived at the home of an uncle, across the street from the Woodworths. She studied piano under Rudolph Ganz and also violin at the Chicago Musical College while Mabel Woodworth was studying violin at the American Conservatory of Music—and they became close friends.

When Mrs. Burke was married, Mabel Woodworth played at her wedding. Then the Burkes moved to Omaha, and when Mabel Woodworth was married she and her husband went to Council Bluffs, Iowa, living just across the river instead of just across the road from her friend of school days.

In the meantime, she had studied in Germany and returned to this country to become a member of the teaching staff of the American Conservatory in Chicago. She also taught for two years at Coe College, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

She has continued her teaching and concert work and played as a member of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra until it was dissolved. Among her pupils have been Mrs. Burke's daughters, Viola and Beatrice.

Mrs. Jensen's concert tomorrow at the Congressional Club will be her first in Washington. She will be accompanied by Willa Semple.

CONVENTION BOUND—Miss Vella A. Winner, director of press and publicity for the General Federation of Women's Clubs and editor of the official magazine, the Clubwoman G. W. F. C., leaves Saturday for Chicago to speak at a magazine round table to be conducted in connection with the Illinois State Federation meeting there.

The round table at which she will speak is to be in charge of Mrs. Fred R. Luskin, chairman of the press committee for the General Federation and editor of the Illinois Federation News. The 52-page golden jubilee edition of this publication has just been issued.

Miss Winner expects to spend the week-end with relatives in Alliance, Ohio, and to go from Chicago to Milwaukee for the General Federation Council meeting convening there the following week.

BENEFIT PARTY—Mrs. Harry Millstein was hostess last night at a benefit card party at her home 3523 Sixteenth street, proceeds of which will go to the Senior Mizrachi, women's organization for the assistance of refugees settling in Palestine.

LOYAL LEGION ELECTS—Mrs. Hugh Cairnes Smith has been elected president of the District Society, Dames of the Loyal Legion, to succeed Mrs. David J. Rumbough, who served following the recent death of Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker.

Other officers include Mrs. Jerome J. Wilber, first vice president; Miss May S. Clark, second vice president; Mrs. W. J. Tidball, recorder; Mrs. Warren C. Kendall, treasurer; Mrs. G. S. Bales, registrar; Miss Lilla B. O'Donnell, chancellor; Mrs. Maud S. Western, chaplain; Mrs. Merrick Williams, historian, and Mrs. E. S. Alvord, assistant recorder.

Women Earn $1,500 to Pay On Club Debt

Everything from the sale of dolls and dill pickles to the making of ice cream and cookies went into the contribution of $1,500 toward the building fund of the Congressional Club announced yesterday at the May business meeting.

For weeks, members from the various States have been making their "dollars earn dollars" for the project. Reports were presented with cash and checks yesterday, totaling slightly more than $1,500. The amount will be applied to the debt of $14,000 which remains on the recent addition to the clubhouse.

The New York delegation, for which Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, past president of the club, reported, led the list of States, with a contribution of $355. This represented individual donations and the sale of matches.

Mrs. Malcolm C. Taylor, of Georgia, turned in one of the largest individual contributions. $120 from the sale of bedspreads. Mrs. Charles Clason, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Dudley White, of Ohio, presented $148, proceeds from handmade doilies. They worked a total of 406 hours and made 162 of the mats.

The Pennsylvania members contributed $182, of which $135 was made by Mrs. Robert Rich through the sale of blankets, and her ability as a cake and cooky maker.

Hawaii, whose only member is Mrs. Samuel King, added $117.75 to the fund with a benefit tea.

A nose for news— and a stomach for whiskey

THE CITY ROOM knows him no more.

He has passed on to some private and personal Nirvana of his own, where every typewriter has all its keys and a bottle waits at every four-alarm fire.

And the only epitaph he would have wished is this..."He was a good reporter."

His greatest, and most unconscious, characteristic was an insatiable curiosity. He seethed with questions. Nothing was as it seemed, and he picked frantically at surface facts until the shell broke and the muck, or the treasure, underneath was exposed to his greedy mind.

▶ With or without the vine leaves in his hair, his sense of news verged on the occult. He knew bishops and gunmen, politicians and pickpockets, and treated both the great and the sham with the same casual impertinence. His mind was a brimming pool of assorted facts, which he turned on and off like a tap.

Under a glass-hard exterior, he had a heart as soft as mush. He rooted fiercely for the underdog, perhaps because he was so much the underdog himself.

He got paid very little—and when other people talked of the "profession of journalism" his was the loudest laugh.

▶ Sometimes he grew out of it. Sometimes he became a famous columnist, a noted author, or even an Editor. But mostly he grew old at 45. And when he saw a new youngster in the City Room he figured the best thing he could do was to take him across the street and say to him: "Kid, what the hell are you doing around here? Get out of it. It's a lousy business..."

But the youngster never took his advice. Year after year thousands of new youngsters decided there was only one thing in the world they wanted to be—a newspaperman. And the American press grew up.

The old-time reporter has passed from the scene. But he left behind him a legacy of incalculable value to the nation. For he established the tradition of good reporting as the foundation of a free press.

What happened? Who did it? Where? When? Why?

▶ As long as these questions can be asked by good reporters free to write the truest and frankest answers they can find, freedom will have survived.

True, since the days of the old-time reporter, both men and minds have changed. The reporter of today is a better man than his predecessor. He has to be. He is better-educated, better-paid. Neither he nor his editor can get away with the cheap sensationalism of yesterday's Yellow Journalism—and neither of them insists on any special license to get drunk. The reporter's passport today is respected everywhere, and he is expected to live up to the code of his profession.

▶ Too, America's appetite for news has grown sharper. It takes some 25,000 local reporters and 1,888 daily newspapers to gratify it. Altogether, 300,000 men and women are engaged in telling you what is happening in the world, with all the trimmings you're accustomed to—comic strips, women's pages, photographs, society notes, advice to the lovelorn, columnists, cartoons, editorials, crossword puzzles.

But whatever the extra values newspapers and magazines may offer today, one thing remains the same...the heart of a free press is still the good reporter. It is still the man with the nose for news, as peculiar and authentic a possession as the eye of a painter or the ear of a musician.

▶ Perhaps good reporting is the reason, above all other reasons, why the Newsmagazine has come to occupy such a high place in the brain and heart of the nation.

For the Newsmagazine has, as grist for its weekly mill, all that has been found out by all the world's good reporters. Sometimes these good reporters are TIME's own correspondents or legmen. Sometimes they work for one of the great Press Associations. Sometimes they are obscure people whose nuggets have been buried on page 10 of some little-read publication. Sometimes they are men and women in TIME's home-office, who—at one end of a wire—probe a reporter three hundred or three thousand miles away until a few confused facts become a well-ordered, living story.

The world is the good reporter's hunting ground. No man can tell where a nose for news may pick up the scent. Stories may break in the White House, the Holland tunnel, the Balkans, the South Pole, Number 10 Downing Street, or 1913 Central Avenue, South Bend.

▶ No man can anticipate TIME's stories. The Newsmagazine is as unpredictable as the warring, struggling, creating, cock-eyed human race, whose historian it is. Only this is certain...

In today's world the true adventures of your fellow humans, gathered and told by good reporters, make more absorbing reading than anything in the world of make-believe.

Bolles Calls District Rule Inefficient

Says City Is Filled With Firetraps, Streets Are Filthy; Urges Unified Police

Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican, of Wisconsin, declared last night that Washington is filled with firetraps, that its Police Department is "terribly inefficient," and its streets are "filthy," because it lacks a responsible government.

He told the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association that he is "the only person in captivity that ever asked for a job on the House District Committee," and devoted more than an hour to a caustic analysis of governmental inefficiencies in the city.

"The difficulty in Washington," he said, "is that there is no responsible, directing head of the District government. What Washington needs is an elected council and a city manager.

"The District Committee can't do anything. It has the leeway of a handcuffed man with an Oregon boot who is locked up in a jail cell. If the Commissioners or the Budget Bureau disappproves of a piece of legislation, it doesn't have a chance."

Suggests Unified Police Force

"We haven't done a thing this session. We've just done some awful heavy thinking. I'd like to see the District Committee abolished and me along with it."

Bolles charged that no member of the District Committee was consulted by the Appropriations Committee before the District appropriation was sent to the floor of the House. This, he said, was typical of the divided responsibility that pervades all parts of the District government.

"For example," he added, "I think the police department is terribly inefficient—and I don't care who hears me say it. The responsibility lies not with the personnel so much as with the laws that provide for five ploice forces with divided authority—the Building Police, the Park Police, the Metropolitan Police, the Capitol Police and the FBI.

"They don't work in harmony, and it is impossible for them to do so."

He suggested an unified police force, and the abolition of the Park Police.

Bolles said he had received more than 300 letters complaining about "firetraps" in the District.

"I've inspected 47 houses myself and found grave dangers," he added.

The association adopted a resolution opposing the Seccombe civil rights bill for the District. The resolution stated that the bill "would create antagonisms and destroy the unusual and liberal benefits now enjoyed by those the bill erroneously assumes are under discrimination."

Neely Bill Favored

The bill, which was introduced two months ago by Representative James Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio, is now before the Judiciary subcommittee of the House District Committee. It provides that no person shall be denied entrance to athletic games, theaters, restaurants and other public places because of race, religion or creed.

Another resolution put the association on record as favoring the Neely bill (S. 280), which would eliminate block booking of motion pictures. The resolution urged that motion picture exhibitors be made independent of outside control in their selecion of films.

The association expressed opposition to the widening of Rhode Island avenue on the south side between Twentieth and Twenty-fourth streets northeast "at this time." Members indicated they would not object to widening the avenue along its entire length.

The meeting was held in the Woodridge sub-branch library at 2206 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

North Randle Highlands

The North Randle Highlands Community Citizens Association will push its fight for a new school for that area in the next deficiency appropriation bill, Archie C. Edwards, president, declared at a meeting last night in the portable school.

"We have 1,000 new houses that weren't here last year, and we have 50 boys and girls ready to enter kindergarten next fall with no place for them to go in the community," said Edwards.

"School authorities have recognized our need for the last five years. But the appropriation is always taken out of the District budget. We will now try to get enough money to buy the land."

Members also discussed need for adjusting the traffic light at Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues southeast. At present the light places motorists who try to turn off Pennsylvania avenue across a traffic lane at a disadvantage.

Fifty members taken into the association in the last month were entertained at a reception arranged by Mrs. Pratt Chroniger. Mrs. Chroniger, it was said was responsible for "a majority of the new memberships."

Central Labor Union

The Central Labor Union, council of District A. F. L. units, will actively oppose the proposed construction of the Abbott Vocational School on the Brentwood Park site, already approved by the House, it was announced last night by Arthur Schoenthal, legislative director of the union.

The central body will seek to block the bill in the Senate and substitute a site at Thirteenth and Upshur streets northwest, which it termed as being more accessible for the students than the location in Brentwood Park, between Union Market and New York avenue northeast.

The Abbott School now is located in the old Central School at Seventh and O streets northwest.

John N. Verkouteren Is Declared Winner In Woodward School's Declamation Contest

His Recitation Follows Debate On Japan Boycott

John N. Verkouteren last night was declared the winner among seven school boy orators in the annual declamation contest of the Woodward School at the Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street.

Verkouteren's prize winning recitation of "If They Gave Me a Gun" by Kenneth Hummell, a denunciation of the consequences of war, followed a debate on the subject of an American boycott of Japan by two school literary societies.

Addressing the more than 200 parents and guests in the audience, Coleman Jennings, Community Chest president, stressed the value of moral courage and service to one's fellows as vital in a "troubled world."

Second place in the declamation contest went to Alan Prosise, who took as his topic "The Greater Man," by Grier Patterson. Waltman Allen took third place with Patrick Henry's "Call to Arms," and honorable mention went to Charles Stevenson, who recited "The Highwayman" by Alfred Noyes.

In the debate, negative appeals to "avoid an American Munich in the Far East" evoked affirmative replies of "Why be a silent partner to the Japanese conquest?"

The three judges gave the verdict to the Jefferson Literary Society, which upheld the negative proposition.

Bible Class At Calvary Elects Brett

Charles W. G. Brett last night was unanimously elected president of the Calvary Ben's Bible Class at its thirty-first annual banquet at Calvary Methodist Church.

Also named were John W. Fisher, teacher; Edwin Dice, associate teacher; Theodore La France, first vice president; Clarence E. Werback, second vice president; Loy H. Brodie, treasurer; W. Elwood Baker, secretary; Olin B. Tharp, assistant; J. William De Grange, historian; William B. Wells, chorister, and Ralph M. Wolfe, pianist.

Delivering the principal address, Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, paid tribute to the faith of Christian forebears. "We Christians of today climb on the shoulders of the men who moved out yesterday," he said.

Lauding the faith of his father, for more than 37 years a circuit preacher in Georgia, Dr. Rustin said "whatever there is in my life comes by his faith in God . . ."

Edward M. Hall and Gilbert Cribb, class members who died in the past year, were eulogized. Mr. Hall was first teacher, serving in 1910 and 1911.

Health Plan For Americas Is Projected

A program to stimulate health-consciousness and improve health in Latin America was adopted yesterday at the final session of the Pan American Conference of National Directors of Health, held in the Pan American Union.

The proposals provide for encouragement of school garden planting, annual celebration of health day, intensification of the specialized training given to health office personnel. The nutrition committee was instructed to prepare a series of balanced menus to serve as a basis for diet planning.

The delegates, who closed the parley with a dinner in the Chevy Chase Club last night, voted to hold its next conference in Rio de Janeiro in 1945.

Guests at the dinner, given by Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, director of the Pan American Sanitary Bureau, included Ambassador Franscisco Castillo Najera, of Mexico; Ambassador Gabriel Turbay, of Colombia; Minister Leon De Bayle, of Nicaragua; Minister Horacio A. Fernandez, of Paraguay, and Dr. Enrique Lopez-Herrarte, Guatemalan Charge d'Affaires.

Many of the delegates will remain over in Washington to attend the eight-day meeting of the eighth American Scientific Congress, which opens tomorrow.

Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union, was named yesterday to head the union's delegation to the congress.

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, May 8.—A score of military, air and naval attaches of Pan American countries, resplendent in multicolored uniforms, today reviewed a full dress parade of 2,400 midshipmen on Worden Field.

Altogether some 5,000 persons, including 700 members of the Garden Club of America, and other tourists, witnessed the parade.

McGehee Bill Again Hit By Labor

League of Women Voters Enters Fight For More Liberal Benefits in Measure

United labor interests let loose new bombardments against the McGehee bill to amend the District unemployment compensation act yesterday on the eve of a special meeting of the House District Committee to act on a subcommittee recommendation.

The League of Women Voters entered the fight on the side of the unified C. I. O. and A. F. of L. for more liberal benefits in the legislation as the Washington Central Labor Union attack Board of Trade figures analyzing benefits of the latest McGehee bill.

After comparing the benefits of the existing law and the McGehee bill, the Central Labor Union said:

"The District (McGehee) bill will result in a duration much shorter than 18 weeks for the average worker. It will definitely eliminate the possibility of extended benefits which some District workers have already enjoyed.

Tenth Received Benefits

"Approximately one-tenth of the workers in the District were receiving benefits for 18 weeks or more in the last benefit year. . . . In neither minimum amount nor duration does the proposed District bill come up to the highest standards which have been adopted in several States.

"It is not sufficient to adopt a benefit schedule which is only in some respects more liberal than the present law. . . . When the District has built up, as it has, so large a reserve fund there is no excuse for measuring the adequacy of revision in the benefit structure by the old law."

The Central Labor Union pointed out that the Board of Trade's analysis showed the minimum possible benefits under the McGhee bill and the minimum payable under the present law. The maximum would be paid under the McGhee bill, the union added, only if the worker had 13 full weeks of employment in at least one quarter.

"Experience indicates that the average worker does not work a full calendar quarter in most years," the union commented.

Taking as an example a worker whose weekly rate is $20, the union said that if he worked 30 weeks in his base year he would get $11 a week, or a total of $198. If he had worked only eight weeks, however, his benefit rate would be $7 a week and his total $112.

Benefit Rate of $10

"Under the present law this same worker would be entitled to a benefit rate of $10 a week, and if he had unchanged employment in the previous base year he would have a duration of benefits up to 16 weeks, or possibly more, if he were one of those who was entitled to extended benefits up to 26.6 weeks."

Mrs. M. O. Lorenz, president of the District Chapter of the League of Women Voters, said the executive board of the organization had adopted a program which embraced the following for submission to the House District Committee:

Reduction of the pay roll tax from 3 to 2.7 per cent with salaries above $3.000 exempted.

The Eberharter provision for selecting employes of the Unemployment Compensation Board on a merit basis.

Provision for an advisory council.

Assurance of cooperation between the board and the Employment Center.

Benefit provisions as follows (a) $125 required earnings in base period, (b) $20 maximum weekly benefit, (c) one week waiting period, (d) 20 weeks duration of benefits, and (e) $6 minimum.

Sophomore at Roosevelt High Captures Cup at Tulip Show

Episcopalians Study Moving Offices Here

Washington Diocese Has Convention At St. Thomas'; Secretaries Named

The possibility of transferring the headquarters of the presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, the Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, from New York to Washington was considered yesterday at the annual convention of the Washington diocese.

No conclusive action could be taken on the proposal, however, as final determination, it was said, must be made by the general convention of the church at Kansas City in October.

With the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, presiding, the gathering of 150 lay and clerical delegates from parishes in the District and four nearby Maryland counties reelected as secretary of the diocese the Rev. H. Allen Griffith.

Appointed assistant secretaries were the Rev. Edward S. Dunlap, executive secretary of the diocese; O. R. Singleton, the Rev. M. Mills Perkins, rector of Grace Church, Georgetown, and Thomas Spence, Bishop Freeman's secretary.

The convention, meeting in St. Thomas' Church, also elected the following deputies to the general convention:

The Rev. Ze Barney Thorne Phillips, rector of Epiphany Church; the Rev. Franklin J. Bohanan, Rock Creek Parish; the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, St. John's Church; the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral; Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, Charles F. Wilson, O. R. Singleton and Thomas E. Robertson.

An off-the-record talk by Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, was a feature of the convention fellowship dinner last night where delegates were welcomed by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas'.

75 Y. M. C. A. 'Old Timers' Celebrate Annual Reunion

More than 3,500 collective years' participation in the Young Men's Christian Association was celebrated last night by 75 members at the annual "Old Timers" reunion at the central Y. M. C. A.

Gold stars marking 50 years service in the organization were awarded to three men, among those longest active in the local unit. They were the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, of 611 Maryland avenue northeast, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church; Henry M. Gunderson, of 43 Bryant street northwest, and Edwin S. LaFeira, of 3612 Macomb street northwest, business secretary of the Washington Y. M. C. A.

Henry P. Chandler, director of the administration office of United States Courts, lauded the Y. M. C. A. organizations for their beneficial influence as "homes away from homes" for youths coming to cities from "sheltered communities" in an address at the dinner.

Oldest in point of active membership among those present was Harvey Wattles, of 1661 Crescent place northwest, who has participated in Y. M. C. A. organizations here and in Pittsburgh for 58 years and is one of the country's oldest "Y" members in point of participation.

Silver stars symbolic of at least 25 years in the organization were awarded Alden L. Howard, of 6431 Barnaby street northwest; Rudolph H. Gaber, of 1916 G street northwest, director of boy's activities of the Y. M. C. A., and Guy S. Whiteford, real estate man, of 3321 Garfield street northwest.

Capital News in Brief

Policeman Sees Theft

A blue coupe belonging to Alberto Nonis, counselor of the Italian Embassy, was stolen last night from in front of the chancery, 2700 Sixteenth street northwest, and was found 6 miles away imbedded in mud up to the running board.

Unwittingly, Private Harry Dodson, of Tenth Precinct Police, witnessed the theft of the auto. He had no sooner seen it driven off, when a member of the embassy staff rushed out to tell him of the theft.

Three hours later the embassy received an anonymous phone call which revealed that the auto would be found in 3100 block Q street southeast. And there it was, in a ditch. It required a cable 250 feet long to reach it.

Garrett Home Robbed

Mrs. Carl Garrett, 231 First street northeast, daughter-in-law of Representative Garrett, of Texas, last night reported the theft of more than $310 worth of valuables from her home sometime Tuesday night. Stolen articles included a gold watch and a diamond ring.

Suffers Fracture of Skull

Eugene H. Odekoven, 52, of 1474 Chapin street northwest, was in a serious condition at Garfield Hospital last night. He was suffering from a fracture of the skull.

Late yesterday afternoon a passerby found Odekoven on the steps in front of his house. He was taken to the hospital in a semiconscious condition.

Dr. Hummel to Talk

Dr. Arthur W. Hummel, chief of the Orientalia division, Library of Congress, will deliver the third of a series of seven free public lectures on the Far East tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the George Washington University school of government, Twenty-first and G streets northwest, Dr. Hummel will discuss "The Far East and the Culture of the Future."

Mattress Bank Looted

Jesse Dean, janitor at 1410 M street northwest, looked under the mattress of his bed yesterday morning, and discovered that $32 he had placed there the night before was not there.

"It wasn't mine," Dean told police. "A tenant gave it to me to pay his rent with. I hadn't had a chance to turn it over."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Screen Previews Served Press Around the Clock

Zorina Sees Zorina at Midnight "Sneak;" Another Anderson Play Makes Good "Movie;" This, That and the Other About the Theater

SCREEN PREVIEWS these past 24 hours have been closer together than Lea & Perrin or Block & Tackle.

Tuesday midnight, Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's—just back from a three-week Florida vacation, with tall tales of big ones that got away—engineered a "sneak" unspooling of Twentieth Century-Fox's production of "I Was an Adventuress," coming to the Capitol in the wake of Eddie Cantor in "Forty Little Mothers." The star of "I Was an Adventuress" is Vera Zorina, currently costarring with William Gaxton, Victor Moore and Irene Bordoni in "Louisiana Purchase," at the National, who, naturally enough, was guest star at the matutinal matinee. She brought with her Victor Moore, Carol Bruce, Nick Long, jr., and other members of the "Louisiana" cast—which, by and large, made quite a party.

BELL

"I Was an Adventuress" is a story of swindlers, who employ an exceedingly attractive young woman to serve as lure of their prospective victims. She finally falls in love with a dimpled Adonis by the name of Paul Vernay, who turns out to be Richard Greene, looking his handsomest. Then comes reform and an opportunity to display the full measure of her artistry as a high priestess of the ballet. The girl, needless to say, is Zorina. The crooks are Erich von Stroheim and Peter Lorre.

Always a creature of enchanting loveliness on stage or screen, Zorina is even more charming and gracious off. She wishes the ballet scenes in "Adventuress" might have been made in Technicolor. As one who feels that every picture, in its entirety, ought to be made in Technicolor, I couldn't whip up any argument. But Zorina's chief bane these days are her lines in "Louisiana Purchase," when she is pleading with Senator Loganberry to bring her mother to this country to escape the Nazi scourge in central Europe. Being a Norwegian, all this strikes pretty close to Zorina's heart. Her grandmother and other relatives are in Oslo and nearby cities and towns and it has been impossible to get any word to or from them since the German occupation of Norway.

Yesterday at 12:45 p. m., to get on with it, the Warner gave the guys and gals of the press their first squint at the picturization of Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer Prize play, "Saturday's Children," with John Garfield, Anne Shirley and Claude Rains in the principal roles. It proved a neat job of adaptation that permits Mr. Garfield to be a little less grim than usual and Claude Rains seemingly better than ever.

There have been complaints. That is to say, many have conveyed their remonstrances to this desk at the nonappearance of Olsen and Johnson, Gladys Swarthout and her husband, Frank Chapman, and Dennis King at last Sunday night's Actors' Fund benefit at the National—as if we had anything to do with it. Their names in the advance billing undoubtedly sold a large number of tickets. Of the reasons for the defection of the Messrs. Olsen, Johnson and King, I know nothing. The stars of "Hellzapoppin" donated $100 to the Actors' Fund in lieu of making the trip down from New York—which seemed to please "Uncle Dan" Frohman more than it did the cash customers. Miss Swarthout, I am told, was prevented from appearing by a severe throat ailment.

Speaking of conventions, as we were recently, sales executives and representatives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures from Atlanta, Dallas, Memphis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Cleveland will assemble in the Shoreham Hotel, May 20 and 21, for the last of four regional conferences held by the company, following those at San Francisco, Chicago and New York. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, will preside, assisted by T. J. Connors, Eastern district sales manager, and others from the New York home office.

So who barges into the office but Mrs. Kitty Pritchard Romney, publicist and one of the original wheelhorses of the Roadside Theater, with Dan Terrell, formerly of the Warner publicity department in tow. He was introduced as the new business manager of the Roadside. Mr. Terrell is still associated with the promotion department of American University, but, after all, summer is coming along. The Roadside will open on Monday, June 10, with an idyllic little thing called "The Sealed Well or What Will Not a Mother Dare?" Nice to welcome Dan back to "show business."

A good deal has been said here concerning the visit of Mark Sandrich and his family to the Capital, but it seems worth adding that the cast of his next picture for Paramount will include the names of such stars as Jack Benny, Fred Allen and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson. Allen and Benny ought to put up a good fight!

That-Makes-It-Unanimous Note

Victor Moore agrees with "Buddy" DeSylva, Irving Berlin and Morrie Ryskind that they seem to have a hit on their hands in "Louisiana Purchase." If you want to prove it, try to get in!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 8.

June Preisser is a female Mickey Rooney in "Strike Up The Band" when she sings "I Just Can't Make My Eyes Behave." More laughs on that set than any other in town. I caught Mickey and Judy Garland doing a burlesque of "The Villain Pursued Her," "Face on the Barroom Floor," etc., in a number called "Nell of New Rochelle." The kids broke everybody up, including themselves. Bill Tracy, in a snowstorm with flakes of paper an inch thick, got a huge bunch of it in his face. When he started to speak to Judy, paper snow dribbled out of his mouth, and two huge pieces stuck out like horses' teeth.

HOPPER

That was too much for Judy—she fell flat on her face . . . "That Tracy guy is terrific," said Mickey. "They ought to star him."

And this same gang will do "Babes on Broadway," in which June Preisser plays a beauty contest winner.

The picture "Old Lady 31," with Billie Burke, Beulah Bondi, Helen Broderick and Helen Westley, is a character woman's paradise. And when I heard one of the young fry say, "Isn't it wonderful that all these old ladies are working?" I thought to myself, "Baby, you should be that lucky. These gals are getting around $2,000 a week, and have been getting it steadily for years."

Madeleine Carroll has rented the honeymoon cottage of Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow, and Paramount is wondering if they dare follow "A Night at Earl Carroll's" with "A Night at Madeleine Carroll's."

Now it's John Howard who has bought an interest in a gold mine.

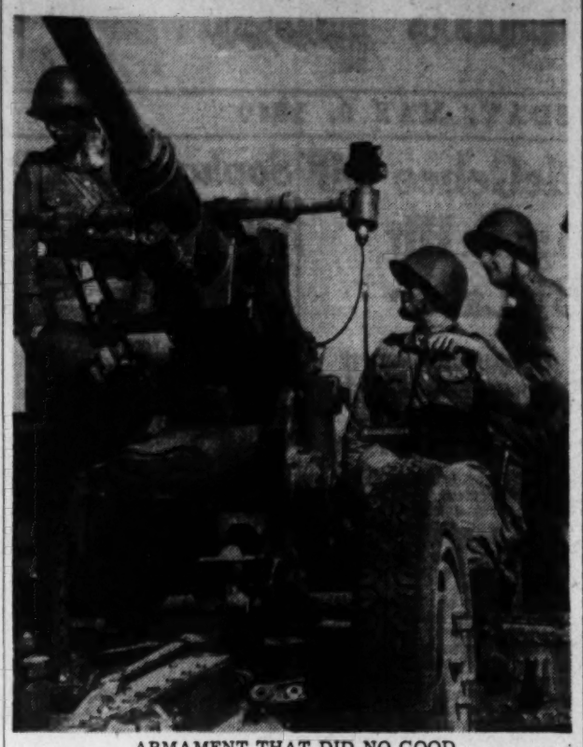
Director Bill Seiter's 4½-year-old son, in telling a pal about his christening, said, "I certainly got dunked the other day."

Says Guy Kibbee, after seeing some of the knitting our gals are doing for the European soldiers, "From what I've seen of those socks—they ought to send them to the Germans if they want to help the Allies."

The press agent for the Rev. Mr. Jardine—you know, he's the man who tied the knot for Wally and the Duke—is trying to find a Hollywood tie-up for the girl who represents to him "Miss Spiritual America." It doesn't take the English long to put our ideas into practice.

Bing Crosby's so crazy about our new Pirates' Den, he dressed like one and had snapshots taken with Don Dickerman, owner, and Rudy Vallee.

Part of Futile Polish Defense



ARMAMENT THAT DID NO GOOD

Polish antiaircraft gunners at their posts as the Nazi drive through the Polish Corridor began, as depicted in Herbert Kline's "Lights Out in Europe," which continues on the screen at the Belasco. "Hell's Angels" is added as a companion feature today

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 8.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., stated Monday night that, upon his being graduated in June, he will become interested in the aviation industry, particularly in South American outlets . . . Noel Coward, who has been assigned to Paris by His Majesty's government, took an 8-year lease on an apartment in the Place Vendome . . . Owney Madden, who was arrested Friday night and released the next morning, has returned to Hot Springs . . . Dixie Davis, now in New Orleans to testify in behalf of the Federal Government, tried to change his name legally to "Dare," but then withdrew his application.

BILLY ROSE, flushed with the triumph premiere of his new show at the Diamond Horseshoe, brought Eleanor Holm to Lindy's. Billy saw Estelle Taylor, and greeted her hoarsely, because he has lost his voice . . . "What happened to your voice?" asked Estelle. "How'd you lose it?" . . . "He was trying to convince me," explained Miss Holm, "to work for less money."

GENERAL MOTORS CORPORATION was the host Monday night at a reception for college seniors who will start their job-hunting next month. A group of experts—Karl T. Compton, head of Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Gen. Hugh Johnson; Ernest M. Hopkins, head of Dartmouth, and Charles F. Kettering, the scientist-engineer who is vice president of General Motors—agreed to answer all questions in an "Information Please" quiz conducted by Clifton Fadiman . . . In response to one of the questions. Gen. Johnson declared: "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear" . . . Kettering assured him : "A good chemist can."

GARSON KANIN, the young director, has become RKO's most important asset, as a result of his new picture, "My Favorite Wife" . . . The title of Al Jolson's musical, written by Eddie Davis and Matt Brooks, will be "Keep Punching" . . . Tilly Losch, wife of the Earl of Carnarvon, is working in a munitions factory . . . Reles, who will testify against his colleagues in Murder, Inc., had a defense fund raised for him by some of the men who later were implicated by him . . . Arline Judge, who visited the cafes with James McKinley Bryant, to announce that the reports of their marriage were untrue, lost her gold purse while covering the route.

TELEGRAM FROM SAROYAN: "Dear Leonard, I did not leave New York because I was disappointed in the reviews of 'Love's Old Sweet Song.' I left because after a play opens, my work is finished. I am writing a tragedy in which everything that happens is funny. The Critics Award is a great honor, but it is much too early for me to enjoy honors when I myself want to do so much more than I have done so far" . . . Saroyan's refusal of the Pulitzer Prize isn't the first time he spurned a cash prize. When he won the O. Henry Award, Saroyan returned the $100, explaining that such prizes should go to young, promising authors who need such encouragement. That money, therefore, was sent to a promising young author who, unfortunately, was in jail at the time, and whose writing never had a chance to mature—because he was executed for murder.

WHEN ROBERT ARDREY won the Sidney Howard Memorial Award presented by the Playwrights, he wrote a letter of acceptance, in which he mentioned nothing about the award, but discussed only Howard, and what the late playwright's friendship had meant to him and his work . . . Robert Sherwood replied, in behalf of the Playwrights: "I'm the only one who didn't vote for you," was Sherwood's message, "but after reading your letter I want to take this opportunity of making the award unanimous."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, JR., phoned Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, and referred to the campaign being waged in behalf of Wendell Willkie. "Willkie's campaign," said Hearst, "is being handled by Oren Root, jr." . . . "I didn't get the name," replied Mrs. Stewart . . . "Oren Root," Hearst replied . . . "I still don't get it," Mrs. Stewart insisted . . . "Oren Root. Y'know—like when you go on a trip, you're either standing still 'or en route.'"

DAN GOLENPAUL, producer of the "Information Please" program, was as shocked as was all of Broadway when the Pulitzer Prize didn't go to "Life With Father." The enterprising Golenpaul was so positive that the Lindsay-Crouse play would get the award that he booked, as guest-artists, Russel Crouse together with Dean Ackerman of Columbia's School of Journalism . . . Al Siegel, the star-maker, has written a tone-poem, "Manhattan Landscape," to be published by the American Academy of Music . . . Any film company which hopes to use the title, "Murder, Inc.," will have to purchase it from Ruthrauff & Ryan, the advertising agency. That title was registered on December 20 as part of the serial-program, "The Shadow," broadcast three days earlier.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 8 (INS).—Goodness gracious! Listen to this glittering lineup assembled for a Red Cross movie! Brian Aherne, Freddie Bartholomew, Charles Chaplin, Ronald Colman, Madeline Carroll, Olivia De-Havilland, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Vivien Leigh, representing the English contingent, with Annabella and Charles Boyer the French players. They won't make a propaganda film, as you might believe from the names, but a story in which each will do his type of characterization. The funds will be turned over to the Red Cross in each city for non-belligerent countries. Scenes will be directed by Alfred Hitchcock, Herbert Wilcox and Robert Stevens.

LOUELLA PARSONS

No heartaches on billing as the stars will be named in alphabetical order. Freddie Bartholomew, who was to have gone on a vacation after finishing "Tom Brown's School Days," will forego it to play a part and Charlie Chaplin will offer his famous tramp characterization.

As all movieland knows, Fredric March does not work for hay. He is one of the highest priced actors in the colony. So when I tell you that he has been signed for "Flotsam," the first production of David Loew and Albert Lewin, you'll know the boys have plenty of money back of their venture. John Cromwell doesn't work for pennies, either, and he has signed to direct Monsieur March in the Erich Maria Remarque novel dealing with Europe's homeless refugees.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Steffi Duna and Dennis O'Keefe are really aflame; Estelle Taylor and Judge Marchetti haven't missed many evenings together. Estelle gave out with a song at Grace Hayes' Lodge when they dined there the other eve; The bride and groom, Mary Martin and Richard Halliday, holding hands at Perino's; Rosalind Russell and Fred Brisson dancing to Henry King's swell orchestra at the Victor Hugo. Roz and Freddie are becoming a habit; Arline Judge and James McKinley Bryant haven't made any friends for themselves in Hollywood by announcing a fake marriage. Bryant isn't legally free and Arline's friends say she wouldn't give up her alimony—but it is a joke in bad taste, to put it mildly.

Louise Stanley, in circulation again, at Ciro's with Count Cassini; the real reason Norma Shearer went East so hurriedly was to have some dental work done; Bob Ritchie, well known man-about-town, has rented the Oscar Hammerstein house in Beverly Hills; Robert Preston is home with a sprained wrist received on the "Northwest Mounted" set; Bruce Cabot and Frances Robinson are closer than ham and eggs these spring days.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Palace, Earle, Capitol And Metropolitan to Offer First-Runs

"MY SON, MY SON!" Howard Spring's best-selling novel of a father's love and plans for his son comes to the Palace screen with Brian Aherne, Louise Hayward and Madeleine Carroll in the pivotal roles. Lenore Coffee wrote the screen play, stressing the boy's selfish imposition on his father's generosity and their love for the same woman. Laraine Day, Henry Hull, Josephine Hutchinson; Sophie Stewart, Bruce Lester and Lionel Belmore head the supporting cast. Charles Vidor directed. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"SATURDAY'S CHILDREN." Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer Prize play comes to the screen wtih John Garfield and Anne Shirley as the young couple who meet in a business office, marry and live on the salaries both of them make. When the girl loses her position, their troubles begin. Garfield has his first semi-comic role and Claude Rains, Dennie Moore and Roscoe Karns head the support. "Red" Skelton returns with Edna Stillwell to head the Earle stage revue. "The Merry Mad Mob," Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey have second billing, with Jay and Lou Seiler, the Christianis and the Roxyettes completing the stage company. Opens tomorrow mornnig.

Capitol

"FORTY LITTLE MOTHERS." Eddie Cantor plays his first character role, a timid professor forced to conceal another's baby in his apartment at a girls' school. The girls have been plotting to get rid of Cantor because he is not so good-looking as his predecessor, but they flock to his aid when the baby is discovered. Judith Anderson, Ralph Morgan, Rita Johnson, Nydia Westman and Bonita Granville are in the cast. Blue Barron's orchestra headlines on the stage. Russ Carlisle, vocalist; Charlie Fisher, tenor; Carl Landra, arranger-pianist, and Ronnie Snyder, guitarist, are leading members of this youthful organization of radio favorites. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"ONE MILLION B. C." Hal Roach has produced this film of prehistoric times with Lon Chaney, Jr., Victor Mature and Carole Landis in the leading roles. The story concerns the hostility between two early tribes, the Shell People and the Rock Tribe which is healed by the romance of a Rock man and a Shell girl. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE PRIMROSE PATH." Ginger Rogers continues for a second week in this story of a disreputable family's upright daughter who meets a fine young man in a gas-station beanery. She marries him, but there is trouble when he finds out what her family is like. Joel McCrea, Majorie Rambeau and Queenie Vasser are in the cast.

Columbia

"REBECCA." The phenomenally successful screen transcript of Daphne du Maurier's novel will continue for another week, marking its fourth on F street. Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine have the leading roles, while Judith Anderson, Reginald Denny, George Sanders, C. Aubrey Smith, Florence Bates and Gladys Cooper are featured.

Little

"HARVEST." Voted the best foreign film of 1938 by the New York film critics, this French story of regeneration continues into a second week. Jean Giono's novel, from which the film was adapted, told of two simple outcasts who rose above their poverty.

Belasco

"LIGHTS OUT IN EUROPE." The widely-discussed documentary film of the fall of Poland to the Nazis continues into a second week with a new screen partner, a revival of "Hell's Angels," Howard Hughes' stirring film of the first European war in which the late Jean Harlow made her first screen appearance.

Trans-Lux

"AMERICA'S YOUTH — 1940." This "March of Time" release offers a survey of the educational, business and social lives in all groups of the nation's young people as the principal short subject at the newsreel house for the coming week. A new "Stranger Than Fiction" and Donald Duck as "The Riveter" are other shorts. Opens tomorrow morning.

Open-Air

"SWING GIRLS." Noel Carter, a headline figure in the recent Buckner case, is an added attraction in this new burlesque revue, opening Sunday afternoon, with Princess Aloha heading the cast. Binder and Rosen head the comic brigade, with Pat Paige, dancer; Monty Wayne and Franklin Hopkins are other featured performers.

Congressional Secretaries Recess to Dine

Secretaries to Congressmen put aside their duties on Capitol Hill and dined at the Congressional Secretaries Club banquet at Hotel 2400. Attending were (left to right) Paul A. Olson, club president; Lee Everett, master of ceremonies; Mrs. Olson, and Harold Hagen, banquet chairman. Olson is secretary to Representative Coffee, of Washington, and Hagen is secretary to Representative Buckler, of Minnesota

"Gaining Steadily"

"He is gaining ground steadily, but I am not here to discuss that," Jaeckle, who said he would rather not estimate Dewey's present delegate strength.

Jaeckle said he did not know when he would call the New York Democratic delegation together to select a new national committeeman and to designate a member of the resolutions committee to participate in the pre-convention platform studies.

Not a Delegate

He said so far as he knew, Kenneth Simpson, New York national committeeman, is the only one who has said he was to be "purged." Selection of a national committeeman, he said, 'is up to the delegates, and I am not a delegate." Jaeckle did say, however, that he did not think Simpson's defection had hurt Dewey's prospects.

The New York State chairman said New York Republicans "are in better shape than we have been for 20 years." James F. Torrance, Pennsylvania's G. O. P. State chairman, said the Keystone State trend was "definitely Republican," and Republican registration there exceeded Democratic by more than 1,000,000.

The day-long conferences were designed by Hamilton to coordinate campaign efforts by State and national groups and to iron out any possible organization hitches in the proposed "streamlined" set-up. Other such conferences are expected to follow.

Besides Hamilton, members of his staff and representatives of the Senatorial and Congressional campaign committees, State chairmen or their representatives were present from Iowa, Kansas, South Dakota, Wisconsin, New Hampshire, Massachusett, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Taft to See Landon

Other developments:

Senator Taft (Republican), Ohio, announced acceptance of an invitation from former Gov. Landon to have an old-fashioned Sunday dinner with him in Topeka May 19. Taft, G. O. P. candidate for the nomination, speaks in Topeka May 18. Landon, who will lead his own State delegation to the convention, conferred with Dewey and Frank Gannett, New York Presidential candidates, on their recent visits. Landon is expected to wield an important convention influence, but has never announced a preference in the candidate race.

Representative Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional campaign committee, disputed Republicans' assertions that they will gain 75 seats in November and control the next House. Drewry said that at present there was nothing to show the complexion of the House will change substantially. He predicted another Democratic House.

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, has decided to seek relection, and will turn down any proffer of appointive office, it was reported authoritatively. Reports had been current that the Minnesota Senator might be offered a Government post by the Administration. Shipstead has not yet revealed whether he will run as a Farmer-Laborite or as a Republican.

Chandler Unopposed

Senator A. B. (Happy) Chandler, of Kentucky, received word yesterday that he will have no opposition in his bid for renomination in Kentucky's Democratic Senatorial primary in August. In Frankfort, Ky., J. Lyter Donaldson, highway commissioner, withdrew from the race "for the best interests of the party." Gov. Johnson 'phoned Chandler the news, which staves off a bitter State fight.

Gov. E. D. Rivers, of Georgia, led a delegation of Georgia party leaders to the White House to present the President with a copy of a resolution adopted by the Georgia Democratic executive committee pledging support to a third term. Rivers said the President read the resolution without comment and "we didn't expect any."

An Iowa delegation led by Senators Gillette and Herring presented the President with a telegraphed request from 70 State and county Democratic leaders urging that the Iowa delegation to be elected Saturday indorse the Roosevelt Administration but be pledged for Secretary Wallace as "favorite son." Gillette said the President made no commitments.

Two Women, 50, Accused of $5,000 Theft From Shops

Two middle-aged women, described by police as "really slick articles," were arrested last night in a downtown hotel in connection with the theft of more than $5,000 worth of goods from department stores here and in Baltimore.

The women, both 50, stole the items, including two fur coats, and sent them back to the stores, getting the refund price, according to police. They were nabbed after four detectives set up a "plant" in the hotel. The two were arrested here two years ago on a similar charge.

Mrs. McAllister's Father Dies at 71

Mrs. Dorothy McAllister, director of the women's division, Democratic National Committee, has been called from her home in the Capital because of the death of her father, Dr. Richard R. Smith, 71, in Grand Rapids, Mich. He died Tuesday.

Dr. Smith, who was 71, was consultant in surgery at Blodgett Hospital, and a leader in State medical circles. Surviving are his wife and two daughters, Mrs. McAllister and Mrs. Frank Bedford, of Philadelphia.

Gleaners' Class Of Luther Place Church Elects

Miss Marjorie Swanson last night was named president of the new Gleaners' Class of Young Women at a reorganization dinner at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle.

Representing the former Dorcas, Mary and Martha and Builders' classes, now combined, the group also elected Miss Esther Thielman as first vice president; Josephine Schwarzenstein, second vice president; Ruth Keller, treasurer, Frances Neufeld, corresponding secretary; Lorendo Melzer, recording secretary; Mabel Maxwell, benevolent treasurer, and Elizabeth Fecht, historian.

Dr. Gould J. Wickey, executive secretary of the United Lutheran Board of Education, spoke.

Maryland Students 'Tap' Roosevelt For Fraternity

A group of University of Maryland students yesterday "tapped" President Roosevelt for honorary membership in Omicron elta Kappa, national leadership fraternity.

The honor was conferred a ceremonies at the White House. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, a member, attended, as did Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university; Dr. R. V. Truitt, faculty adviser to the fraternity, and Prof. Russell B. Allen.

R. M. Lee, Bethesda, Md., president of the Maryland Chapter, said the President told the 16 juniors and seniors who participated in the exercises that he always would remember it.

Catholic Daughters Reelect Miss Ruppert

Miss Katherine Ruppert has been elected grand regent of District Court 212, Catholic Daughters of America, it was announced yesterday.

Other newly elected officers are: Mrs. Elizabeth Bigham, vice grand regent; Miss Madeline McGrath, prophetess; Miss Genevieve Sweeney, lecturer; Miss Helen Zuraski, historian; Miss Mary Stello, corresponding secretary; Miss Bernadine Quinn, financial secretary; Miss Nell Nalley, treasurer; Miss Marie Vollmer, monitor; Miss Virginia Burlingame, sentinel; Miss Ella Carlisle and Miss Catherine Hession, organists; Miss Mary Louise Brown and Miss Mary Ellen Doherty, trustees.

Installation ceremonies will be held Friday evening, May 24, at the Willard Hotel.

House Group Delays Action On Hatch Bill

Judiciary Committee Meeting Today Called Off by Rep. Sumners

Possibility that the Hatch bill might be reported out of the Judiciary Committee this week vanished last night when Chairman Sumner said he would call off a committee meeting scheduled for today because the House will meet at 11 a. m., an hour earlier than usual.

The Hatch bill, prohibiting political activity to State officials paid with Federal funds, was to have again been brought up in committee this morning by Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, who had said he would urge its approval. Next regular meeting of the committee is Tuesday.

Remarks Withdrawn

However, there had been some doubt whether Murdock would have obtained recognition from Sumners, as a railroad reorganization bill had been set as the committee's special order of business.

Sumners yesterday obtained House permission to withdraw from the record some remarks he had made Tuesday about members who signed a petition to discharge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the Hatch bill.

Signatures continued to be slowly added to the petition, but, with a total last night of 130, it was still far short of the requisite 218.

Changes His Mind

Sumners was allowed to delete the observation that "you ought to be ashamed of yourselves, every man that wrote his name on that piece of stuff."

He was also permitted to withdraw the comment that he would defend "for nothing" persons who shot down Federal officials attempting to enforce the Hatch bill.

"That's a very horrible statement," he declared with a twinkle in his eye. "I'd have to charge a nominal fee."

Lack of Work Traps Youth On Farms, Senators Are Told

Inadequate Education Handicaps Their Hunt For Jobs, Causing Labor Surplus to Arise In Areas Least Able to Help, Witness Says

A panel of farm population experts yesterday told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee that thousands of youths coming of age each year on the country's most barren farmland are trapped in a vicious circle" in their efforts to find work.

In these poor agriculture areas, where the soil cannot support its present population, low income has resulted in inadequate educational opportunities, Conrad Taeuber, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, explained.

Because of inadequate education, youths from these farms are unable to find jobs in the cities, he stated, and the surplus labor supply continues to pile up in the areas least capable of furnishing employment opportunities.

Meanwhile, the relatively prosperous farming areas, which could continue to support their present population, provide for their young people an education which equips them to look for urban employment, the committee heard.

Taeuber pointed out that migration from farms to cities exceeded the natural increase in farm population by nearly 2,000,000 in the period from 1910 to 1930.

Since 1930, however, the drift to the city has slackened, leaving the country today with the highest farm population in its history—32,250,000 persons.

"Young adulthood is normally the period of greatest migration," he said, "and the effect of the reduced migration from farms has been especially marked in this group."

He estimated that there are approximately 2,000,000 more persons aged 15 to 29 on farms today than there would have been if 1930-40 migration had matched the rate of the previous decade.

Even with an increase over the urban migration rate of 1930-1940, farm population is likely to grow by at least 5,000,000 within the next 20 years, he stated.

Other witnesses yesterday were Prof. Frank Lorimer, of American University, and Carl C. Taylor, head of the Agriculture Department division of farm population and rural welfare.

U. S. Backs Bill To Aid Shipping

The Maritime Commission gave its indorsement yesterday to legislation designed to stimulate new ship construction by exempting from taxation funds put into a construction reserve.

There is "no doubt whatever," the commission said, of the need for such stimulation. The commission's report was submitted to the House Merchant Marine Committee in approval of a bill by Representative O'Leary (Democrat), of New York.

Congressmen See Rifle Tests Today

Members of Congress and ranking officers of the Army will witness a demonstration of Garand and Johnson semiautomatic rifles and the Thompson submachine-guns at Fort Belvoir, Va., this morning.

The test was ordered by the Senate military appropriations subcommittee after hearing charges the Garand, the Army's new standard shoulder weapon, had shown flaws.

He Kissed the Landlord's Wife Goodby

WHEN handsome General (Gentleman Jack) Burgoyne was captured by the Americans during the Revolution, the party came through beautiful Western Massachusetts and stopped at an inn in what is now the lovely town of Amherst. It must have been a good inn, because, when he left in the morning, the gallant prisoner kissed the landlord's wife goodby.

There were few inns then in this sumptuous valley. Today there are many—all in the business of making the vacationist comfortable and happy. In pleasant, tree shaded towns on the blue Connecticut River, in serene valleys thick with laurel, in quiet hill villages; near rivers, brooks and waterfalls, you will find the most attractive hotels and inns you have ever seen, in this cool vacation land — in Hampden, Hampshire and Franklin Counties.

Surrounded by thirty fine golf courses, hundreds of trout brooks, pools and lakes for swimming, the magic scenery of the Mohawk Trail, and a thousand miles of other scenic drives, here you can have the perfect vacation.

May we send you further information about our hotels and inns, and the interesting things to do here, only three hours from New York City. And when you leave — you don't have to kiss the landlord's wife goodby!

Symphony Campaigners Report Today

Results of 3 Days' Fund Drive to Be Given At Luncheon Meeting

The results of the first three days' campaigning to raise $107,600 for the National Symphony Orchestra's 1940-1941 season will be announced at the first report luncheon by A. F. E. Horn, chairman of the orchestra's tenth annual sustaining fund drive, at 12:30 p. m. today in Carlton Hotel, campaign headquarters.

Reports will be made by the heads of each of the 10 committees into which the 700 volunteer workers in the drive are divided, giving the amount raised to date and the percentage of the committee's quota which that amount represents.

More than 100 committee chairmen, workers and friends of the orchestra are expected to attend the luncheon. Honor guests will include Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, L. Corrin Strong, president of the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony; Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of the Washington Post; Millard Taylor, concert master of the National Symphony; and Mrs. Taylor, Francis Garzia, assistant conductor of the orchestra; and three members of the National Symphony, George Wargo and Samuel Feldman, violinists, and Sylvia Meyer, harpist.

In charge of arrangements for the luncheon is a committee including Mrs. Milton W. King, chairman; Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mark Lansburgh and Horn.

British Admit Losing 6 Trawlers in Norway

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Choir Wednesday night in the Federal Auditorium. Soloists: Charlotte Gusse, pianist, and Hazel Helsper, soprano. Program: A Choric Symphony, "The Legend of Simon Girty" (Deane Shure), Pianoforte Concerto in A minor (Grieg), Cantata, "May Day" (MacFarren.)

BROWN

It was fitting that an American composer, and a resident composer at that, should have been featured last evening in a concert sponsored by the District Federation of Music Clubs as a part of the official observance of National Music Week. The composer was Deane Shure, the composition was his choric symphony, "The Legend of Simon Girty," and the performers were the members of the Department of Agriculture Orchestra and Symphonic Choir, under the direction of Walter Bauer, in the Federal Auditorium.

Mr. Shure's fourth symphony had its premiere last year in Pittsburgh, and its performance last night was the first in Washington. The work is a symphony in the elastic sense to which modern usage has stretched the meaning of the word, for it is in one continuous movement with ten episodes, and has but a remote relation to the classic form. As Luther Moffitt remarked in a program note, presumably with the composer's approval, it is properly a symphonic poem in the impressionistic manner, and as such stands upon its merits as descriptive expression rather than as formal structure.

While the performance had the roughness inevitable at the hands of an amateur organization, its essential qualities were fully appreciable. Two of these qualities were instantly obvious: the native provenance of the subject matter and the musical idiom, and the use of the human voice as an instrumental color. Heading the precept of those who urge our composers to utilize our folklore in building up a body of genuine American music, Mr. Shure has treated the semihistorical legend of the renegade, Simon Girty, who had his part in the conflict between Indians and pioneer settlers in the Susquehanna Valley. The dramatic possibilities of the subject had been handled with imagination and a keen sense of contrast, and there are effective passages of tension, as well as idyllic moments.

The choric scoring calls for a variety of sounds: declamation, singing on open vowels, humming, hissing, tongue-rolling, laughter and exclamations. Some of these effects are successful as novel tonal colors, not only because they are vivid, but also because they connote a human element which instruments can do nothing more than suggest. The declamation, however, falls short of its purpose because it mixes connotation with realism. The spokne words, coming unexpectedly and at intervals, recall the auditor from illusion to actuality.

Mr. Shure's composition is interesting and has an integral sincerity. It is authentic in its expression of folk feeling and in a certain naivete that fits both the subject and the period. The thematic material has an American tang and the harmonic treatment has been kept in consonance with that particular savor.

Charlotte Gusse, the piano soloist, gave a spirited reading of the Grieg concerto. There was some technical stumbling at crucial moments, but her performance on the whole was a commendable effort motivated by an evident appreciation of the lyric beauty of the work.

The remaining composition on the program was George Alexander MacFarren's cantata, "May Day," in which Hazel Helsper's fresh soprano voice gave attraction to the soloist's part. The cantata is as Victorian as Tennyson's poetry, and its melodies have the sentimental cadence inseparable from the lush flowering of British art in the middle of the nineteenth century.

Surviving are his wife, and a sister, Mrs. Margaret W. Carter, of this city.

Schoolboy Patrols To Hear FBI Officer Tomorrow

Youngsters serving in school safety patrols will be told Saturday they have a lot in common with gang-busting G-men.

L. B. Nichols, FBI administrative assistant, will talk tomorrow night at 8 o'clock before more than 10,000 youngsters assembling here for the American Automobile Association's annual school safety patrol parade Saturday.

The address by Nichols, who has served under J. Edgar Hoover for six years, will highlight a program that will include talks by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan police; L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of District schools; Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A., and President Thomas P. Henry, of the A. A. A. of Detroit, who will introduce Nichols. Nichols will speak at the base of Washington Monument.

$17,000 to Aid Finns Comes To Legation

A check for $17,000 for Finnish relief, representing sums collected at the Finnish Legation since March 1, was turned over yesterday to the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., chairman of the District Finnish Relief Fund, by Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister.

Father Walsh, in announcing receipt of the check, made the following statement:

"It is indeed a source of satisfaction to those of us working in the raising of funds for the rebuilding and rehabilitating of war-torn Finland to realize that American friends of Finland are continuing to contribute to that reconstruction and rehabilitation. We are gratified to learn that practically all of this amount represents contributions since the signing of the peace treaty between Finland and Russia. It affords substantial evidence that Americans realize that the needs of Finland did not stop with the signing of the treaty."

Lecture to Be Given

The attitude of French Catholics toward the European war will be discussed tonight by the Rev. Vincent Ducatillon, French Dominican preacher, in the last of a series of French lectures at Georgetown University.

Now GAS brings you the last word in MODERN RANGES
FOR COOL, CLEAN COOKING . . . .

Wouldn't you enjoy a cooler way of cooking this summer? And a range that you can keep sparkling clean with practically no effort?

The new Gas Ranges offer you a modern way of cooking that is cooler . . . cleaner . . . as well as more economical. With an up-to-the-minute Gas Range in your kitchen you can still be fresh and unruffled by the time dinner is ready. See why.

Modern Gas Cooking is Cooler — New scientific insulation keeps oven and broiler heat in. The focussed flame of top burners directs heat toward the bottom of utensils instead of dissipating it up the sides. Simmer burners bring you new low flame cooking.

So Much Cleaner, too! Shining top burners are both non-clog and rust resistant. They stay bright, new-looking. Oven and broiler compartments are porcelain-enamel lined and wipe out easily. The gleaming range surface is as easy to keep spick and span as a china dish.

Why not visit our showrooms (or that of your favorite Gas Range Dealer) today. See how easy they are to own with the big allowances now being offered on your old stove.

Nats Beaten by White Sox, 6-3, Drop to 7th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A vote was cast for Walter Johnson yesterday but it won't count in any political election. The ballot was purely complimentary, a tribute from one old ball player to another. Ty Cobb, who used to be a ball player himself, allowed as how baseball will never see another pitcher who could throw a ball as hard as Johnson.

POVICH

Looking fifty-ish—he's 53—Cobb has mellowed considerably. That, possibly, may account for his kind regard for Johnson. As rival stars in the rough-and-ready era of baseball, they were at sixes and sevens with each other. The speed of Johnson's fast ball irked the irascible Cobb like no other item he had to contend with. It is historic that Cobb did not bat well against Johnson. That was sufficient to cause Tyrus to dislike Johnson very much. The only things Cobb liked better than his basehits were his extra basehits.

On Johnson's side, it is common knowledge that the only player toward whom the Big Train ever worked up even the mildest personal dislike was Cobb. In fact, he was goaded into a sort of hate for Cobb by Clark Griffith who appealed to Johnson to bear down on Cobb as a personal favor to himself. There was nothing personal between Griffith and Cobb. The wily manager of the Nats merely knew that getting Cobb out was a long stride toward winning ball games from Detroit. If Griffith carried tales to Johnson about Cobb, it was merely part of his game to work up a personal issue between the Big Train and Cobb.

Anyway, the fact remains that Johnson was never faster than when he faced Cobb. With Cobb at bat, he put special emphasis on his fast ball. He began to be proud of his mastery over the greatest hitter in baseball and to work up a sort of a sneer when he faced Cobb. Cobb's ominous glowering was a constant and happy reminder for Johnson that he was to bear down.

"It was wonderful," Trainer Mike Martin of the Nats was relating yesterday. "Johnson would rear back and throw his fast one right past Ty. He used to loaf against other hitters but when Cobb was up there, we'd see some great pitching. Cobb was lucky to get a foul. We had him bunting most of the time. It was the only way he had of getting on base."

Yesterday Cobb admitted to his failures against Johnson. "He always seemed to be saving something special for me. I could hear his fast ball sing. He was in the league a half dozen years before I had any luck with him at all, and then I had to outsmart him. I used to do all right after that."

It is no surprise that Ty Cobb outsmarted somebody. There never was any question of his thinking ability, and on the ball field he was an admitted psychologist, pulling the little stunts that would upset a pitcher or mislead an infielder and otherwise giving himself the edge. The story we like best about him is the story Harry Heillmann, his old outfielder, tells.

"When Ty was managing the Tigers and we were training at Gulfport, Miss., we came up with a college first baseman who was a great athlete. He had just won a college broad jump championship and we were all trying to jump with him one morning on the ballfield. The best broad jumper among us was Cobb, himself, but he couldn't jump within three feet of this college kid. But about ten days later, Cobb ordered the kid out to the field early and said they were going to jump again. They did, and Cobb beat him. We didn't learn until later that Cobb had been slipping over to New Orleans and was taking broad jump lessons from a college coach there. He just couldn't bear to finish second to anybody."

Cobb's story of how he outsmarted Johnson is easily credible, and Tyrus Raymond was probably the only ball player in the world who would think of any such plan for making basehits. What he did was to take advantage of the kindly nature he knew existed in Johnson despite the Big Train's determination to bear down against Cobb.

"I had to do something to get basehits against Johnson," Cobb related yesterday." He was making it too tough for me. I knew he was an easy-going guy underneath and I figured I could make use of that fact. It worked.

"What I did was crowd the plate against Walter. It wasn't my ordinary stance and I couldn't get a good swing, but I was desperate to see how it would work. I'd stand up there almost on the plate, with my knees bent in and covering part of the plate. I didn't give Walter much of the platter to shoot at with his fast ball, and I was hoping that he would be shy about hitting me, which he had a perfect right to do.

"It worked. To keep from hitting me, Walter was wide with his pitches. Not much, but just enough to miss the outside corner. Then when he got behind me on the count, I'd go back to my old stance and wait for him to throw one down the middle, which he had to do. That's when I'd get my basehits. But if it hadn't been for his kind nature, he'd have owned me."

Chase Again Driven Out; Wright Stars

Former Washington Outfielder Triples; Edgar Smith Holds Nats to 5 Hits

By Shirley Povich.

Did you hear that thud? It was the Nats dropping into seventh place in the American League standings yesterday. There was not a great deal of commotion. The Washington atheletes stirred up only five hits against the White Sox pitching and sort of eased themselves deep into the second division.

The White Sox won the ball game by a score of 6 to 3. Ken Chase and history repeated themselves. Chase was knocked out of the box, and history wins mention because the historic weakness of the Nats against left-handed pitching again was present. Yesterday for the eighth consecutive time they were unable to beat southpaw pitching.

It was a painful sort of defeat for the Nats, because one of the prime movers in the White Sox victory was chunky Taft Wright who was released, Godspeed, to the Chicago club last winter. Wright walloped a single that eventuated as the White Sox's first run, he slammed a triple that evolved as another run and he was deprived of a third hit by a bit of harsh scoring.

Zeke Bonura Hits Well

The gents who held the Nats to five hits were Edgar Smith, a fat legged little southpaw who used to pitch for the Athletics, and Clint Brown, right-handed relief specialist of the Chicago Club. Manager Jimmy Dykes didn't dally with Smith when four of the first five men to face him reached base in the seventh inning. Out he came in favor of Brown who put a stop to the Nats' notions of tying the score at that point.

It wasn't Zeke Bonura's fault that the Nats were licked. He personally accounted for two of their five hits and scored two of their runs. He was lathering the ball all afternoon and the only reason he didn't collect an extra base hit was because Taft Wright, of all people, galloped into deep centerfield to haul down Zeke's long fourth-inning smash like some composite of all the great defensive outfielders of history.

Before Manager Bucky Harris was in the proper mood to withdraw Chase, the White Sox had eight of their ten hits and five of their six runs. The end came for Chase in the sixth inning. Alex Carrasquel and Bucky Jacobs completed the job.

Luke Appling's double to right field scored Taft Wright in the second inning and in the third two walks by Chase paved the way for another Chicago run. A wild pitch put Kennedy on third base and he tramped home when Wright's vicious smash tore through Pofahl's glove.

Chase Is Chased

In the fourth, Buddy Lewis was no drawback to the White Sox. He muffed Rosenthal's routine single to right and Rosenthal reached third on the error. Rosenthal's was the first of three successive hits in the inning, in which the White Sox counted twice.

Rookie Catcher Turner greeted Chase with a single in the sixth and Rookie Bob Kennedy eventually scored him with a single. That blow chased Chase and Carrasquel limited the damage by striking out Kuhel.

Carrasquel got his in the next inning. Wright led off with his three-bagger on which Case failed to make a shoestring catch, and a bit later he scored on Rosenthal's double-play grounder.

Bonura and Bloodworth delivered singles in the second inning which, combined with a wild pitch fetched the Nats a run, but then they went into a long eclipse. Smith didn't give up another hit until Case made a futile single in the sixth.

Terp Runner, Stretching Triple, Comes a Cropper at the Plate

Foul Claim Lodged by Jockey Wall

Mrs. Abel's Charge Wins After Photo Of Blanket Finish; Filisteo Is Second

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Twice considered a hopeless cripple, Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud ran the greatest race of his career today to win the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap, first contested in 1870. Withstanding bold moves of several rivals and poking his head out at the finish, the courageous son of High Cloud, won in a blanket finish that called the camera into action for both first and second positions.

Making his victory all the more difficult, Honey Cloud was forced to survive a claim of foul registered against him. Jockey Nick Wall, who rode Aethelwold into third money, a nose behind H. C. Hatch's Filisteo, registered the objection, telling the stewards that Honey Cloud, ridden by Jockey H. Mora, had forced his mount out in the stretch run.

Former Jockey Whitey Abel, who transformed Honey Cloud from a selling plater to a stake horse after claiming him from E. K. Bryson for $2,500 at this track, stood with President Alfred G. Vanderbilt in the winner's circle while the stewards weighed Wall's claim of foul.

Honey Cloud joined Pompoon, Calumet Dick, Dark Hope, Equipoise, Sarazen and other winners of this historic race but, to many observers it will go down as a lucky victory. Aethelwold, as the race was run, might have been the best horse. The W. L. Brann horse came out of the gate for the mile and three-sixteenths battle and turned a sharp right, running to the outside fence before Jockey Wall could get control. Straightened out, Aethelwold was rushed up to Honey Cloud at the first turn.

Olympus then drove up between Honey Cloud and Aethelwold and bothered the Brann horse. Nearing the far turn, Olympus dropped back and Honey Cloud and Aethelwold battled along with the former always having a slight advantage.

A series of moves began at this stage. Isolater came up as did Masked General and Belay but this trio had nothing to match the speed of the two front runners. Entering the stretch, Honey Cloud swung out and carried Aethelwold with him. In the meanwhile, Filisteo, an outsider in the betting, cut the rail to improve his position.

Aneroid Dies In Kentucky Stable Fire

By the Associated Press

Paris, Ky., May 8.—One of the most disastrous fires of recent years in Kentucky's Bluegrass swept the stallion barn on E. K. Thomas' Timberlawn stock farm tonight and destroyed the noted thoroughbred sires, Flying Heels, Kiev, Aneroid and Sergt. Byrne.

A yearling thoroughbred colt by Hi-Jack—Wave Top also was destroyed. The colt was led to safety but ran back into the blazing barn.

Witnesses said the barn seemed to burst into flames suddenly. The cause could not be determined at once.

Thomas said that he carried no insurance on either the horses or the barn.

Veteran horsemen said the four stallions were worth $100,000 or more.

D. C. Man Owned Horse

Aneroid, owned by John Manfuso, of Washington, was one of the most popular thoroughbreds to race on Maryland tracks in recent years. He ran many brilliant races, beating, among others, such able racers as Pompoon and Seabiscuit.

His last race was at Pimlico in the autumn of 1938 when he finished second in the Bowie Handicap—only to be disqualified for bearing in in the stretch. It was because of a leg infirmity which caused this habit that he was retired.

Aneroid was deemed by his owner to be a likely prospect at stud. Two crops of foals will carry on his racing blood—that of The Porter, another Maryland favorite.

Champions Lose to Southpaw Pitching 9th Time This Season; Joe DiMaggio Has Perfect Day at Bat; Breuer and Donald Pounded

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—The World Champion Yankees wrecked on the shoals of southpaw pitching today for the fifth consecutive game and the ninth time this season as the Cleveland Indians smacked out a 10-to-4 decision.

Al Smith, making his first start of the season, held all the New York sluggers except Joe DiMaggio and Flash Gordon in check for eight innings and then was replaced by Al Milner, another left-hander, as a precaution when he allowed a single at the start of the ninth.

DiMaggio, playing his second game of the season, had a perfect day at bat with two singles, a walk and hit by a pitched ball, and knocked in the champs' first run in the first. Then Smith shut down on the Yanks until the eighth when Gordon homered with two on.

But by this time the Tribe had tallied all its runs, big Hal Trosky getting his sixth and seventh homers of the season and Rollie Hemsley his third. Both hit round-trippers yesterday at Boston, too.

Trosky smacked his first of today with none on in the fourth for Cleveland's first run off Marvin Breuer and hit the other in the fifth with two on. Then in the sixth the Indians drove Breuer out and continued against Atley Donald with four runs on four singles, Lou Boudreau's double, an error and two walks. Hemsley homered in the seventh, and two walks, a wild pitch and a double steal added the final marker in the eighth.

Bounce in Legs Ambers' Main Worry Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Summit, N. J., May 8.—It's not a matter of how many punches Lou Ambers is going to have to take in defending his lightweight championship against Texas Lew Jenkins in Madison Square Garden Friday night, but how much bounce there's left in his legs.

Winding up his intensive preparations here among the north Jersey hills today, Herkimer Lou showed he is ready to take the very best belts pitched by Sweetwater Lew.

He pointed out that he has been whacked firmly by the very best—clouters like Tony Canzoneri, Jimmy McLarnin, Sammy Fuller and Henry Armstrong—and has bounced right back to beat them.

Georgetown's Powers Shuts Out Md., 5-0

Wacking furiously on a fist-sized wad of gum and grinning with elfish delight at his mastery of rival batters, cocky Vinnie Powers popped up with the best pitched game of his career yesterday to lead Georgetown to a 5-to-0 shutout of Maryland, at the Hilltop.

In dealing the Terrapins their second whitewashing of the season and capturing for Georgetown the first of a two-game series for the unofficial District college baseball championship, Powers scattered six

Wilson's Relief Work Enables Bosox to Win

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 8.—The stout-hearted relief pitching of Jack Wilson enabled the Red Sox to protect their American League lead today by defeating the Detroit Tigers, 5-4.

Wilson choked off a threatening rally when he stepped into action in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and in the ninth, with the tying and winning on the sacks, he ended the game by fanning mighty Hank Greenberg.

Greenberg opened the Tigers' scoring in the fourth by blasting his third homer of the season against starter Jim Bagby with one out and none on.

Bagby gave the fast-traveling visitors two more tallies in the sev-

V. DiMaggio Traded for Johnny Rizzo

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 8.—The Pittsburgh Pirates today traded Outfielder Johnny Rizzo to the Cincinnati Reds for Outfielder Vince Di Maggio, one of the three ball playing DiMaggio brothers. It was a straight player transaction with no cash involved.

The deal was completed over the telephone by Managers Frankie Frisch of the Bucs and Bill McKechnie of the Reds. DiMaggio will report immediately and start in left field for the Pirates tomorrow against the New York Giants.

DiMaggio, who hails from Hermosa Beach, Calif., played for the Boston Bees in 1937 and 1938 and for Kansas City last year, leading the American Association with 46 home runs. He joined the Reds late in the season and played in eight games.

Rizzo, who had been with the Pirates three seasons, reached his peak in 1938 but slumped last year. He has been handicapped this season by a foot injury.

St. Louis, May 8.—Stuart Martin pounded out two home runs today, giving the St. Louis Cardinals nine round-trippers in two days, as the revived Redbirds defeated Philadelphia, 7 to 4. He hit one of the Cardinals' seven homers against Brooklyn yesterday.

Rookie Clyde Smoll started for the Phillies but the Cardinals batted him out in less than an inning with a three-run outburst topped by Pepper Martin's double. Stuart Martin trotted around solo on one of his homers and the other came with a man on base.

Bill McGee weaknened in the ninth inning, when Pinch-hitter Gus Suhr started off a three-run rally with a homer. Lefty Clyde Shoun made another of his many relief appearances and retired the last batter.

Pirates Drop Eighth Straight to Giants, 10-6

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 8.—The pathetic Pirates dropped their eighth consecutive game today as the New York Giants ended a four-game losing streak of their own with a 10-to-6 triumph.

The Giants worked out on five Pittsburgh pitchers for 17 hits and tallied eight of their runs before the Pirates broke the ice against Lefty Cliff Melton, who got credit for his third victory against no defeats although he was knocked out in the eighth.

Bees Beat Reds, 10-4; Derringer Chased

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 8.—Getting to Paul Derringer for 4 runs in the opening stanza, Boston shelled him from the mound in a 5-run fifth inning and went on today to a 10-to-4 rout of the Reds.

The game deprived last year's champs of a first-place tie with the idle Brooklyn Dodgers and ended at five their streak of victories.

Derringer, seeking his third triumph, found instead his second defeat as Boston launched early into a 13-hit parade. Five of the blows, including Eddie Miller's second homer in as many days, were for extra bases.

Big Paul had no sooner taken the mound than Carvel Powell tripled against the centerfield wall and scored on Bud Hassett's fly. A walk to Max West, singles by Tony Cuccinello and Al Lopez and a double by Chet Ross brought in 3 more.

A.R.B.A. Low Net Taken By Atlantan

Members of the American Road Builders' Association from Atlanta and New York, won low net and gross prizes in the association's annual golf tournament yesterday at Congressional. A field of 63 competed.

Paul Andrews, of Atlanta, won low net with 90—17—71, with Harold Sours second with 94—22—72. Homer Farmer, of New York, had low gross with an 84 with M. R. Palmer, of this city, second. Sam Beatty won the low putts prize with 30.

Eight other Washingtonians were in the lengthy prize list: J. M. McMillon, blind bogey; Maj. F. M. Davison, low gross, first nine; C. M. Connor, low gross on the second nine and also the special "fat man's" prize; B. F. Miller, low net, second nine; A. P. Woodson, most pars; Francis J. Kelly, most fives, and Bill Slee, second high gross.

J. R. Boyd won a complete set of woods, irons and a golf bag as the average golfer. The total scores were divided by the number of players and Boyd's score was closest to the average of the field.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 8.—News item: Frankie Pytlak, Cleveland catcher appealed to Will Harridge, president of the American League, to reinstate him on the league's eligibility list so that he could accept an $8,000 contract from the Indians.

CONSIDINE

Okay, bud, you work in a machine shop. There are 24 other men in there. There are 15 other shops just like it, catering to the same type of customers. You work hard for your shop. Maybe you don't contribute as much to its success as a machinist named Feller, but day in and day out you're as much responsible for the shop's success as the others in there.

Your shop has a nice year. Makes a lot of money, so when the boss tries to hire you for the same amount the following year you say, "nix, I want a raise. Other guys get them here; why shouldn't I?" But the boss, a man named Bradley, says no.

Six or seven of the rival machine shops would be glad to pay you the salary you want. They realize you are a fine workman, can deliver, work hard and so on. Some of them might even pay you more. But none of them would ever dare say so, and if one of them actually hired you—while you're on the outs with your first firm—a man named Landis could swoop down on that shop and run it out of business.

So you stay out of work rather than fight against an unfair practice. So you go back to your first shop, hat in hand, and you say, "Okay, I'll work for what you want to pay me." So the shop says, "Well . . . first you better go over to the main office of the union and ask 'em to put you back on the good-standing list. You became ineligible to work ten days after the season opened. We can't put you back on the pay roll, at our figure, until you get the union's okay."

So you say to yourself, "This ain't fair. Things like this can't happen in this country, where every guy's got a constitutional right to advance himself in his business. No firm's got a right to tell me I can't work at my trade, unless I work at it for them. I protest."

Somebody hears you say this and somebody tells somebody who tells the boss and the boss says, "That fellow's a Communist if I ever saw one." He tells the men who run the other machine shops when he meets them at their annual convention. So when the shop finally decides to get rid of you, and it looks like you might have the chance to hook on with a shop that will give you more of a break, none of the other shops wants you. You're a troublemaker and you preach sedition.

So you're out of the good dough, and the best you can get is a job in a small town, working harder for a lot less dough, and the young fellows around the new shop working hard to make you look bad in comparison, because it makes them feel good to outwork a guy from the big time.

This, in effect, is what is happening to Pytlak. And what happens to all big leaguers who try to buck the front office. Of course, a contract calling for $8,000 a year would be a great fortune for the average man. But the fact remains that all things are relative. Pytlak's $8,000 is the $35 a week salary of baseball. He wanted to get up in the $40 a week class.

'Chick' Heimer Is Printcrafts Golf Winner

Cards Net 80 At Beaver Dam; 3-Day Event Ends

E. B. "Chick" Heimer won the spring tournament of the Union Printcrafts Golf Association yesterday at Beaver Dam with a net 80, deducting an association handicap of 1 from a gross 81. The three-day event ended yesterday with the remainder of the field playing the 18-hole round, followed by a dinner at the club.

James Dewhurst was low net scorer in Class B with 89-4, 85, while Haydn L. Evans led the Class C players with 106, playing from scratch, with Frank Tollefsen low in Class D, 113-8, 105.

Heimer's 81 was the lowest gross score of the event. Serge Folk, the only scratch handicap player, was four shots higher with an 85.

The local Printcraft members will hold the summer tourney early in July. Yesterday's spring handicap event was held for the tenth consecutive year. Their card includes spring, summer and fall tournaments.

Four St. Louis Pitchers Pounded For 13 Hits

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 8.—Pounding four pitchers for 13 hits, 4 of them by Second Baseman Benny McCoy, the Athletics outlasted the St. Louis Browns in a high scoring game today, 10 to 8.

McCoy's fourth hit, a single with the bases filled, in the eighth, played a major part in the three-run attack which gave the Athletics their margin of victory.

Buck Ross, making his first start of the year, was the winning pitcher, although he had to be relieved by Ed Heusser when Joe Gallagher homered with two aboard in the seventh inning. Walter Judnich hammered Ross' offerings for two triples and a single.

Casey Plays Villain, Wins At Riverside

Playing the part of the double-dyed villain, Steve (Crusher) Casey gave 1,200 customer at Riverside Stadium a neat exhibition of fearsome grimaces last night as he subjugated Don Evans, the people's choice, after 28 minutes of maneuvering in the main wrestling event.

Stevie used all the time-worn tricks to elicit the sympathy of the fans for Don—such things as the thumb-in-the-eye routine, the knee-to-the-pit-of-the-stomach specialty and numerous other numbers known to the wrestling gentry. Steve finished Don with an arm lock and body slams that left Evans registering appropriate expressions of pain.

Unperturbed by the small turnout, Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin issued a proclamation at the end stating that "we are very pleased with this fine turnout" and indicated that next week he'll stage an elimination wrestling show.

In the semifinal, Bob (I Used to be the Terror) Weatherly disposed of Abe Coleman with something called an arm twist and wrist lock in 11½ minutes. Warren Bockwinkle defeated Jim Austerl in 21 minutes. Rudy Dusek did away with Jim Coffield in 20 minutes, and Tommy Rae and Maurice LaChappelle waltzed to a draw.

Pepco Nine Beats FBI, 5-2, at Ellipse

The Pepco nine yesterday pounded out its second victory in as many starts in the United States Government League, trouncing a scrappy FBI aggregation, 5 to 2, at the West Ellipse diamond.

Bill Helmer, lanky Pepo hurler, held the FBI boys to four hits for the nine innings. Only once in the sixth did Helmer show any weakness, when he allowed two runs to cross the plate. He tightened and settled down for the rest of the game.

Three 30-Year Marks Broken in Pin Tourney

Joe Freschi's 450 Is Highest Singles Total; Dutch Sherbahn Has 464 and Pairs With Johnny Burger for 848 Doubles Total

Joe Freschi, Dutch Sherbahn and Johnny Burger took part in the biggest night's pin-spilling in Washington City Duckpin Association history last night at Arcadia as three 30-year records went into discard.

Freschi, one of the high average bowlers in the District League, with Brookland, broke the all-time Class A singles mark with 450, and the total was also the highest set ever rolled in the tournament, better than Ed Blakeney's 442 singles mark and Jack Talbert's 448, rolled in doubles. He rolled games of 169, 143, and 138.

An hour later, Sherbahn and Burger, of the Takoma Alleys, rolled their doubles set and broke all-time record with an 848 count, including Sherbahn's 464, that smashed Freschi's mark by 14 pins. However, Freschi still holds the singles record.

Sherbahn rolled games of 172, 130, and 162 in his record total while Burger added 414 for the 848 total.

Cooke Press took the lead in Class B teams with 1,877 set, representing the Rosslyn Independent League, while Jenifer's Market went into second place in Class C with 1,740.

TEMPLE

Eastern Pharmacy pinmen broke a record of 15 years standing last night in the Temple League, a 1,831 team set, The Eastern team, led by Bernie Lucas with a 398 set and Joe Cicala, a 157 game, rolled games of 632, 607, and 592, with Standard Brand the victim. McKee-Pontiac broke the season's record set with 1,774 but held the honors only until Eastern Pharmacy completed its set.

Sir Galahad Wins Capital City Club Old Bird Race

Averaging a little over 50 miles an hour, "Sir Galahad," a fine yearling from the Friendship Loft of Edward H. Cox, won the second race of the current old bird series being sponsored by the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club from Pittsburgh, Pa., 200 miles airline, and defeated a field of 191 birds from 21 local lofts. An entry from the Morris Brothers loft and two entries from the winner's loft pressed the victor for top honors.

The birds were released at Pittsburgh at 8:45 a. m., and with the help of fine weather and light helping northwest winds, made good time for the journey, the winning birds being timed at 12:34 p. m.

Friendship Loft, 1,482; Morris Brothers, 1,481.7; Friendship Loft, 1,481.6; Friendship Loft, 1,481; Paul Good, 1,480; Louis M. Frey, 1,477.8; Raymond F. Owens, 1,477.7; James P. Mundie, 1,475; Burgess-Carroll, 1,473; Robert Bird, 1,472; Durity-Harper, 1,471; Raphael L. Webb, 1,470; William R. Pennington, 1,469; William J. Pierstein, 1,466.5; Burke-Holmes, 1,466.5; Rainey-Seymour, 1,465; Frank L. Reinhardt, 1,464; William A. Coryell, 1,447; James B. Lyons, 1,436; August B. Moore, 1,424; Ollie Brown, 1,418; Stanley Eusebio, 1,406. One loft failed to report.

Monteagudo Recalled From Jersey City

Rene Monteagudo, diminutive Cuban, today will rejoin the Nats' pitching staff. He was recalled yesterday from Jersey City, where he had been sent on option as part of the deal which brough Zeke Bonura from the Giants.

Gilberto Torres, Cuban right-hander, was sent to Jersey City by the Nats coincident with Monteagudo's recall. Monteagudo has been starring in relief roles and as a pinch hitter for Jersey City. He is slated for relief duty with the Nats.

Catholic U. Trackmen Trounce Western Maryland, 80 to 37

Two Records Fall in Meet At Brookland

Johnny Doyle Lowers Mile Mark; Stauffer Breaks Broad Jump Record with 21 Feet

Extending its winning streak to the robust proportions of 11 consecutive meet victories, Catholic University's track team captured a one-sided 80-to-37 triumph over Western Maryland yesterday in the semiprivacy of Brookland Stadium.

Two meet records fell as the high-flying Cards won their third meet within five days. Johnny Doyle, heretofore Johnny Corbett's understudy, hurried to the tape in 4 minutes and 6 seconds in the mile run, to lower that standard by 11 seconds. Corbett did not compete in yesterday's meet, Coach Dorsey Griffith preferring to rest the star who did yoeman work last Saturday and Monday.

In the broad jump, Cleveland Stauffer succeeded in leaping to his best mark of the year, 21 feet, as he broke the old record of 20 feet 7 inches. Stauffer, a graduate of Roosevelt High, is undefeated in dual competition this year.

The Cards revealed new stars in the field events. Nick Sarelas and Leo Wowak, who captured the javelin and pole vault, respectively, had remained in the background during the past season but yesterday had a real emancipation day.

The times in the majority of the track events were rather slow as compared to past events but both teams showed to advantage in the field. Pete Osinski continued his excellent work in the shotput, taking his fifth consecutive first place in that event this year.

Western Maryland's talent was fairly well scattered. There was no outstanding individual leader on either the Green Terrors or the Cardinals, and no trackman won more than one event.

The winning Catholic U. team will seek to prolong its winning streak Saturday in Baltimore, where Johns Hopkins thinclads will be met.

SUMMARIES

Little Hoyas Sweep Net Matches, 4 to 0

A single rival stood in the way of Georgetown Prep's capture of the Prep School Tennis League yesterday as the Little Hoyas shut out Gonzaga, 4 to 0, at Garrett Park. Landon Prep, which will be faced next week, is the team's only remaining foe.

At the same time league matches were being staged the two schools squared off in a regulation team match, the result being a 4-to-4 deadlock.

Bob Barrett, of Georgetown Prep, and Gonzaga's Eckert forced the cancellation due to darkness of their league doubles match—they were to have paired with Gannon and Shortley, respectively—when they played a 36-game singles match. Eckert finally won, 6—8, 6—2, 8—6.

LEAGUE SINGLES—Titus (GP) defeated Sheehan (Gon.), 6—4, 7—5; Kuntz (GP) defeated Ervin (Gon.), 6—3, 6—2; Gannon (GP) defeated Shortley, 6—1, 6—2.

TEAM MATCH SINGLES—Eckert (Gon.) defeated B. Barrett, 6—8, 6—2, 8—6; Bush (Gon.) defeated Cremen, 6—3, 6—2; Curley (Gon.) defeated Byron, 6—4, 6—2.

LEAGUE DOUBLES—B. Barrett-Gannon (GP) vs. Shortley-Eckert, called off due to darkness.

TEAM MATCH DOUBLES—Titus-Kuntz (GP) defeated Sheehan-Ervin, 5—7, 6—0, 6—2; Bush-Curley (Gon.) defeated Cremen-Byron, 6—3, 6—2.

Vernon, Haughton Added to Fights

Reds Vernon, District lightweight, and Eddie Haughton, bantamweight from St. Mary's Boys Club at Alexandria, were added to the amateur boxing card which Frankie Mann will present tomorrow night at Gonzaga Hall, 47 I street northwest.

With Jim DeChard, local amateur heavyweight champion, facing Sammy Marks, Western Maryland champion, in the five-round main event, the program has Vernon fighting Pete Kaiser, Western Pennsylvania champion in his weight, and Haughton meeting Billy Leary, of Oxon Hill, Md.

Chester Morris, scheduled to fight on the card, was withdrawn because of an injured back yesterday Willie Tapp, three-time Golden Gloves featherweight champion, faces Joe Labarko, of Johnstown, Pa., and Danny Perto faces Lew Yonkers in other five-round bouts.

Pepco Softballers Play

A. U., Gallaudet Trackmen Bow To Bridgewater in Triangle Meet

Bridgewater's track squad paid Gallaudet College a visit yesterday and kicked up enough dust to win an easy victory in a triangular meet with the Blue squad and American University's Eagles.

American brought along its own hurdles but could finish no better than second, while Gallaudet, playing host to its first three-way meet on Hotchkiss Field, came in last. The score was 66½ for the Virginians, 47½ for American and 40 for the Blue.

Because of limited facilities no records were lowered, or even endangered, but Bridgewater managed to take seven first places in the 14 events. A. U. won four firsts, leaving the high jump, shotput and 2-mile run for Gallaudet.

Murray Faupel, Bridgewater's captain, and 220-yard low hurdle champion in the Chesapeake Conference last year, easily won both the low and the high hurdle events over a field that gave the Eagles' hurdles a terrific beating. The track resembled a tornado-swept area as the lads crossed the finish line with upset barriers sprawling in their wake.

Leon Garber, Bridgewater sophomore, was the afternoon's outstanding star, with first places in the 100-yard dash and the broad jump and a second in the javelin.

Trailing badly at the start, Gallaudet made a game comeback and piled up enough third and fourth places to threaten American briefly. Milan Mrkobrad and Leo Latz, 2-mile winner, were the Blue stars.

The summary:

MILE RUN—Won by Early (Bridgewater); second, Wood (American); third, Cooke (Bridgewater); fourth, Smith (American). Time, 4 minutes 53 seconds.

440-YARD DASH—Won by Dixon (American); second, Brown (Gallaudet); third, Boykin (American); fourth, Graham (Bridgewater). Time, 53.8 seconds.

110-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Faupel (Bridgewater); second, Phillips (Gallaudet); third, Schowe (Gallaudet); fourth, Cook (American). Time, 17.1 seconds.

SHOTPUT—Won by Malskuhn (Gallaudet); second, Dove (Bridgewater); third, Mrkobrad (Gallaudet); fourth, Hollen (Bridgewater). Distance, 34 feet 10⅛ inches.

880-YARD RUN—Won by Andes (Bridgewater); second, Streitberger (American); third, McQuinn (Bridgewater); fourth, J. Glick (Bridgewater). Time, 2:10.5

POLE VAULT—Won by Silleler (Bridgewater); tie for second, Nielson (American) and Jones (Bridgewater); tie for third, Sanderson (Gallaudet) and Crogan (Bridgewater). Height, 10½ feet.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Streitberger (American); second, Cook (American); third, Dixon (American); fourth, Brown (Gallaudet). Time, 24 seconds.

DISCUS THROW—Won by Dove (Bridgewater); second, Byham (American); third, Hollen (Bridgewater); fourth, Mrkobrad (Gallaudet). Distance, 111 feet 11 inches.

TWO-MILE RUN—Won by Latz (Gallaudet); second, Glick (Bridgewater); third, Little (American); fourth, Ringgold (Bridgewater). Time, 11:10.5.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Stevens (Gallaudet); tie for second, Mrkobrad (G.), Mason (B.), Claugue (B.) and Adams (A.). Height, 5 feet 10 inches.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by Mrkobrad (Gallaudet); second, Garber (Bridgewater); third, Keyhoe (American); fourth, Bers (Gallaudet). Distance, 143 feet 4 inches.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Garber (Bridgewater); second, Dixon (American); third, Brown (Gallaudet); fourth, Adams (American). Distance, 19 feet 6 inches.

Washington Lacrossemen Beat Navy B

Fourth Quarter Goal Wins, 6-5; Locals Hold Early Edge

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., May 8.—The Washington Athletic Club and the Navy B squad lacrosse teams were the participants in a finely contested game here this afternoon, the Washingtonians winning, 6 to 5. The winning goal was scored in the fourth quarter and was the only marker of that period, so tight was the defense of both teams.

The Washington aggregation composed of former college stars, showed greater finesse in the finer points of the game, but the superior physical condition of the Naval lads was a big factor in their favor and they frequently outran the visitors. Washington played the Middies off their feet in the opening period, scoring three goals and holding the home team completely at bay.

Meaney, Crouch Get Holes-in-One; Second for Latter

T. J. Meaney found the cup with his tee shot for a hole in one on the sixth hole of B course yesterday at Rock Creek, using a three iron for the 172-yard shot. G. M. Prince, Capt. B. P. Eaton and W. B. Jarvis, all members of the early birds' foursome, witnessed the shot. The regulation green is in play on the one-shoter.

Howard Crouch knocked in his second hole in one in his last two rounds yesterday at East Potomac, dropping a five iron shot on the fourth hole of B course.

Playing with the same companions two weeks ago, Archie Rose and Dale Teeters, Crouch aced the eighth hole of B course at Rock Creek, then a temporary cup less than 100 yards from the tee. Crouch is an employe of the Census Bureau.

Terp Frosh Trackmen Swamp Tide

87-30 Loss Suffered By Eastern as Md. Sweeps Running Events

Maryland's frosh track squad defeated Eastern High School of Washington at College Park yesterday, sweeping through all the track events to win 87-30.

With Lou Chacos and Len Leonberger leading the yearlings on the cinders and Conrad topping the district lads in the field events, the Terps coasted to an easy win.

Chacos remained undefeated in the century, finishing ahead of Adams, a teammate, to win in 10.4. The Central High trackster topped the field in the 220 in 23.4 Leonberger took both the high and low hurdles to tie Chacos and Conrad for top honors

Central High Field Day Set Today

For the first time in five years the diamond forces of Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, and Central clash today, highlighting the first annual field day of the Central Athletic Association. The program will get under way at 1 p. m. at Emory Wilson Stadium.

The Vikings will send Dave Buckner to the mound today in an attempt to keep their record against high school opposition clear. W.-L. will counter with one or more of the following: Havener, Olsen, Johnson, Clements or McNab.

On the track, Central's cindermen will square off with Little General runners and field event men in a regulation meet, while a special relay will bring together representatives of the above schools and Roosevelt.

Special exhibitions will be staged by Coach "Hap" Hardell's brilliant trackmen of Georgetown University during the afternoon. Al Blozis, towering weight man, will demonstrate the throwing form which enabled him to crash all records in the shotput, and the Hoya relay team will run a race against time.

Numerous other athletic activity, including a horse show by the Central Riding Club, will occur during the program. School will be dismissed for the occasion.

W. Maryland Trounced by G. W., 12 to 1

Colonials Produce Batting Punch in Gaining Sixth Victory

George Washington University batting strength plus an inept Western Maryland defense combined to produce the Colonials' sixth victory of the current season yesterday on the Ellipse, 12 to 1.

In winning, G. W. flashed some of its best form of the season as it hopped on the offerings of two Green Terror pitchers for ten hits and took advantage of eight Western Maryland errors to gain its triumph.

Four big George Washington runs in the fourth inning were sufficient in themselves for victory. Two runs came across when Cook, starting pitcher for the visitors, uncorked a wild pitch with men on second and third. The Colonials added their final markers of the inning when Shortstop Strum committed the first of his two errors while a pair of George Washington runners dented the plate.

Third 'Angel' to Invade Arena Tonight; Meets Nanjo Singh

Olaf Svendson, One of Pfeffer's Performers, Claims to Be Uglier Than Other 'Angels'

Promoter Joe Turner will trot out his latest wrestling "angel" tonight at his W street arena when he presents Olaf (The Swedish Angel) Svendson in the main dramatic offering against Nanjo Singh, the old Cobra Clutch artist

Olaf, who has been preceded by The French Angel and The Irish Angel, is a 6-foot 2-inch 235-pound groan artist and claims to be uglier than both his rivals together. Furthermore, Olaf says phooey to Nanjo and his clutch, that he'll break it like so much egg shells.

Angel No. 3

Singh and Olaf, who is one of Jack Pfeffer's performers, headline a card that brings out another alleged Hindu wrestler—a little invention of Pfeffer known as Zim Zam Zum. Zim will make threatening gestures at Pat Corrigan in the semifinal.

The preliminaries, beginning at 8:30 p. m., bring out Wladyslaw Talun against Andy Meixner, Benny Rosen against Angelo Martini and Kola Kwariani against Juan Alaguivel.

Brann's Pictor Shows Good Speed in Preakness Workout

Dit, Andy K, Royal Man Also Drill

Challenger Colt Runs Three-Eighths In 0:35; Mrs. Harrison Wins Race

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—While most of the Preakness entries were on the track this morning, only four worked out. Dit, third in the Derby; Andy K, the runout king from the Millsdale Stable and Royal Man stepped along for a mile before their trainers waved them down. W. L. Brann's Pictor, a dull performer at Louisville, exhibited good speed while going three-eighths of a mile in 0:35.

The other three were given trials over the mile course but there was nothing sensational about the moves. Dit, with Jockey Buddy Haas in the saddle, went his 8 furlongs in 1:43. Andy K was clocked in 1:45 while Royal Man turned in time of 1:43 4-5. Observers said that Royal Man appeared to be sore in the shoulders.

Anne Harrison, wife of Gentleman Rider John S. Harrison, won the annual Ladies' Day race at Pimlico astride Mrs. D. K. Kerr's Marin Blond, blue-eyed Mrs. Harrison sat in the saddle and coasted to a four and a half length victory over Judy Johnson, feminine trainer, riding Veritas

Sara Bosley, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Bosley, Maryland horsewoman and trainer, was third, astride Strolling On. Miss Bosley won the race in 1938.

Fourth place went to Mildred Hunt, whose mount, Regal Frolic, ran away before Happy Gordon got the horses to the post. Miss Hunt couldn't stop Regal Frolic and he galloped half a mile before the race began.

Afred G. Vanderbilt, president of the Jockey Club, awarded the trophy, handsome piece of silver plate, to Mrs. Harrison.

Jockeys Fred Smith and Lester Balaski, slated to repeat on their Derby mounts in the Preakness, arrived from Louisville. Which reminds us that Trainer Bill Hurley announced that Smith's performance on Bimelech in the Derby was altogether sastisfactory and that he would again pilot the Bradley colt on Saturday.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Howard, owner of Mioland, Preakness candidate, will arrive from Kentucky on Friday. Since watching their colt place fourth in the sixty-sixth running of the Derby, the Howards have spent several days visiting the breeding farms in the famed blue grass region.

Horses to Watch At Pimlico Track

†W. F. Hitt entry. ‡P. H. Faulconer entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN THRUSH (Hitt entry), $5.10, $2.80, $2.80; ICE WATER, $3.00, $4.00; SUN TRIAD (Hitt entry), $2.80.
SUN THRUSH assumed command at once and was hard ridden to end to hold ICE WATER safe. ICE WATER was knocked back soon after start, came to inside and withstood long drive gamely. SUN TRIAD forced pace of stablemate while rated and weakened in closing test. FANTASTICAL raced forwardly but greenly, swerving repeatedly in stretch run.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:38. Off 2:39. Winner, Howe Stable's b. c. (3), by Grandace—Gayoso. Trained by P. M. Burch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRANDEE, $8.10, $5.60, $4.00; TALENT, $10.40, $6.50; FOXFLAME, $5.20.
GRANDEE, slow to begin, improved position gradually on outside, took command in stretch and continued willingly under strong handling. TALENT was close up from start, came to inside entering stretch and was gaining on winner at close. FOXFLAME was rated behind HIGHOLA'S pace for half, took brief lead nearing stretch and held on gamely under intermittent punishment. TRYSTATE was messed about going to backstretch, came wide for racing room and closed with rush.

Daily Double, SUN THRUSH and GRANDEE, Paid $33.10

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:04½. Off 3:06½. Winner, Mrs. A. White's b. g. (7), by Judge Hay—Jenny Dean. Trained by A. White. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:52⅘. (15 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAY DEAN, $9.80, $5.40, $3.50; DRINTHORN, $7.10, $5.50; VALPUISEAUX, $4.00.
BAY DEAN went to front at once, continued willingly when challenged by STRAW BOSS, opened a long lead when latter fell, and was eased up at end. DRINTHORN raced around mainly, made bad landing at ninth fence, almost fell on flat and was tiring under pressure at end. VALPUISEAUX, badly outrun for mile, closed willingly under intermittent punishment. BROADSIDE KING was held safe throughout. STRAW BOSS was forcing pace when he fell at eleventh fence.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40½. Off 3:41½. Winner, J. A. Manfuso's ch. g. (5), by Bud Lerner—Marine Blue. Trained by D. K. Kerr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:56⅖.

LATERAL PASS	(Reilly)	109	2	2	6¹½	7½	8	8	8	68.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED JACK, $4.70, $3.30, $2.40; TWO ACES, $7.00, $3.50; EASTER HOLIDAY, $2.60.
RED JACK went to front in opening furlong, was hard ridden while racing with EASTER HOLIDAY and withstood long drive to end. TWO ACES, allowed to settle into stride and a trailer for a half, came around field to close with bold rush and just missed getting up. EASTER HOLIDAY was sent to leader on backstretch, forced good pace and tired in closing sixteenth. Jockey Hamer's claim of foul against winner was not allowed. SISTAUR was prominent throughout but could not threaten seriously.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,300. The Riderwood Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:20. Off 4:21½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's b. g. (3), by Carlaris—Edina. Trained by J. Serio, Jr. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12¼.

STAR STREWN	(Obert)	108	4	6	6	6	6	6	6	101.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLYDE TOLSON, $22.20, $7.10, $3.20; PASS OUT, $3.60, $2.60; ABRASION, $2.40.
CLYDE TOLSON saved ground while close up in early stages, came to outside for final drive and closed with bold rush after being shaken up. PASS OUT withstood early challenges of ABRASION while setting pace, but could not resist winner while under pressure. ABRASION raced forwardly and wide and faltered in final 50 yards.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $20,000 added. The Dixie Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:50½. Off 4:52. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Abel's ch. g. (6), by High Cloud—Honey Pot. Trained by A. J. Abel. Net value to winner, $18,250; second, $3,000; third, $2,000; fourth, $1,000. Time, 1:58⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
HONEY CLOUD	(Mora)	115	6	1	1½	1h	1nk	1½	1nk	$6.60

OLYMPUS	(Lemmons)	114	4	2	2¹	4¹	7	7	7	23.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HONEY CLOUD, $15.20, $6.80, $4.40; FILISTEO, $13.20, $7.50; AETHELWOLD, $4.90.
HONEY CLOUD, first away, was under slight restraint while setting pace accompanied by OLYMPUS and AETHELWOLD, bore out while racing with latter under pressure through stretch and held on gamely. FILISTEO lacked early speed, saved ground entering stretch to improve position and fought it out willingly. AETHELWOLD bolted to outside fence directly after break, was pulled up and then sent to contention under hustling tactics, challenged by OLYMPUS turning into backstretch, forced pace, was slightly bothered by winner in midstretch and weakened right at end. ISOLATOR could not keep up early, made bold move leaving backstretch and tired. BELAY worked way to contention after a half and faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:25. Off 5:25½. Winner, Mrs. C. S. Bromley's ch. g. (6), by Genie—Sunayr. Trained by L. P. Harlan. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

PLAY GOLD	(Woolf)	117	1	1	1½	1nk	2nk	6¹½	6	6.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNPHANTOM, $8.80, $5.60, $3.10; GREEDAN, $6.90, $3.80; BROWN KNIGHT, $4.10.
SUNPHANTOM, steadied along in first flight, responded gamely when placed to drive, raced PLAY GOLD into submission, ran out badly and finished gamely under drive. GREEDAN followed SUNPHANTOM out entering stretch and could not make up ground thereafter while under punishment. BROWN KNIGHT lacked early speed and came with good energy at close. FELSUN forced pace for half and faltered.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:51½. Off 5:52½. Winner, Mrs. A. Kelly's b. g. (3), by Chicaro—Ann Wilson. Trained by A. Kelly. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOTACHE, $9.70, $5.20, $4.10; GRAEME PARK, $11.80, $8.40; HATTERAS LIGHT, $7.80.
TOTACHE, allowed to settle into best stride, improved position gradually on outside, disposed of GRAEME PARK and drew out in final stages. GRAEME PARK moved up with rush leaving backstretch to race POMPEY'S FOLLY into defeat and closed willingly, but was no match for winner. HATTERAS LIGHT was hard ridden and had no excuses. SUN KIT stopped.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

If Pictor should turn a form flip-flop and win the Preakness, the boys over to the Brann barn will drink beer. When Challendon won last year, Owner Brann sent a case of champagne over to the stable help. Last fall, before the match race between Challedon and Kayak II, the stable gang told Trainer Lou Schaefer to tell the boss that "if our horse wins to send over beer. We don't do so good on wine." So if Pictor gets home, it will be beer and more beer for the boys behind the scenes. A prominent owner was heard to say, "my horse is a bit on the small side. He's only 14 hands and some 6 inches." Now a hand is 4 inches, so the horse he was referring to is at least 15 hands. Trainer Roy Waldron revealed late yesterday afternoon that Gallahadion, the Derby winner would appear on the racing strip tomorrow and would be worked an easy mile. The victory of Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance in the Survivor Stakes only tended to further the wide speculation over Saturday's Preakness. The Widener colt in making his score over three other good 3-year-olds also made his 1940 debut, his last appearance under silks being at Laurel in October. Most significant aspect of his victory was that he displayed considerably more early foot than he did as a juvenile and Jockey E. Mower stated that a tendency of lugging in last year has apparently been completely corrected. Post time for the first race on Preakness Day is 1:45 p. m. (E.S.T.) and the daily double will close at 1:30 p. m. The steeplechase will be the first race on the program in order that the overflow crowd expected in the infield will be free from any danger occasioned by a loose steeplechase horse.

Confucius say: Things are tough but I'll take $2 worth of Grandiflora. BILL.

First race—See See raced once last year as a 2-year-old for C. F. Hockley and received strong support in the betting racing behind Sun Mixa, and Madam Carpet. She is reported fit and should be able to whip these maidens. Plot has shown promise in late races and figures best of the others. Cheer Me had early speed in his race last week; he may stick it out for show.

Second race—Chalotaur took the top when pitted against medium-grade platers here last but stopped when put to a drive. Meeting cheaper company here, she should last to garner the verdict. Hustle Home receives a good figure off her recent third to Count Tetrarch. Elamp may show good effort.

Third Race—Budos turned a creditable performance when making his first start of the season last week. He meets a field he should beat in this number. Lone Gallant raced well over the jumps and on the flat last year and if fit will be the chief contender. Swimalong can better a poor recent race.

Fourth race—Trout Stream showed little on a muddy track last start but in her previous race at Havre, she turned back a shifty field of platers in fast time. Grandiflora was second to Alsang in her only start this spring and will be the one to beat. Riotous is in form and fit.

Fifth race—Raise Up was an easy winner over allowance performers in her last race at Havre. She is well placed in this event and should repeat. Mistassini is a highly regarded miss from the Brandywine Stable, making her first start. Damaged Goods was considered good enough to send after the Oaks and merits consideration.

Sixth race—Lady Maryland has been slow to come to hand but her recent fourth to Battle Jack in the Jennings gives her the call in this field, comprised mostly of young fillies. Rehearsal had the conditioner she needed last start and is reported training well for this race. Torchlight, a recent winner, would be dangerous in the mud.

Seventh race — Count Tetrarch won his last and has been consistently close in late races. The main contention appears to be Sure Miss. This filly has been unable to turn back to the class displayed in last year's races and figures to bow to The Count. Saranite beat a good field last week and should be a factor.

Eighth race—Light Chatter didn't care for the muddy track in her last race but previously ran third a length behind Room Service and Autumnquest. Fire Ball ran a head behind Count Tetrarch last race and might be the one to beat. Unfailing, winner of his last two, rates a good chance.

Best bet—Lady Maryland.

Sassy Lady Wins At Narragansett

Pawtucket, R. I., May 8 (AP).—Running back to the form which brought her three consecutive victories in Florida late in the winter, W. J. McCune's Sassy Lady today won the $1,200 Olneyville Handicap, featured six furlong sprint at Narragansett Park.

Her time was 1:11 1-5, equalling the best time of the meeting.

A neck back of the Flying Heels filly was the Lemar Stock Farm's Mar Le, with W. U. Ridenour's Moncarine third and Mrs. Emil Denmark's Prairie Dog a nose farther back.

Ouch Takes Jamaica Allowance

Lightly Campaigned Filly Scores Easily Over 6 Opponents

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Race Track, May 8.—Ouch, lightly campaigned daughter of Sting, from M. Van Beuren's barn, whipped six other 3-year-old fillies in Jamaica's 6-furlong allowance feature today.

With Alfred Robertson in the saddle, Ouch chalked up her second straight triumph in three starts this season after running only three times in 1939. Of that splendid record, she was the favorite of the crowd of 10,432, paying $5.80 for a $2 win mutuel.

Robertson gave the Andy Shuttinger-trained filly a well judged ride. With the Falaise Stable's Boola Brock cutting out the pace, Robby dropped Ouch into second place and rated her there to the top of the stretch. She caught Boola Brock at the furlong pole and drew away to win by 1½ lengths. Boola Brock held on gamely to beat the fast closing Jessie Gladys out of runner-up honors by a half length.

The handicappers figured Pistol Pete would win the fourth and he didn't disappoint, scoring by a length and a half over six other maiden 3-year-olds and upward to pay $4.30 for $3. Making his first start of the year, the Falaise Stable 3-year-old broke second back of Where And When, ran there to the stretch and then bounded to the front to win going away. Where And When had no trouble taking runner-up honors by six lengths over Designation, an outsider.

Steel Buying Gains, Speeds Ingot Output

Production Advances 3.5 Per Cent, Reports Iron Age in Forecast

New York, May 8.—The biggest expansion in steel buying thus far in the year resulted in a fast rise in ingot production schedules and pronounced strength in scrap markets this week, Iron Age said today.

Ingot output advanced 3.5 points to 66½ per cent of the industry's capacity, the review said. The fourth consecutive advance carried the Iron Age scrap composite up 37 cents to $16.75.

The magazine said the improvement in operations and orders was due primarily to three factors:

"Specifications received by the mills against recent low-priced commitments for sheets and strip, a good volume of export tonnage, and related seasonal orders for some products.

"Steel companies are insisting that their customers who obtained blanket coverages on sheets and strip at the recent low prices shall specify in full in time for completion and shipment of the orders by June 30. . . . If all the outstanding tonnage, which probably amounts to several hundred thousand tons, is specified in full, sheet and strip mill operations during June will be at capacity, but this will in all probability be followed by a let-down in midsummer.

"While the outlook is therefore moderately good for the remainder of this quarter at least, domestic steel business needs the stimulus of greater activity in building construction and railroad equipment buying."

200,000 Pounds Of Tobacco Sold On Opening Day

Approximately 200,000 pounds of tobacco were sold Tuesday in the opening of the 1940 marketing season at auctions in Upper Marlboro, Hughesville, La Platta and Waldorf, the United States Agricultural Marketing Service reported yesterday.

Average prices were slightly higher on the majority of qualities with fair dark dull, fair and low tips, and granulating seconds selling from $2 to $7.50 per hundred higher, as compared with average prices the last week of sales in 1939. Compared with the opening week last season, all qualities were higher with increases ranging from $3 to $11 per hundred. Individual prices on the majority of sales ranged from $4 to $38 per hundred.

Average prices per 100 pounds by quality were as follows:

C. & O. Lines Order 100 Flat Cars

Cleveland, May 8 (AP).—Chesapeake & Ohio Railway today ordered 100 flat cars from Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., Michigan City, Ind.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Hogs sold generally 10 cents higher today, but lost part of the advance in late trade. Slightly curtailed receipts helped halt the recent decline in cattle prices, but wooled and clipped lambs were barely steady. Hog top of $6.10 was paid freely and best light loins in the wholesale dressed market were steady after two sessions in which they lost 2 cents a pound. Cattle receipts in the open market were 1,000 less than advance estimates and included a liberal supply of medium weight and weighty steers. A few lamb sales were barely steady, good woolskins selling at 10.25 and clippers from 9.00 to 9.25.

(U. S. Dept. Agr.)—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 10,000; total, 14,500; market opened generally 10 higher than Tuesday's average; closing slow with part of advance lost, but bulk hogs sold on around 10 higher basis, top, 6.10, paid freely; bulk good and choice, 180-270 lbs., 5.80@6.00; 270-350 lbs., 5.50@5.85; sows around 10 higher; good, 400-550 lbs., mostly 4.75@5.10; smooth lightweights up to 5.25@5.40.

SALABLE CATTLE — Receipts, 3,000; salable calves, receipts, 1,000; recent decline stopped and steer trade steady to strong; lower grades and yearlings show most strength; medium weight and weighty steers in very liberal supply, but attracting more interest on both local and outside account; feeders competing with killers on light cattle selling at 9.50 downward; early top fed steers, 11.90; several loads, 11.25@11.50; numerous loads with weight, 10.25@11.00; sizable supply light steers and yearlings sold at 10.00 down, with common killers 8.00@8.75; heifers steady, best, 10.50; both heifers and cows in very light supply; latter class fully to steady; bulls weak to 15 lower; outside on weighty sausage offerings, 7.15; vealers firm at 11.00@11.50; few selects, 11.75.

SALABLE SHEEP—Receipts, 1,500; total, 5,500. Late Tuesday: Fat lambs weak, spots 10 lower; best handyweight woolskins, 10.40; several decks light and handyweight clippers, 9.40, with fed Texas, 8.75; fat sheep 50 lower for week; best lightweight clipped ewes, 4.00. Today's trade: Few sales wooled and clipped lambs barely steady, with good woolskins at 10.25 and clippers at 9.00@9.25; choice wooled lambs held higher; spring lambs around steady; seven decks 88-lb. California springers, 11.25, with one deck at 11.35; fat sheep scarce, uneven; mostly steady.

Foreign Markets

London, May 8 (AP).—British government bonds scored fresh gains today but supporters waned later as the security market waited for Parliamentary debate on the war. While the gilt-edged list closed with advances, most revisions elsewhere were downward. Industrials were distinctly heavy and oils tended lower, despite a partial recovery in recently hard-pressed Royal Dutch. Kaffirs, generally higher, were chief exceptions to the trend. Junior rail issues weakened. Most European bonds held steady.

Paris.—A weak undertone persisted in the bourse today. Traders cited Dutch mobilization plans and general uncertainty over possible war developments as major depressants. The dollar guaranteed rente, assisted by the fall of the franc in New York, rose 180 centimes. Ordinary rentes ended 20 centimes lower to 10 higher.

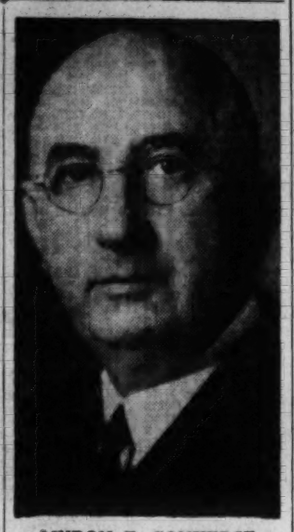
Liverpool.—Cotton futures lost 6 to 7 points today. Declining Far Eastern markets and political news checked support.

Bankers View Personal Thrift As Surest Security Guaranty

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, May 8.—The necessity for thrift as the surest protection to the individual was intermingled today with a general economic discussion of the railroad's future at the opening sessions of the twentieth anniversary conference of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.



MYRON F. CONVERSE

A number of notables in industrial and financial affairs addressed the conference, which will close Friday with the election of officers. Myron F. Converse, of Worcester, Mass., is scheduled to be elected president, succeeding Fred F. Lawrence.

Among the speakers today were Lawrence, Henry Bruere, president of the Bowrey Savings Bank, New York; Charles C. Handy, president of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts; William M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacic Railroad; Samuel O. Dunn, editor of Railway Age; Matthew S. Sloan, president of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railway; George R. Beach, president fo the New Jersey Savings Banks Association.

Begun 20 Years Ago

Handy reminded delegates that the Mutual Bankers Association was born in Boston 20 years ago and now represents institutions with some $10,000,000,000 in deposits distributed among 15,500,000 accounts throughout the country.

Bruere contended that thrift alone is the surest protection of the individual, adding:

"Savings bank managers, of course, are interested in all of the economic questions and activities of the country that affects the welfare of their constituents. They seek light upon such important subjects as how business may be revived, how employment may be increased, and how thrift may be encouraged. But we are more directly and nationally concerned with policies and conditions that affect the ability of savings banks to invest the funds of their depositors wisely, with a suitable return in those very limited and properly restricted fields of investment to which strict State laws confine savings bank investments."

"Thus we are concerned with the problem of railway solvency and earning power. Each year for many years we have considered this question, because, in good times, as well as in bad, there always are important problems confronting so great and fundamental an industry as the American railways. We have seen railway earnings decline in part due to the depression, in part due to sharp competition by specially favored new forms of transportation, such as motor trucks, the automobile, and Government-sponsored inland waterway barge lines, and, more recently, the airplane."

Equal Regulation Urged

"We do not complain of the development of these new conveniences which science and public policy have made available to the shipper and the traveler. But it is wise, as far as practicable, to make the public regulation of all forms of transportation equal.

Lawrence also stressed the individual and national importance of thrift.

"A United States Senator, within the year," he said, "uttered on the floor of that tribunal these challenging words: 'In my opinion the great masses of the American people can never again save, and any attempt on their part to save will break down our economy,'" he said.

"We might be less concerned over such extravagant utterances if they remain in the realm of theory, or if human nature were other than what it is. Man, unfortunately, is prone to believe what he wishes to believe. No miser ever yet won a popularity contest. Spending, public and private, is inherently alluring."

Sloan emphasized the need for a country-wide program covering the major carriers by rail, highway and water. "We have every transportation agency and vehicle known to man. We have been engaging in transport for hire—highway carriers, water carriers, railroads, pipelines and air carriers, but in so far as a national transportation policy exists at all, it is a policy of treating each agency of transportation differently.

Subsidies Are Cited

"Some carriers the Government subsidizes and then regulates—not at all—or, at most, in a very lax manner, permitting them to operate as they please and to make any charge for their service that their fancy may dictate. One type of carrier alone—the railroad—has been subjected to actual regulation, required to operate under restrictions developed during the half-century that has elapsed since regulation was instituted; until in some respects these regulations represent almost a straightjacket."

The keynote of maintaining and extending private enterprise was sounded by Jeffers.

"Stripped down to the prime essential," he said, "the basic reason for the existence of any business enterprise is to serve humanity, to supply the needs of the people, to aid in their well-being and comfort—a fact sometimes pushed into the background and apparently forgotten. A business enterprise, to justify itself, must serve this basic purpose. But it is not a charitable institution and, therefore, those whose money makes its conduct possible are entitled to have that money protected and productive.

"Taxes almost have reached the stratosphere. New laws and regulations have been so multiplied that business is almost punch drunk and has substituted for its wanted attitude of confident offense an attitude of weak defense against more punishment.

"We are so stressing reform that we are losing sight of the importance of recovery. Let's recover first and we will have more strength to take on reform."

Limestone Sales

The Bureau of Mines said yesterday that the limestone industry in the Bedford-Bloomington district in Indiana sold 5,275,120 cubic feet of construction stone, valued at $4,100,223 during 1939. This compared with 4,151,910 cubic feet, valued at $3,225,585 in 1938.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 8 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Trade was very slow in the Boston wool market today. A few mills were buying small quantities of wool to cover urgent needs, but they were not inclined to anticipate future requirements. Prices were showing very little change. Sales of 12-months' Texas wools were closed at 80@85 cents, scoured basis. Eight-months' Texas wools were moved at prices ranging 74@75 cents, scoured basis.

McKesson's Profits Rise, Trustee Says

American & Foreign Power, I. T. T. Report Annual Revenues

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—A consolidated statement of income and profit and loss of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., based on present capitalization, indicated 1939 earnings of $1,600,000 applicable to the 1,282,983 shares of common stock, William J. Wardall, trustee, announced today.

Net profit before debenture interest of $4,281,470, Wardall asserted, was more than twice the net profit for 1938, although net sales increased only 1.4 per cent. For the first quarter this year the net profit was placed at $963,186 against $638,50[illegible] in the previous year.

American & Foreign Power

American & Foreign Power Co. reported today for 1939 consolidated income, after interest and other charges and after exchange adjustments, of $4,668,023, compared with $3,935,390 in 1938.

In 1939 the company paid off $4,500,000 on its notes due to banks and Electric Bond & Share and in January, this year, paid an additional $2,000,000, reducing the total notes outstanding to $20,000,000.

International Telephone

The International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation reported 1939 consolidated net income of $4,894,491, equal to 76 cents a share on the capital stock. Net income for 1938 was $6,889,846, or $1.08 a share. The accounts of Spanish, German and Polish subsidiaries were not included in the earnings figures for either year.

United Wall Paper

United Wall Paper Factories, Inc., after providing for all charges including bond interest and federal taxes, reported net earnings of $224,817, as of March 31, for the first nine months of their fiscal year. A. J. Browning, president, said these exceed similar earnings for any corresponding period during the last ten years. For the same period a year ago a net loss of $22,420 was reported.

Decca Records

Decca Records, Inc., reports net profit for the first quarter ended March 31, after estimated taxes, of $113,461, equivalent to 30 cents per share. Sales for the quarter totaled $1,258,922, an increase of 35 per cent from sales for the similar period of 1939.

Cerro de Pasco Copper

Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation earned net profit in the first quarter of about $965,900 after all charges including depletion, equal to 86 cents a capital share, E. H. Clark told stockholders at the annual meeting. This compared with $533,600, or 48 cents, in the first 1939 quarter.

Newmont Mining

Directors of Newmont Mining Corporation declared a stock dividend of one share for each share held, payable June 28 to holders of record May 31, plus the usual quarterly dividend of 50 cents cash, payable June 17 to record May 31.

J. C. Penney Stores

J. C. Penney Co reported April sales decreased to $21,180,554 from $21,313,939 in April last year, a decline of .6 of 1 per cent. Sales for the first four months of the year totaled $76,973,516, a gain of 8.1 per cent from $71,187,254 in the corresponding 1939 period. The April comparison with last year was adversely affected by the early Easter this year.

Grains Uneven, Gain Strength To Close High

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 8.—Tension in Europe threw the grain trade into confusion again today, producing rapid and at times violent price fluctuations. The final bell caught wheat more than a cent higher, corn almost 2 cents up at the best level since 1937, and other grains mostly fractionally higher.

At one time wheat was about a cent net lower, with July contracts the lowest since April 8. However, prices rallied as much as 2⅜ cents from these lows and closed ½@1⅜ higher than yesterday, with May 1.06@1.06⅛, July 1.05@1.04⅞. Corn closed 1⅜@1⅞ higher, May 66⅝, July 67¼@67⅜; oats ⅝ up; rye ¾@1 higher, and lard 2@7 higher.

Frank Kenworthy, general auditor of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., will describe a comptroller's duty today at the regular meeting of the auditors section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at the Lee Sherator Hotel.

William B. Tubbs, general accountant of the company, will be a guest, W. F. Orrison, jr., chairman of the publicity committee of the organization, announced.

Chicago and Eastern Directors Are Named

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Members of the new board of directors of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad, under terms of the reorganization approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal District Court were announced today by Kenneth D. Steere, chairman of the board of the old company.

Three members were named by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, five by Steere and four by Carroll M. Shanks, of the Prudential Insurance Company, chairman of the protective committee for the general mortgage 5 per cent bonds now outstanding.

Appointees of the RFC were Roger C. Hyatt, member of the old board; Frank O. Watts, of St. Louis, and John W. Barriger 3d, chief examiner, Railroad Division, RFC.

Steere's appointees were Charles T. O'Neal, president of the old company; Will H. Hays, Joseph B. Graham, Robert C. Graham and himself.

New York Exchange Clamps Curb on Other-Market Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8—Despite protests from smaller exchanges, the New York Stock Exchange plans to enforce gradually a rule forbidding members from making markets in its listed securities on other exchanges, a spokesman for the exchange said today.

The committee on member firms, it was said, is working to bring about eventual elimination of so-called "multiple" dealings by member houses on outside exchanges under authority given by the board of governors two months ago.

The rule, the spokesman explained, is aimed at transactions where members use New York Stock Exchange quotations as a basis for making a market in other cities and to divert business from the Wall street market.

On the order of customers, however, member firms still would be permitted to execute transactions on other exchanges. Mainly affected, it was noted, are stocks in which member houses act as specialists on other exchanges.

Announcement of the plans to enforce the old rule brought immediate protests from some of the smaller exchanges, both to the New York exchange itself and to Federal authorities at Washington.

The situation was brought to a head by the contraction of trading which intensified the struggle for business among the various markets.

Brokers said the competition was increased by State tax handicaps for the New York Exchange and the SEC program which has permitted trading on other exchanges in a number of important stocks whose primary market is in New York.

Irregular Course Marks Light Trading; Debate in Commons Brings Wariness; Aviations and Metals Gain Higher Levels

New York, May 8.—The stock market again held to its irregular course today in light trading. Sterling sank to another new low, Government bonds were steady, Danish bonds recovered while the balance of foreign issues were soft and there were rallies in wheat and cotton.

The center of interest was British Parliament. Financial circles paid more attention to the progress of the debate than to domestic happenings or news of business, and the tendency was to hug the sidelines.

Stocks were somewhat higher during the morning hours, but had some difficulty holding their lead in the afternoon, and the close showed values virtually unchanged, the composite average being up 0.03 point.

Aviations In Lead

Aviations were in the lead, followed by other war stocks, such as the metals. The steels gave up an early advance and there was some profit taking in the shipping and paper divisions. There was a better tone in the chemicals.

Eastern Air Lines was a feature, the common and rights going to new highs for this year and the former closing up nearly 2 points. United Aircraft was up about a point and there was activity in Curtiss-Wright and Lockheed.

Business news was mixed. A slight drop of 0.5 per cent in electrical output was reported for last week. The industry is still 10.3 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Oil Industry Stronger

In the oil industry there was a substantial reduction in crude output and a moderate one in refinery operations but only a small volume on gasoline withdrawals, indicating that operations still are high.

The war and the debate in Commons took another heavy toll in the Allied currencies, sterling sinking to $3.31⅞, its lowest point since December 30, 1932. It closed at $3.32½, off 4¾ cents. The French franc gave up another 2¾ points.

American Bonds Steady

Much irregularity continues to prevail in the foreign dollar department of the listed bond market, but American issues were generally steady today. Trading in foreign issues contributed little.

Norwegian and Danish bonds were marked upward 1 to 3 points on modest dealings, apparently on the theory that peace outweighs the Nazi occupation.

United States Treasury bonds held close to previous levels, the small fractional variations indicating little more than aloofness. Speculative carrier bonds reflected mild demand.

Druggists Note Fight Against D. C. Trade Act

The Tydings-Miller Fair Trade Act, passed by Congress and adopted by 44 States under its enabling provisions, is having its greatest difficulties in the District of Columbia, says the American Druggist Magazine.

Price cutting and loss leader selling are in active progress in the District, the American Druggist notes, with the declaration the District of Columbia is proving "a harder nut for fair trade to crack than the country at large."

Last month, says the article, Senator Tydings almost maneuvered the act into law for the District. The bill already has been passed by the House of Representatives.

To forestall a Presidential veto, Senator Tydings has been reported as contemplating having the bill attached as a rider to some other legislation which is sure of Presidential approval.

Exchange Markets

New York, May 8 (AP).—The free British pound sterling tumbled around 5 cents early today to the lowest price since late in 1932 while foreign money dealers tensely followed further parliamentary debate in England over conduct of the war.

Support stiffened a bit toward noon and the net loss was cut to around 3½ cents in terms of the dollar.

The French franc reached another historic low with a loss of about .02 of a cent. The belga slumped 1-30 of a cent to a bottom for the year, and the Swiss franc dipped .00½ of a cent.

The Canadian dollar trailed after sterling with a drop of ¾ of a cent to 82⅝ United States cents. The guilder, however, improved a shade, but hovered around the level at which the Dutch exchange control has supported the market.

Late rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for U. S. dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market, 17⅞ per cent discount, or $2.37½ U. S. cents.

Cotton Checks 5-Day Decline; Closes With Gains

New York, May 8 (AP).—The cotton futures market checked a five-day losing streak today. July was the only month to give ground and it was minor. Other deliveries were unchanged to 6 higher.

Speculative demand was encouraged by the belief heavy foreign selling of recent sessions and consequent declines had improved the market's technical position.

Cottonseed Oil

Short covering and new investment buying helped cottonseed oil futures partially to overcome early declines today. Final prices were 3 points lower to 7 higher. Buying was associated with firmness in grains. May lagged when issuance of 10 delivery notices resulted in moderate liquidation. Sales totaled 69 lots; May, 6.77 bid; July, 6.88 bid; September, 6.94 bid; October, 6.96; December, 6.99 bid. Crude oil was priced nominally at 5¾ to 6 cents a pound in the Southeast, 5¼ to 5¾ in the valley and 5½ to 5¾ in Texas.

Credit Suisse Opens in U.S.

Sugar Imports Up

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that American sugar imports under the quota system totaled 1,459,962 short tons, raw value, during the first four months of this year. Imports during the corresponding period last year totaled 1,090,730 short tons.

G. M. C. April Sales Soar To Year's High

Consumer Purchases Up a Third From 1939 Levels

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—General Motors Corp. today reported sales of cars and trucks to consumers in the United States in April increased to 183,431 units, highest since April, 1937, from 174,625 in March and 132,612 in April last year.

Sales to consumers for the first four months of the year amounted to 602,789, a new high record against 446,790 in the corresponding 1939 months.

Sales to U. S. dealers last month totaled 183,900 units, against 181,066 in March and 126,275 a year ago. Sales to U. S. dealers for the first four months of 690,349 units also established a new high for such period, and compared with 501,872 last year.

Total April sales to dealers in the U. S. and Canada, plus overseas shipments amounted to 196,747 units, compared with 193,622 in March and 142,002 last year.

Total sales to dealers in the U. S. and Canada, plus overseas shipments in the first four months were 745,929 units, against 573,059 in the like 1939 period.

Buick division reported retail sales of new cars during April totaled 28,652 compared with 24,402 in March and 21,343 in April last year. Oldsmobile's retail sales were 20,311 compared with 14,598 during the comparable period a year ago.

Nash motors reported retail sales of 1,617 units in the last 10 days of April compared with 1,250 during the preceding 10 days.

Variety Chains Report Increase

First-quarter business of the eight largest variety chain systems reached record levels, about 4 per cent higher than in 1939 after adjustment made for the change in the date of Easter, according to Poor's Stock Reports. This record is particularly encouraging in view of the fact that the rate of gain was virtually the same as during the closing months of 1939.

Know Your Dogs—No. 57 of a Series

By George Berner

ENGLISH TOY SPANIEL

Originated probably in China or Japan and imported into England during Queen Elizabeth's reign. They were once used in hunting but today they are chiefly pets and make ideal ones, having been royalty's favorites for centuries. (Photo courtesy Dog World) hits and faced only 32 men as his mates responded to the occasion with brilliant and near-flawless support.

Hoyas' Powers Shuts Out Md., 5-0

Only a mediocre performer last year when touted as a great sophomore, Powers suddenly came into his own. Whereas last year he could not locate the plate with a compass, Powers yesterday walked only one batter, cleverly stayed ahead on the court and embellished his performance with six timely strikeouts.

In the first, fourth, fifth and eighth innings the lanky junior star turned back the Terrapins in order. Only in one frame—the fifth—did Maryland make more than one hit and then one of the several great Georgetown fielding plays choked off a run.

Western Net Team Noses Out Wilson

By the narrow margin of one match, Western High won its opening engagement in the Interhigh Tennis League, yesterday, beating Woodrow Wilson, 4—3, at Pierce Mill courts.

The teams split even in doubles, but Western took its victory with a 3—2 edge in the singles.

Singles—Smith (Western) defeated Thorpe, 6—1, 6—4; Gillespie (Western) defeated Pratt, 6—1, 6—1; Martin (Wilson) defeated Lincoln, 6—2, 6—2; Perry (Wilson) defeated Kerr, 6—1, 6—4; Tanner (Western) defeated Pollit, 6—0, 6—2.

Doubles—Smith-Gillespie (Western) defeated Martin-Thorpe, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4; Perry-Pratt (Wilson) defeated Lincoln-Hackney, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

enth, when Mike Higgins singled, Birdie Tebbetts doubled and Pinch-Hitter Pete Fox hit safely.

Before retiring, Bagby packed the bases by giving Bruce Campbell a single and passing Chuck Gehringer.

Wilson put down that uprising by forcing Earl Averill to ground out. In the ninth, after the Tigers registered their final run on two singles and an error, the relief pitcher pulled himself out of his self-made hole by fireballing Greenberg.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

There are few honors to be distributed among the Nats on the basis of yesterday's game, but Zeke Bonura was undeniably the outstanding performer against the White Sox. Man of the Month points are awarded as follows:

To Bonura, five points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, scored two of their runs, and was cheated of a third hit when his long drive in the fourth inning was caught by Taft Wright.

To Jimmy Pofahl, three points, because his two-bagger in the seventh drove in a run and set the stage for what might have been a game-tying rally

To Jimmy Bloodworth, three points, because he drove in a run with a hit, because he stole a base and because he figured in two clever double-plays. The totals:

Jimmy Bloodworth	13	Buddy Lewis	4
Cecil Travis	12	Rick Ferrell	4
Syd Hudson	10	Al Evans	4
George Case	10	Jake Early	3
Zeke Bonura	9	Jimmy Pofahl	3
Gerald Walker	8

Listen! with Slocum

One of the many delightful and beneficial results of the development of American radio broadcasting has been the steady increase in the popularity of dance orchestras. This, in turn, has brought with it increasing numbers of dances throughout the land. The good old District of Columbia has come in for its share, at least. Taking this week's dance music fare as an example, WJSV and the Columbia Broadcasting System contribute to the dancers and dance-minded listeners with the rhythmic tunes of such leading orchestras as Eddie Duchin, Ray Noble, Wayne King, Orrin Tucker, Bill McCune, Johnny Green, Bobby Peters, Harry James, Ted Fio Rito and Larry Funk (known for years for his bands of the thousand melodies). Much in celebration of the growth of dance music on the radio and American dance-mindedness, hand in hand, is today's "Magic Carpet," with suave John Charles Daly, as usual, at the mike. The "Magic Carpet" quizzes those leaders in the field of magic toes, Ethel M. Fistere and her compatriots. Speaking with dance leader Fistere, she was all praises for C., B. S.'s band leaders. "To the music of Eddie Duchin's magic fingers or radio and to the outstanding American dance bands which we enjoy so much on the radio, it has been only a natural development that America has become more music-minded and accordingly more dance-minded. So often I hear people say that they have organized dancing groups as the result of the marvelous dance music they hear on the air each evening. So, really, to radio American dancers must bow and say "Thank you."

OH, BOY, DEPT.—Zorina is going to be up in our studios this afternoon at 2:45 to go on the WJSV air with Jean Abbey. First aid stations have been set up at strategic points in the WJSV hallways to take care of personnel casualties.

Orphans in Love

by Marion White

Blue-eyed Ellen's entire life revolved about Peter Storm and had ever since they were children together in St. Peter's Orphanage. One day when Peter had been out of college three years, they were lazily talking on the lawn of the old Tucker House just across from the orphanage. Peter was saying that he wanted only the best of everything, which he could not possibly have then on his small salary. He wanted to have a place like the Tucker House, the place which had always fascinated Peter and Ellen. They had never seen inside of it and never expected to, for it was locked and deserted. But they were to see it sooner than they dreamed, for when a sudden storm came up, Peter insisted that they seek protection near the house and, because of a banging shutter, even found an unlocked window.

Chapter 3

THE SECOND time she looked, the room was less frightening. Perhaps her eyes had grown accustomed to the gloom, or perhaps this one opened shutter dispelled some of the darkness.

She could see familiar objects—chairs, a table or two, a fireplace. Behind, the wind and rain beat down upon her back, swept over her and forward into the house.

"This is no time to hesitate," Peter insisted. "I'll jump in first, just to drive off the spirits . . ."

Before the words had left his lips he was inside, reaching out for her. A moment later she stood inside the still dark room.

"It's dry, anyway," he said brightly, shutting the window behind her.

"But awfully dark."

"Of course it is. Any house would be dark with green shutters on every window. I'll see if I can open one on the other side. Though there's not much light to let in at present."

Strangely, as she stood in the shadowy gloom and looked about, she was not frightened. Her feeling was rather one of awe, and she held her breath reverently, lest she disturb the ancient peace of this mystical shrine.

Large Room

The room, she noticed, ran the entire depth of the house, with windows on three sides. As Peter opened one of the opposite shutters, comforting details sprang into view. It seemed a "lived-in" room: its occupants might have moved out only a few short months ago, instead of 20 long years. The house was silent and heavy with the oppression of long desertion; dust lay thickly over every piece of furniture and shadows of cobwebs dimmed the molding.

But despite all these, there was a suggestion of comfort and hospitality. The room might easily be quickened to new life.

A fire in the wide grate, daylight peering in through the tall windows, a speedy removal of age-old dust and mold, and good cheer would abide here.

Two massive wing-backed chairs, shrouded in muslin but inviting, nonetheless, flanked the fireplace.

Footstools

Footstools were before them, and beside one a low table, upon which a man would drop his newspaper, or from which he might pick up his pipe. Bookshelves lined the walls on either side, and bright bindings showed beneath the dust.

"Peter," Ellen murmured, "doesn't it seem queer?"

"Queer?"

"Yes. It looks just the way I thought . . . as if it's waiting for someone. Not a soul has lived here for 20 years, and yet it isn't like a deserted house. Things have been cared for and protected . . ."

"There must be a caretaker."

"Where? Have you ever seen anybody on the hill? Have you ever seen any light in the windows?"

Room Detail

"No. But that doesn't mean nobody was here. We weren't watching all the time. Besides, we've been away from St. Peter's for a long time."

As he spoke, a new flare of lightning, startling and revealing as a photographer's flash, brought out every detail of the room in an instant of clarity.

A sharp exclamation burst from Ellen's lips, cutting short her reply. She was staring straight ahead of her, at a long, life-size portrait hanging above the fireplace.

For the moment she knew that her vision had tricked her; she knew that this was no portrait at all but a mirror—a curious, non-conforming sort of mirror.

"Peter!" she cried softly, as she stared in bewilderment. "Look!"

He came over quickly, stood beside her and followed her gaze to the picture. As the room gathered brightness, they watched the features on the canvas take form, and Ellen felt Peter's grasp on her arm tighten as he caught her surprise.

She laughed nervously. "It looks like you, Peter! For a moment I thought it was your picture."

He laughed, too, at such utter absurdity. "You're seeing things!"

"I must be," she agreed tremulously. "I must be."

As they stood before the fireplace, amazed and spell-bound, intermittent flashes of lightning played upon the mysterious portrait, brightening it with import of some miraculous revelation, focusing their attention on every new and intimate detail.

"Imagine me like that!" Peter laughed again, uncertainly. "Look at the clothes!"

Ellen saw the straight stiff collar, almost hidden in the heavy folds of an Ascot scarf, the bright waistcoat, the abundance of chestnut hair growing down into jocular sideburns.

These were indeed the accoutrements of another generation.

Or rather another century. It was quite ridiculous to imagine Peter in such regalia.

"The lightning must have hypnotized me," she admitted. "I guess he'd be about a hundred years old if he were alive today."

"At least a hundred."

Nevertheless, her eyes lingered on the features. The bright, clear gray eyes, smiling at the corners, yet stern in their depths, the long upper lip under a merrily tilting nose, the strong, straight lips, composed in a determination which belied their tenderness, the square, uncompromising jaw, belittled by a roguish dimple in the very center of its chin.

"I still think," Ellen persisted, "if you had the same clothes on, and if you let your hair grow that way you'd look like him."

"Nonsense!" He turned aside abruptly, as if to put the whole matter out of his mind. "Stuff and nonsense!" But a shy excitement lingered on his voice, and his lips were smiling.

He walked about the room, studying other pictures on the wall, peering at the bookshelves, but every few seconds, almost against his will, his gaze would travel back to the portrait over the fireplace, as if he half expected it to vanish in thin air.

Grows Brighter

Now the room was gradually growing brighter. Outside the thunder had settled to a low, far-away grumbling, and the rain beat against the shutters with diminishing force.

The elements were beginning to smile again, as if satisfied that they had served some purpose in forcing these two young people into the Tucker House.

As the dark clouds rolled by, a soft ray of sunlight appeared on the floor, hesitated there a moment, then slowly spread itself over the entire fireplace, moving with deliberate purpose up to the portrait.

For a moment it shone brightly, until the gray eyes on the canvas seemed to come to life, and the lips might have parted in ever so slight a smile of recognition.

Peter moistened his lips, dried by the nervous excitement which the vision had provoked. "Do you suppose he was one of the Tuckers?" he asked, in a bold attempt at nonchalance.

Farm Bureau Chief Opposes Jones Measure

R. E. Short Testifies To Senate Banking Subcommittee

A spokesman for the American Farm Bureau Federation yesterday told a Senate Banking sub-committee that the Jones-Wheeler farm credit bill would open the way for "political interference" with the Federal farm loan system.

R. E. Short, president of the Arkansas federation and a director of the national organization, charged that Secretary Wallace and the Administration favored a "centralized Government credit system, owned, controlled and operated from Washington."

Short urged restoration of the Farm Credit Administration to independent status under a bipartisan board of governors, as provided in a bill introduced by Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa.

Fears Expressed

His organization fears that abolition of the present "cooperative credit system, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled" would create a situation in which a "hard-boiled, banker-minded administration" might later gain control of the farm credit setup, Short said. Such a development might mean the disappearance of the "favorable credit facilities now existing," he added.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, observed that "until this Administration came in most of the Federal Land Banks were controlled by the most reactionary, banker-minded groups."

Bill For Lower Rates

"Here we bring in a bill to try and get farmers lower interest rates and better terms," he continued, "and then your organization comes in and fights it."

Short testified last month before the House Agriculture Committee in opposition to the Jones-Wheeler bill, which provides for lower interest rates on Federal farm loans. Government guarantee of land bank bonds and automatic refinancing of mortgages when borrowers can prove their indebtedness exceeds productive value of their land.

The measure also would forbid deficiency judgments against land bank borrowers and end the present arrangement by which borrowers take 5 per cent of their loans in capital stock of the land banks.

Lieut. Cooper Will Be Buried In Arlington

Services for Lieut. James Cooper, U. S. A., retired, 64, who died Monday at the Soldiers Home Hospital, will be at 11 a. m. today in Fort Myer chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Lieut. Cooper had lived in Washington since 1927. He retired from the Army in 1929 after 30 years of service.

Born in Willow Hill, Ill., Lieut. Cooper enlisted in the Spanish-American War and saw service in Cuba. In the World War he served in the Ordnance Department at the point of embarkation in Newport News, Va.

Surviving are his wife, Rose; a sister, Katherine Loving, of Greenup, Ill., and four children. They are Mrs. Ella Matheson, of Fort Moultrie, S. C.; Mrs. Mary E. Hurst, of Washington, and William and Catherine Cooper, also of Washington.

O'Mahoney Enters Race for Reelection

Casper, Wyo., May 8 (AP).—Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman of the Senate monopoly investigating committee announced today he would seek reelection.

Cecil W. Clark, of Newcastle, announced several weeks ago he would seek the Democratic nomination.

Ends 50 Years Service to Cemetery

Joseph A. Mayhew, who has been closing the gates at Congressional Cemetery for 50 years, will retire

Grave Keeper Is Completing Fiftieth Year

Joseph A. Mayhew, 72, stood in the shade of an oak overlooking the Anacostia River at Congressional Cemetery yesterday. He was seeing again the flow of 50 years—a kaleidoscope of history, tinged with sadness, but overtoned with peace.

To Mayhew the white markers that he will look at tomorrow at the end of a half-century as foreman of the cemetery are milestones to the moving growth of a city in peace and at war.

With the mausoleums to 85 members of Congress, and the score and more of American fighting men, are associations as significant as the developing of the John Philip Sousa Bridge—which the bandsman's grave overlooks.

Buried a Dozen a Day

Unforgettable for the white-haired veteran at the city's oldest cemetery, are the days during the first World War when he was burying daily a dozen victims of the flu epidemic here.

Unforgettable, too, those who came back from a dozen fronts and died as an aftermath. He put them to rest, too.

Without looking at the book in the cemetery office, where the graves can be located by a numbering system, Mayhew can take you to stones bearing the names like Moore, Gessford and Humphreys—former Washington police superintendents. He calls the names like a roll of honor.

Powerful, Splendid Funerals

Those were "powerful, splendid" funerals, Mayhew declared—outstanding in the burial plot's 140-year history—though not surpassing that of Sousa, made unforgettaable by the requiem of the band.

Mayhew, of 1501 E street southeast, has liked his job despite its element of sadness.

"I never could get hard hearted" he explained. "You can't escape some of that—it worries you—although they may be complete strangers. Once I buried a woman, the mother of three small children. For two months after I couldn't sleep for hearing those children crying."

Buried at the cemetery, too, are his father, Basil, who held the same position for 35 years before him; his mother, his wife, a sister, and a brother. He either buried or assisted at the burials of each of them.

But Mayhew is inclined to minimize the sentiment of his job. Instead he prefers to pass back over the years to the day he first started work there, and then look back toward the growing bridge and the no-less eventual future.

Mrs. Clark, Native of D. C., Dies at Home

Mrs. Marion Lutz Clark, daughter of a pioneer District family and active in Presbyterian Church circles, died yesterday at her home, 2219 California street northwest, following a brief illness.

Daughter of the late Francis Asbury and Nellie Galt Lutz, she was educated at Mount Vernon Seminary. She was active in the seminary alumnae association, Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, and on the board of managers of the Presbyterian Home. She was also a member of the Twentieth Century Club.

Mrs. Clark's grandfather, Francis Asbury Lutz, was a founder of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church. She was of the fifth generation of Washington natives.

Services will be held in the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, 1800 N street northwest, Friday at 2 p. m., with private burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, Bruce E. Clark, to whom she was married in 1910; four sisters, Miss Clara A. Lutz, Mrs. Williams F. Lemon, Mrs. Richard W. Bolling and Miss Gertrude Lutz; and a brother, John A. Lutz, all of Washington.
